Cleveland has a Chinaman worth $10,000, who has been divorced from one white woman, and is now being sued by another pale-faced damsel for seduction and breach of promise.

Nine Tailors Make a Man.

The phrase, "It takes nine tailors to make a man," originated many centuries ago. It was known before the time of good Queen Bess, who, one day, on receiving a deputation of eighteen tailors, addressed them: "Good day, gentleman, both." We have heard its origin explained in this way: Once upon a time a homeless orphan had applied for assistance at a fashionable London tailor's, where nine journeymen were employed. The boy's condition stirred the benevolence of the nine, who each gave him 1 shilling. With this slender capital the youth started in the flint business, and in time became very rich, and retired from business. Then, instead of having a coat of arms, he embossed upon his spoons and panels the grateful motto: "Nine tailors made me a man." Here is another version, showing how a whole generation may be led off the right track by a misspelled word: "Nine tailors make a man" is an odd saying, and a good illustration of our statement. To look down on the worthy profession of the cloth-cutter because of such a proverb shows a want of proper instruction. In the olden time when a person died the church bell tolled once for every year the departed had lived. But from the tolling of the bell no one could tell whether the deceased was a man or woman. To satisfy public curiosity, perhaps, on that subject, the sexton, after tolling the age, gave eight quick strokes of the bell if the deceased was a woman, and nine if it was a man, and these quick strokes at the end of the tolling were called "tailers," because they were at the tail end of the whole business. Hence the proverb, "Nine tailers make a man."

What Damp Feet Mean.

Nine-tenths of the more tiresome physical troubles women bring on themselves are due to no more terrible cause than damp feet. Men, for once, are sensible in this respect. They do not habitually tramp round in their slippers, or wear thin slips of leather which are as good a protective against damp as a bit of blotting-paper. One-half the boots and shoes seen in our streets ought to be used exclusively for indoor wear. Outside, and with a climate like ours, they are a splendid example of the way in which people go about literally hunting for a sharp attack of illness.

It is perfectly meet and right that the modern Eve should take a pride in her foot. Well shod, and with a dainty military, and not high, French heel to her boot, it is proper she should be conscious of the charms of youth and compliment. But thin cashmere uppers never make a foot look well. At best they are flimsy hearth-rug wear. Shoes are even more treacherous. A fairly drenching shower of rain, and the spray beats up from the descending drops, wets the stockings through, laying the foundation of any one of a dozen complaints.

Poor Mrs. Candle, the good lady whose curtain lectures so long kept patient Job Candle awake, came to her death, so it stands written, through no more serious a cause than "a pair of thin shoes." For the foundation of a doctor's lucrative practice, nothing better could be recommended than an out-of-doors picnic on a slightly damp afternoon, for which all the women folks attired themselves in thin shoes and stockings.

The True Standard of Value.

Values are relative. One person puts a high estimate on what another deems worthless. A savage covets a showy feather or a gaudy trinket. Civilized ladies sometimes have a similar fancy, but, again, an antiquarian would prize an old book above a bale of feathers and a barrel of trinkets. Who shall say what is the real test of value in material possessions? A little child was recently startled by what she heard said at the family table about a robbery in the neighborhood. As she learned the possibility of her own home being entered by robbers, she trembled for her choice possessions. "Mamma," she whispered, "you won't take dolls?" Her dolls were her treasure. If they were in danger, life and new perils for her. "No, my dear," said her mamma. "Robbers don't want dolls. Why should they take them?" "I didn't know but they would want them for their little girls," was the answer, showing the child believed that robbers were human, and that their shadowy and cloud hangings and chimeras. With the assurance that her dolls were safe, the little girl had less regard for rubbish. What was the loss of family silver or of exchequer and papers, or money or pictures, if the dolls were to be left unharmed? After all, was the child's estimate of values wrong or more serious trouble with the rest of us?—Sunday School Times.

Real Profit Entirely Overlooked.

A Baltimore man who bought him a farm two or three years ago was recently approached by a friend who had some money to invest, and who asked:

"Can I buy a pretty fair farm for $15,000?"

"Yes, about that figure."

"And I'll want to lay out about $10,000 in improvements, I presume?"

"Yes, fully that."

"And can I invest another $10,000 in blooded stock?"

"I think you can."

"And $5,000 more in grading, filling up, creating fish ponds, and so forth?"

"Well, you may get through with that sum."

"Oh you don't need pencil or paper," said the victim, as a shade of sorrow darkened his face. "The income will be about $3 for turnips, $2 for potatoes, $5 or $6 for corn, and a bull calf or two at $3 a head. To save time, call it $25. I'll see you again in a day two. Maybe I've forgotten something which will add a dollar more. Morning to you."—Wall Street Daily News.

It is related that President Seguier was always hard upon the lawyers. When the docket was being called one day it was found that both advocates in a certain case were absent. "Go on with it, then," cried the President, in high spirits; "go on with it; we shall now have a chance of getting at the truth."

THE SUN
NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just passed than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy read and like the Sun for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in an attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs the Sun makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election, as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. The Sun has absolutely no purposes to serve save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that it is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonian and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, the Sun stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interests of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that the Sun is the best religious newspaper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of the Sun discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to his individual liking.

If you already know the Sun, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know the Sun you will find it to be a mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, a sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

"My friend," said the druggist, "you have a lame back, you say, and want a plaster to put on it. Once I could have shown a large assortment to choose from. Now I keep only a few, and sell most of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER. Why? Because they are the best. I have All-cocks, the Capsicum, and some others. They are harmless and slow. Business is business, and I gradually ceased to deal in them to any great extent."

"All right, do me up a Capcine, without any more talk, for my back aches as though I had been working my passage in a baggage car."

"Here you are," said the druggist, "with the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster, proving it to be genuine."

"And here's your twenty-five cents," said the lame-backed man, walking slowly away.

A Night With Alligators.

"Did you ever hear an alligator bellow?" The news editor of the Jacksonville (Florida) Times asked the question. It was one o'clock in the morning, the last "copy" had gone up the tube, and a number of the young men had dropped in for a chat and a smoke before seeking their lodgings. The speaker leaned back in his chair, gave a mighty pull at his pipe, sighed with the genuine enjoyment of relaxation, and threw his ankles over a neighboring chair-back. "There is nothing like it on this earth. It is the realization, or near it, of the blood-curdling roars of the monsters of fairyland that tortured our youthful imaginations. I don't know how better to describe it than by saying that it is a loud, prolonged, dental bellow, that shakes the ground like an earthquake, and at a distance of three miles it seems not five hundred yards away."

"You have heard them, I suppose?" said the marine reporter.

"Yes, I have heard them. They are not heard often in the temperate regions of northern Florida, but in the tropical confines of Lakes Winder and Washington, and farther yet, up in Bonnet Lake, near the Big Cypress, the source of the St. John's River—"

"Yes; and beyond the tourist's everlasting rifle the great bull alligator lives, flourishes—and bellows."

"You would, no doubt, make an alligator very agreeable company," said the police reporter.

"Yes," added the news editor, "very agreeable—for the alligator. When our party was over there from Indian River," he added, significantly, "we lost our three most valuable pointers."

"I heard," retorted the discreet junior reporter, getting through the door and nearly closing it, "I heard that your family were all wearing heavy mourning about that time."

Then he slammed the door and skipped, while the news editor proceeded: "In 1876 Walker Lund, the elder, tried to get one of his small steamers up into Lake Washington. He did make two or three trips to Turtle Mound, a place about half-way between the two lakes (Winder and Washington), but above that point the channel was full of floating mud islands and smartweed and grass. We expected him up one Thursday night. Several teams went over from Indian River—it was fifteen miles from our settlement—and Billy McCullough and I rode over on our marsh tackeys. We made camp on the mound, waited till dark, but no steamer came. The mound is a little hillock of perhaps ten acres, covered with a dense jungle of palmettos, sweet gum trees, and wild vines, standing out a solitary clump in the midst of the low, wet prairie through which the river runs.

"A runaway British sailor named Harness was keeping a little store on Lake Winder, and among other goods had a barrel of pinetop whisky. Some of the boys got hungry for a drink, and made up a party to go down to Harness's. We had a little red skiff at the mound, and one after another got in till only I was left. They paddled away into the dark, went to Harness's got drunk, came near being drowned, and did not return till nearly daylight I made my bed and went to sleep—on the ground.

"About one o'clock the 'gators began swimming back up stream. They go in pairs, and the males 'coo,' as it were, to their mates. I was sleeping very peacefully. Suddenly something convulsed me. I sat up, quaking in every joint. The fire was out, only red embers remaining. The darkness in the dense moss-hung hammock that covered the mound was profound. Buzzards roosting in the dark not far away were breaking down occasional dry limbs, and two or three opossums were sneaking around the dead embers of the fire. I sat and shivered. Suddenly again, right at the foot of the mound, not twenty yards from me, came that bellow—gods! I can't describe it—a noise I had never heard in my life before. Then another bellow answered. I seemed to be surrounded by them. My first thought was panthers, but I had heard panthers enough, and concluded it was not they. I got up and groped my way to one of the wagons; my rifle was gone; it had been taken by one of the party of whisky hunters without my knowledge or consent.

"I got up in the wagon and calmly waited my fate. Within twenty minutes a form as big as a whale was pawing around the fire. Then he bellowed. I saw by his movements that it was an alligator. It was not possible to see them, but a dozen at least must have come up there. They made away with every thing they could find. Then I shouted, I yelled, swore and danced in the wagon. I felt about for a wagon-stake, but there was none.

"Then through the stillness of the night I heard, afar off, the prolonged tally-whoo of the cow-boy. The crowd was coming back drunk.

"I think it sobered them up a bit when they saw that camp."

Just a Little.

It is related that a Buffalo man, who had been in the coffee business for several years, was led to believe that he was a sinner, and to come out on the side of religion. The morning after he had taken this step he reached his factory to find business suspended, and upon demanding an explanation, his son replied:

"Well, father, I didn't know what to do. I did not suppose after what you said last night that you would mix any more beans with the coffee. I presumed it would make a difference."

"Yes, it will make just a little difference," calmly observed the old man. "We have heretofore been mixing one barrel of beans to four of coffee, haven't we?"

"Yes."

"Well, take out two of the beans—about two quarts, I guess."

The iron statue of Liberty on the dome of the Capitol at Washington is said to bend six inches toward the sun every day and resume its position at night. A picturesque story that scientific persons will be good enough to let alone.

Alexander Stephens' Home.

The Atlanta Constitution says the committee appointed to convey Alexander Stephens to the gubernatorial mansion, were, on arriving at Liberty Hall, invited to breakfast. No less than eight servants clustered about the table and helped the guests, while a major-domo of unyielding dignity directed their movements, and three pickaninnies stood by the open fireplace and watched the proceedings with undisguised interest. A family of five kittens tumbled about the floor, while two gods, occupying the rounds of a staircase that led from the dining-room into the second story, overlooked the scene.

"I bought this house," said Mr. Stephens, "in 1842, from Mr. Bird—and to-day, for the first time, it is to be closed up. We are packing up everything, and the house will be closed up to-day, except for Mr. O'Neill, an old friend of mine, who is now approaching his 99th year, and who will continue to live here."

"This is a library," said Mr. Stephens, "in which I have spent many a day and night of work, and which I leave with great reluctance." It was not a pretentious room, but well filled. An immense basket of seed for distribution sat on the floor. In a corner was a pile of sweet potatoes. The entire wall-space was covered with books. These were mostly on topics relating to the war and constitutional questions. Every conceivable history of the war and every treatise on government ever published, it appeared, were here, and the most of them well thumbed.

"You will notice," said Mr. Stephens, "that I have my house lighted with gas. It is a curious fact, but my gas costs me less than my matches." "You must have unskillful scratchers, then?" "No. But a great many of my visitors smoke pipes, as I do, and it takes four or five matches to light a pipe, especially in the hands of those who are used to coals. It costs me 50 cents a week for matches and only $19 a year for gas. There is no investment a country gentleman can make that pays so well as to have his own gas-machine.

"This room," said Mr. Stephens, entering a bedroom adjoining the library, "was occupied the night it was finished by Smith O'Brien, the last of the line of Irish kings of Munster. He spent a week with me and was the grandest man in some respects I ever knew. His book on representative government is the profoundest work I ever read, except Mr. Calhoun's, and is much more elaborate. He was the foremost of the Irish patriots in dignity and power. I had Toombs here to meet him frequently, and it was interesting to see them together. Mr. Toombs was then very extreme—it was in 1859, and I had resigned in view of the coming storm—and was fond of painting to O'Brien what a magnificent republic we could make of the south if we were only cut off from the main body of death, as he called the north. In his quiet but positive way O'Brien would insist that the perpetuity of the American union was the only hope for true representative government on earth.

It is well known that Mr. Stephens is poor. He spends his income on charity and in entertaining, and has always done so. While he is scrupulously exact in his own personal expenses, he has little thought of money spent on others. It is his boast that he has never turned anyone away from his door. His income on his books amounted to but little. An old negro of 76, who is one month younger than Mr. Stephens, and has been with him seventy-six years, said: "Why, he's better to dogs than most folks is to folks. He feeds every dog as comes to him, and when he dies he don't just let him dry up; he buries him." "Buries the dogs?" "Yes, sir, just like folks. He's got a regular dog graveyard in his garden. I buried Frank there two weeks ago, and Rio was buried there, and there's a heap o' dogs buried there."

As the car rolled out of the little town this old veteran was seen waving a tattered handkerchief, while what seemed to be the entire population of Crawfordsville cheered lustily and gave the new governor a hearty send-off.

It Stopped at Cabbage.

A colored man living on Indiana street, says the Free Press, lately had occasion to ask the advice of the patrolman in that district, as to how he should treat some boys who called him names as he passed a certain corner.

"I wouldn't mind 'em," was the reply.

"Jist what I reckoned on," said the complainant. "I had my mind made up to treat 'em wid proud disdain. But dar's a naybur o' mine who frows clubs at my dog an' cusses my chill'en. Would you also come de proud disdain over him?"

"Yes, I think so."

"An' dar's a white man libin' round de co'ner who say I stole his ax. "I reckon dat proud disdain will fix nim if I keep it up long enough?"

"It certainly will."

"Wall, den it am settled dat I doan' talk back in none o' dese cases, but dar' am one fing I want understood right heah an' now. De nex' time I am injoyin' an' cbenin' siesta on de doorsteps and a six-pound cabbage hits me on de middle west-button dar' won't be no proud disdain to be had in any grocery fur a mile aroun'! I'ze gwine to riz up an yell fur revenge an' shout fut blood, an' de-ossifer who interferes wid me am gwine to be rendered unconscious fur forty-eight days!"

Keeping Still in Church.

A lady visiting at River Park is the mother of seven small children, all of whom are exceptionally bright. One of these, a four-year-old boy, showed great reluctance to attend church, and was constantly in disgrace when there. His mother tried every means to induce him to sit still in vain, until at last the little fellow said:

"What is that?" asked his mamma, eagerly.

"Just let me take off my shoes and stockings so I can wiggle my toes, and I'll keep as still as a mice!"

Dr. Rush's Medical Association:

Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am thoroughly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I had become convinced that I could not be cured. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there who charged me $5 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,

Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

GET THE BEST

THE PHILADELPHIA TIMES

The people generally get that which they make a market for. They demanded better newspapers, and within the last few years journalism has made rapid strides. THE TIMES, which, in the day of its first issue, took place in the front rank of progressive journals, has kept along at the double quick step, and at this time is a better newspaper than ever. It is a journal that never sleeps and never takes a holiday. As there are 365 days, so there are 365 issues of the TIMES in a year. The week-day edition of the TIMES is of four pages, being in a form suitable for the busy man or the busy woman. The Sunday edition, of eight pages, contains a great deal of the best miscellany, as well as all the news. The editorial strength of the TIMES need not be dwelt upon—the fact that it is quoted more than any other paper in America is sufficient evidence of its excellence in that direction. Nor need the typographical superiority be more than mentioned—for it is widely known as the handsomest paper in the country.

THE PHILADELPHIA WEEKLY TIMES

Covers ground not covered by any other weekly. THE WEEKLY TIMES has the cream of the dailies, and at the same time it contains matter especially adapted to the wants of readers in every part of America, Canada, and a Spanish journal in every State and Territory, and it has subscribers in every part of the world. The leading feature of THE WEEKLY is the "Annals of the War." This department contains the most authentic history, contributed by prominent officers on both sides, and it has become a rallying place for contributors to the War of the Rebellion, and it has become a rallying place for contributors to the War of the Rebellion, and it has become a rallying place for contributors, whether from Northern or Southern sources. The Annals will be kept up to the high standard of former years.

will not be increased the sundry civil bill, the appropriation will be somewhat reduced, as some of the clerks will be paid out of the sundry civil appropriation. There was some talk, however, about a contingent appropriation that would enable the president to increase the army to forty thousand when necessary, and it is understood that the president desired this. This is probably the only foundation for the rumors referred to.

THE ARLINGTON ESTATE.

The senate judiciary committee have discussed in an informal way the best method to effect a settlement with Gen. Lee, the owner of the Arlington estate. The supreme court having decided that the title of the estate is in the Lee heirs, it has become necessary for the government to secure that title. A member of the judiciary committee said Thursday that it was probable that a bill would be reported by the judiciary committee of the senate, appropriating a certain sum to be given the owners of the estate for a clear title. There was no understanding with regard to the amount, he said, but he was confident that the sum named, whatever it might be, would be entirely satisfactory to Gen. Lee. In answer to a question how this amount would be reached, he said that a statement of the value of the estate at the time it was taken possession of by the United States should be called for from those acquainted with the property, and that an estimate of the possible rents and profits from that time until the present would be made. There is no doubt that the amount which the committee is willing to give Gen. Lee is quite large.—As has already been stated, General Lee does not care to recover possession of the property.

CIVIL-SERVICE REFORM.

Dorman B. Eaton and Orlando B. Potter, of the Civil-Service Reform association, are here in the interest of the Pendleton bill.—They are decidedly in favor of this bill as against all its competitors. The Kasson bill strikes them as an ingenious attempt at how not to do it. The limitation of the period for which a clerk is to be appointed is at variance with the principles of reform. The effort to introduce the new system all over the country at once is undertaking too much and is liable to fail. The provisions about removals are unnecessary, because if political henchmen and personal favorites can not be appointed there will be no removals except for what everyone would recognize as good cause. Nobody is removed except to let someone else in. The beauty of the Pendleton bill, according to these gentlemen, is that it is perfectly simple. It undertakes to inaugurate the reform to begin with only in a few of the principal offices, and it is not incumbered with provisions about removals and the cause for which persons may be removed and the way in which it is to be done. Furthermore, the Kasson bill proposes to work through little independent commissions all over the country, which is impracticable. The work must be under the general management of one commission. Under all circumstances these gentlemen think the passage of the Kasson bill would indefinitely postpone any real reform of the service. The fixing of any period of time at the end of which the appointment shall expire, is inconsistent with the theory of a tenure for good behavior, but while the term of six years in Mr. Kasson's original bill is objectionable, the reduction of that to four by the committee is even more objectionable.

THE CORN CROP.

The December corn returns to the department of agriculture make a direct comparison with the product of last year. In November the yield per acre was reported, and in October last the report of the condition of the growing crop. The range of variation in the results of these three separate tests is but 3 per cent. With so slight a difference the tendency of accurate information is toward a reduction. The present and final returns aggregate in round numbers, 1,625,000,000 bushels. The permanent estimates will be punished after an analysis of all the records of the area, condition and production of the year, and a conscientious adjustment of all the possible differences. The New England states show a product of 3,333,000, 1,000,000 less than last year, and 2,000,000 less than 1879. The middle states 76,000,000, 11,000,000 more than last year, 10,000,000 less than in 1879. The southern Atlantic states 137,000,000, being 35,000,000 more than last year, and 25,000,000 more than in 1879. Five gulf-coast states 171,000,000, being 70,000,000 more than last year and 65,000,000 more than in the census year. West Virginia, Kentucky, and Tennessee, or central belt, 170,000,000, 70,000,000 more than the previous crop and 21,000,000 more than in 1879. In seven corn-surplus states, from Ohio to Nebraska and Kansas, which produced a record of 1,201,000,000 bushels in the census year, there appears a reduction of about 225,000,000 bushels, more than one hundred millions of which is in Illinois and nearly one hundred millions in Iowa. Each state shows an increase over last year. The crop was very heavy in Missouri and Kansas, the total increase being about two hundred and forty million bushels. In Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, or the lake belt, the product is eighty million bushels, nearly the same as in 1879, and an increase of nine millions over last year. There is a large increase in Dakota and an aggregate increase for the mountain and Pacific coast region. There is much reduction in quality and intrinsic value in the northwest from the immaturity and injury by frost, especially in Iowa. The returns of the wheat production, made with more enlightened judgment after garnering has been entirely completed, do not vary more than 5 per cent. from the highest indications of any monthly returns of the season; yet they are lower in December and render it nearly certain that the permanent estimates can not surpass five hundred million bushels and may fail to reach that figure.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

DEC. 11.—Mr. Slater introduced a bill to forfeit the unearned lands of the Oregon Central road. Mr. Ferry presented a measure to increase the pensions of soldiers and sailors who lost an arm or a leg in the service. Mr. Van Wyck offered a resolution of inquiry whether a railroad is being constructed across the Niobrara military reservation without authority from congress.—By a vote of 34 to 26 the senate refused to postpone indefinitely the subject of bankruptcy, and then adopted the Lowell bill as a substitute for the one reported by the judiciary committee. A motion to take up Mr. Pendleton's civil-service bill was carried; but the senate dismissed and defeated a scheme to release the Memphis and Little Rock road from its obligations to carry troops free and mails at a reduced rate, and then adjourned.

DEC. 12.—On motion of Mr. Hoar, the postmaster general and the secretary of the treasury were directed to transmit reports made on the administration of the federal offices in New York. A memorial of the Chicago board of trade in favor of the Lowell bankruptcy bill was submitted.—Bills were introduced to grant a pension to the widow of General Revere; to pay certain Indian war bonds of Colorado; and to prohibit officers and employes of the United States from contributing money for political purposes. Mr. Vest offered a resolution to report if any legislation is necessary to protect public property, preserve the game, and enforce the laws in Yellowstone park. Mr. Pendleton explained the provisions of his civil-service bill, and an extended debate took place. Numerous amendments were offered, but no definite action was taken.

DEC. 13.—The senate was again flooded by petitions to fix the tax on tobacco and to increase the pensions of soldiers who lost an arm or a leg in the war. Mr. Ingalls introduced a bill to compel the prosecution of proceedings in bankruptcy to a final decree. The resolution offered by Mr. Beck and Mr. Hale to investigate political assessments were referred to the judiciary committee.—Mr. Pendleton's civil-service reform bill was taken up. Mr. Logan secured an amendment providing that examinations shall be practical in their character, and Mr. Sherman caused the defeat of the permanent appropriation for the expenses of a civil-service commission. Mr. Garland introduced a bill to grant a right of way through the military reservation at Fort Scott for the St. Louis and San Francisco r. r.

DEC. 14.—Mr. Logan caused the defeat of the bill to increase the salaries of navy chaplains. Debate on the civil-service bill consumed the remainder of the session.

DEC. 15.—Mr. Ferry reported favorably the house bill to make the personation of a postoffice inspector punishable by fine and imprisonment. It was agreed that 42,000 copies of the testimony taken by the tariff commission be printed, together with 20,000 copies of the report. The French spoliation bill was amended and passed. After debate, Mr. Pendleton's civil-service reform bill was amended to provide for the confirmation of the commissioners by the senate.

DEC. 16.—In the senate Mr. Cameron presented a memorial from the Pittsburg chamber of commerce, asking an additional appropriation to complete the federal building in that city. Mr. Aldrich reported a house bill for the relief of the German National bank of Louisville. The civil-service bill was taken up, and Mr. Voorhees pawed the air in antagonism to the measure, and Mr. Ingalls bandied epithets with Mr. Hoar, the session continuing until dark. An amendment by Mr. Brown to limit the term of the commissioners to four years was lost.

HOUSE.

DEC. 11.—Mr. Townshend, of Illinois, introduced a resolution reciting the efforts of certain railway managers to prevent the construction of competing lines in the northwest, and directing the committee of commerce to report a bill to prohibit and punish such combination. Mr. Waite introduced a bill to stop the coinage of silver dollars until the stock is reduced to $50,000,000, and Mr. Ellis offered a measure to authorize the state of Louisiana to establish quarantine stations. Mr. Dibrell presented an act to abolish internal revenue taxes and allow a rebate on whisky and tobacco, and another to reduce the specie in the treasury to $150,000,000. Mr. Springer proposed a constitutional amendment relative to the election of president, vice president, and members of congress. A bill was passed to authorize brevet commissions for distinguished conduct in Indian campaigns.

DEC. 12.—The postoffice, military, and agricultural appropriation bills were reported and referred to the committee of the whole. Mr. Randall offered a resolution requesting the president to furnish a complete statement of the expenditure for the improvement of rivers and harbors since the beginning of the government. The congressional library bill was not taken up.—It was agreed that the building shall not cost in excess of $2,000,000; and that it shall be erected on land belonging to the government.

DEC. 13.—The house on motion of Mr. Springer, passed a joint resolution authorizing the payment of $25,000 from the Virginius indemnity fund to Mrs. Eliza Dunn, of Chicago, the mother of General W. A. C. Ryan, who was slaughtered in Cuba. The congressional library bill was recommitted, with instructions that it be changed to provide for the erection of a building on government ground in Washington. The military academy appropriation bill was passed. A resolution offered by Mr. Randall was adopted, requesting the secretary of the treasury to report the estimated amount paid for ocean freights during the fiscal year. Mr. O'Neill presented a petition from tobacco jobbers, asking a rebate equal to the reduction to be made in the tax.

DEC. 14.—Mr. Pound reported back a resolution of inquiry as to whether patents to unearned lands had been issued to railroad companies. Mr. Upson offered a resolution calling for a report of all failures to carry out mail contracts. Mr. Converse introduced a bill giving the right of way through the grounds of Columbus barracks to the Eastern Railroad company. The house went into committee of the whole on the postoffice appropriation bill. Considerable discussion arose over the failure to make provision for fast mails. Mr. Robeson explaining that the Chicago and Omaha pool was the difficulty encountered. Mr. Reagan entered a protest against a reduction in the rate of postage. The committee rose, and the house passed a bill to place Robert Smalls on the retired list of the navy for running a rebel gunboat out of Charleston during the war.

DEC. 15.—In the house as a question of privilege, Mr. Reed presented the memorial of Jas. H. McLean, who was elected to the present congress to succeed the late Thomas Allen, of Missouri, and who was refused a certificate because the Second district had been legislated out of existence. After considerable debate it was resolved by 141 to 15, to swear in Mr. McLean, and he took the oath. Mr. Martin introduced a bill to allow a drawback on articles for export manufactured in part of unported material. The postoffice bill was taken up. Mr. Townshend gave notice of an amendment to abolish postage on second-class matter. Mr. Reagan, who was postmaster general of the confederacy, thought a reduction in the rate of postage would remove a small tax from those best able to bear it. Mr. Robeson argued in behalf of a cut to 2 cents. Mr. Cassidy secured an increase of $250,000 for star service.

DEC. 16.—The house passed a bill authorizing the Soldiers' home commissioners to sell certain property at Harrodsburg Kentucky. The postoffice appropriation bill was considered in committee, and the proposition for special mail facilities was rejected. Mr. Holman gave notice of an amendment providing that land-grant roads shall receive only half the compensation allowed to other railways for carrying mails. Mr. Wadsworth reported a bill to grant a pension to the widow of Major General Warren. A bill was passed to cede to the First taxing district of Tennessee certain lands in the city of Memphis. Mr. Hiscock offered a resolution for a holiday recess from December 22 to January 3.

GET THE BEST

THE PHILADELPHIA TIMES

The people generally get that which they make a market for. They demanded better newspapers, and within the last few years journalism has made rapid strides. THE TIMES, which, from the day of its first issue, took place in the front rank of progressive journalism, has kept along at the double-quick step, and at this time is a better newspaper than ever. It is a journal that never sleeps and never takes a holiday. As there are 365 days, so there are 365 issues of the TIMES in a year. The week-day edition of the TIMES is of four pages, being in a form suitable for the busy man or the busy woman. The Sunday edition, of eight pages, contains a great deal of the best miscellany as well as all the news. The editorial strength of the TIMES need not be dwelt upon—the fact that it is quoted more than any other paper in America is sufficient evidence of its excellence in that direction. Nor need the typographical superiority be more than mentioned—for it is widely known as "the handsomest paper in the country."

THE PHILADELPHIA WEEKLY TIMES

Covers a distinct field. Into THE WEEKLY goes the cream of the daily issues, and at the same time it contains matter especially adapted to the wants of readers in every part of America; it circulates, as a first-class journal, in every State and Territory, and it has subscribers in every part of the world. The leading feature of THE WEEKLY is the "ANNALS OF THE WAR." This department embraces chapters of unwritten history, contributed by prominent actors in the War of the Rebellion, and it has become a recognized depository of such matters, whether from Northern or Southern sources. The ANNALS will be kept fully up to the high standard of former years.

TERMS:

THE DAILY TIMES—Twelve cents a week. Mail Subscriptions, postage free, Six Dollars a year, Fifty cents a month.

THE WEEKLY TIMES—Fifty-six columns of the choicest reading, especially prepared to meet the wants of weekly newspaper readers. One copy, $2.00; Five copies, $8.00; Ten copies $15.00; Twenty copies, $25.00. An Extra copy sent free to any person getting up Clubs of ten or twenty.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

MACON CENTER.

The recent cold snap though so destructive to house plants has been just the thing for "orange blossoms."

Mr. B. S. Scudder and Miss Minnie Davenport joined hands at the bride's father's last week Tuesday.

Miss Kate Ayers was married at her brothers, L. B. Ayres, last week Wednesday. The groom's name we cannot recall.

The air is full of gossip as to sundry forthcoming events.

The Greenbackers of this township are still voting, and we notice that the campaign is being vigorously prosecuted throughout the State. It looks like "fishing through the ice" and as though the extra friction would cause evaporation, thereby drying up the pond and increasing the mortality.

Miss Helen Hartwell, the pleasing elocutionist, will give an entertainment consisting of humorous and pathetic recitations, at Grange hall on Tuesday evening, Jan. 11th. Door fee 10 and 15 cents. Miss Hartwell comes well recommended, and we trust the citizens will give her a full house.

CAMBRIDGE.

It is a pleasant task to revi[illegible] scenes in our truly productive farmi[illegible] town and county. For two years past the lands have produced more th[illegible] usual of all kinds of grain, grass [illegible]it and vegetables, not omitting the [illegible]heerful additions to the family household. We have watched the changes of our population from the primitive days of the first settlement; also the ma[illegible]y historic improvem[illegible] from the native habitation of the Indian wigwam, [illegible]ore than fifty ye[illegible] up to the present day. We now look over this fertile town and county with admiration, say that we are not excelled in any northern State for well arranged farms, also cattle, horses and sheep, with convenient and beautiful buildings and ornamental yards, with healthy, prosperous, generous farmers whose intelligence is manifested daily in their aid with councils [illegible] State, their surroundings and the [illegible]heerful home circle. Although our lot has been cast for more than 50 years in Lenawee county, with 44 years in Cambridge, we thank the providence that our habitation was built in the romantic valley of the crystalline lakes surrounded by woodland hills of this picturesque town.

For more than twenty years it has been the annu[illegible] custom to decorate and trim the church at the Ju[illegible]ction. This year the arrangements we[illegible] a little different than the usual [illegible]stom. In place of planting a tree ther[illegible] was a neat cottage frame built on the [illegible]ancel, covered with evergreens, t[illegible] front side open, there displayed in [illegible]ant order on sh[illegible]ves and hung [illegible] [illegible]afters, more than 200 admired [illegible]ts. At six o'clock the lamps were lighted, with Japanese and Oriental lanterns in every section, with the chandelier in the center. In the vestibule were the cheerful words, 'Welcome,' 'Merry Christmas.' The superintendent of the Sunday school, Mrs. J. B. Keeney, called the large congregation to order; singing by the choir; prayer by Rev. E. Ichbaum; address by Mrs. Keeney to Sunday school scholars; several declamations by scholars, with music. At the appointed time Santa Claus, dressed in robes with such a face as never was seen inside of the church before, mysteriously appeared among the presents, who dexteriously handed the numerous articles to Mrs. Keeney, C. H. Dewey named the packages, then one of the four pages, Masters Blowers, Dewey, Johnston and Keeney, took them to the respective owners, numbering over 70 scholars. This part of the town is largely indebted to the very excellent teachers and the unwearied management of the superintendent, Mrs. J. B. Keeney. D.

ADDISON.

Perhaps one of the most shocking incidents chronicled in the history of western Lenawee is the disease of Mrs. Frank Campfield, of Addison, who died of heart disease on the night before New Years.

She was one of a gay dancing party at the Exchange hotel on the night mentioned; had shared the convivialities of the occasion to a large degree for some hours when calling to her husband she fell suddenly to the floor inanimate.

Medical aid was at once summoned but to no avail, the grim monster had done his fatal work. A wife and mother, devoted and true had gone to her reward. Funeral services were performed over the body of deceased on the Monday following.

She was born at Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 16th, 1844, and was 36 years of age. The young husband and two charming little girls, who survive her, are in receipt of tenderest sympathy from all who know them. The truth of the words, "In the midst of life we are in death" is forcibly demonstrated in this case.

MACON.

Union meetings are held here every evening during the present week, the "Week of Prayer."

Our former township clerk, Mr. Bradley Scudder, entered the state of matrimony last week, his partner being Miss Minnie Davenport, also of this township. May happiness be theirs. A large gathering of friends was present on the occasion.

This community has met with a great loss in the death of Mrs. Isaiah Hendershot, which occurred very suddenly on Monday evening, Jan. 3rd.—The probable cause was heart disease. The deceased was highly esteemed and beloved, and was widely known throughout this section as a singer, whose voice has been frequently heard in temperance and religious meetings. She will be greatly missed.

Mrs. Wood, wife of Dr. D. H. Wood, of Quincy, Mich., has been visiting friends in this vicinity, and returned home last week.

SPRINGVILLE.

W. H. Smith is erecting an ice house for hotel use.

Miss Rachel Mosher is visiting with friends in Clinton and Hudson.

Quite a number of our farmers contemplate building the coming season.

T. H. Mosher furnishes those who have dry cisterns with splendid ice at his mill pond.

The New Years party at Nearing's Dec. 31st, was largely attended, about 130 couple were present.

Supt. J. B. Stephenson' teacher in Dist. No. 1, ha[illegible] been ailing for a few days, but is ab[illegible] to attend to his school again.

Ayres Bros. are buying chickens to be delivered h[illegible] Tuesday, January 11th.

Granville Ly[illegible]an has sold his farm of 88 acres for $5,280 to Alfred Bailey. Mr. Bailey's attachment to Cambridge was to strong to leave the township.

L. H. Sheeler, sheep breeder of Cambridge, has a very fine lot of sheep, which he has lately purchased. Lem. will undoubtedly make a fine showing of sheep at the Sheep Shearing Festival in the spring.

The following is a list of the mail matter sent from this postoffice during the past year: 5044 letters, 2704 postal cards, 99 registered letters, 4 packages merchandise.

The receipts of the Alvin Joslin company were over $600, last Tuesday evening.

RIDGEWAY.

Burt Palmer and wife are in the village.

Mr. Goldard and daughter of Hamilton, Ont., spent part of last week with R. S. Houseman.

Mrs. E. Clark is visiting her brother in Grand Rapids.

C. A. Sharp is para[illegible] now. A six pound boy. Smoke the "S. S."

C. L. Waring has returned to that teutonic town of Holland where he will resume that rather fast employment of heating [illegible] Must make a [illegible] that in summer time.

The annual election of officers of the M. E. S. S. took place last Sunday, resulting in the election of Rev. G. H. Feld, sup't, and Alice Wickham, ass't. No other changes from last year.

Hon. G. P. Waring left for the seat of war at Lansing on Monday. As he is non-committal on the Senatorial question, his clothes are probably totally wrecked ere this by the buttonholes, and we shall look for him down for repairs as soon as the matter is settled.

The undertaking business of G. P. Waring will be under the supervision of competent and experienced parties, and all orders will receive just as prompt and careful attention as tho' attended by Mr. W. in person. The stock has been greatly enlarged and is now very complete.

FRANKLIN.

No communication last week owing to absence from home.

And but little of importance this week.

Mr. Tuttle takes exceptions to what we said in a former communication relative to filling his ice house. We stated the facts as we understood had been the practice in former years, several parties clubbing together in filling the house and sharing in the ice, and of course intended no insinuation, and see no reason why it should be construed as such.

The oyster entertainment at the Congregational parsonage last week Tuesday afternoon and evening was very well attended notwithstanding the cold, and was a very enjoyable affair.

Sherman Terry, of Tecumseh, is visiting us. Always glad to see him.

We met several Tecumseh gentlemen at Adrian last week, including Messrs. B. L. Baxter, E. B. Wood, H. C. Conkling, P. S. McKinnon and S. C. Stacy, of the HERALD, which forcibly reminded us of our former life in the "Queen of villages."

Prof. Lowrie will deliver the first of his proposed series of lectures on English literature at the Congregational church next Friday evening, which cannot fail to be instructive and profitable. All are cordially invited, both old and young.

THE Detroit Free Press, having called upon the old subscribers of that paper to report, Lyman W. Baker, of Rome, writes that he has taken the paper for [illegible]ty-five years. He says:

In th[illegible] of old subscribers, I can beat you [illegible]vlands and Howletts. I have taken the Weekly Free Press forty-five years (except one year's subscription). A year or two ago I sent you a copy of the Free Press printed as long ago as that. I have lived on this spot of ground for forty-eight years, purchasing it from the government, the patent signed by Andrew Jackson, the man that I first cast my vote for, and have never missed voting at any Federal, State or township election since, and I have never voted any kind of a ticket but the Democratic. I am 75 years of age; I like the paper first best, although I take several others. I have just sent subscription for another year.

LYMAN W. BAKER.

THE Lenawee County F[illegible]ec' Club will hold its next me[illegible]g on Jan. 11th, 1881. The executive committee will meet at half past ten A. M. as this is the day for the annual election of officers. At half past one P.M. the following program will be brought out:

AT the State Sheriffs' Association meeting for this year, held at Jackson, Sheriff Bidwell was honored with the office of vice president of the association for the ensuing year.

TIPTON.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. N. Bowen celebrated their tenth anniversary Dec. 25, 1880. The invited [illegible] to the number of eighty, and with [illegible] the inclemency of the weather, assembled to celebrate the event. There was a long list of presents ranging all the way from handsome toilet sets to a tin pot-hole. About 9 o'clock [illegible] were surprised by a movement [illegible] round the house, and the gently [illegible] manner approaching, so as what was coming. The whole thing was [illegible] pleased when a wedding party surprised [illegible] Plymouth, and Miss Ella Hill, of Petersburg, were united in wedlock. It was a genuine surprise to most of the guests. A notable event of the evening were recitations from the talented elocutionist, Miss Helen Hartwell: "How we caught a mouse," and "Christmas at the corners," took the house down. About 12 o'clock the guests departed for their homes, seemingly well pleased with their evenings entertainment. Drs. Rix & Dingman, dental physicians and surgeons, have just enlarged and refurnished their quarters. They have two operating rooms. Everybody will appreciate this, as it affords an opportunity of judging by the intensity of the yell whether the "other fellow" is getting it the worst. Our reporter examined a collection of instruments which would cause an old-fashioned Inquisitor to turn green with envy, and as each of the firm weighs over 200 avoirdupois, and is a professional, the torture can be prolonged, shortened, and intensified, to suit the customer. Their laboratory is a model of convenience, and from the appearance when we saw it, one would suppose that Jack Haverly's mastodon minstrel troupe had just departed and forgotten to take their mouths.

WE received No. 18 of the "One Hundred Choice Selections" series. This is a series of pamphlets, each number containing 100 selections in prose and verse, suitable for public recitals, parlor readings, etc. The growing interest which has of late years been awakened in reference to the important subject of elocution, renders the publication of such a series as this highly necessary in order to meet the incessant demand of recitationists and reading clubs, for something new; and the successive numbers abound in that rich variety of bright, pertinent, thrilling, and touching extracts, which admirably fit them for their intended purpose. Price only 30 cents each.

The prompt action of the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters in changing the condition of the stomach and correcting its irregularities establishes the fact that the cure of disease by absorption is in perfect accord with the laws of nature. If you have Indigestion, Constipation, or any stomach disorder, try this remedy. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by all druggists.

WE have received the report of L. Sawtelle, Quartermaster General of the State of Michigan, from which we see that the expense of the last encampment was $21,767.62. The State troops are now composed of twenty-five companies.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

TWO OF THEM.

In the farm-house porch the farmer sat,
With his daughter having a cozy chat;
She was his only child, and he Thought her as fair as girl could be.
A wee bit jealous the old man grew
If he fancied any might come to woo:
His one pet lamb and her loving care
He wished all to nobody else to share.

"There should be two of you, child," said he—
"There should be two to welcome me
When I come home from the field at night;
Two would make the old homestead bright.
There's Neighbor Grey with his children four,
To be glad together. Had I one more
A present old father I'd be, my dear,
With two good children to greet me here."

Down by the gate, 'neath the old elm tree
Donald waited alone; and she
For whom he waited his love call-heard,
And on each cheek the blushes stirred.
"Father," she said, and knelt her down,
And kissed the hand that was strong and brown,
"Father there may be two, if you will,
And I—your only daughter still.

"Two to welcome you home at night;
Two to make the old homestead bright;
I need somebody else." "I see,"
Said the farmer: "and whom may so nobody be?"
Oh, the dimples in Bessie's cheek,
That played with blushes at hide-and-seek!
Away from his gaze she turned her head;
"One of Neighbor Grey's children," she said.

"H'm!" said the farmer, "make it plain;
Is it Susan, Alice, or Mary Jane?"
Another kiss on the aged hand,
To help the farmer to understand (?)
"H'm!" said the farmer; "Yes; I see
It is too for yourself and one for me."
Then Bessie said, "Father, 'twas this way
For me and my heart, till life is done."

SEVEN KEYS TO A SAFE.

"I tell you what," I said, "I shan't come for the account any more. This makes six times I have called for that $470, and I shall put it in my lawyer's hands."

"No, no; quite a mistake you, sabbee. Pay dollar all soon. Call again."

I was [illegible] tired of all this by seeing [illegible] ambassadors the other day, [illegible] me back to San Francisco, [illegible] ago, where I was dealing [illegible] various commodities which [illegible] affected by the Heathen [illegible] them a patient, civil, industrious [illegible] of people, ready to bargain [illegible] things as cheaply as possible; [illegible] pulously honest and ready to pay [illegible] the greatest of promptitude as long [illegible] dealt with one man. When I had [illegible] to work with a partnership concern, [illegible] was a terrible matter.

For instance, I had trusted one firm [illegible] with goods to the amount of nearly $500, and no money was forthcoming.

I bullied my collector terribly, for he always came back with an excuse instead of money, and the same tale, that the firm was perfectly honest and trustworthy, and that the money would be paid.

"Then, why don't they pay, Johnson?" I exclaimed.

"I wish you would give them a call yourself, sir," said Johnson.

And I said I would, and did, going to the Honger Mercantile Company seven times, and always being put off.

It was always the same; they were perfectly willing to pay, and messengers were sent, but to return, sometimes with one, sometimes with two, or even three or four members of the firm; but when [illegible] these Spenlows proffered them[illegible] ready to pay, there was always [illegible] the way, in the shape of [illegible] that Heathen Chinee,

[illegible] myself as I have [illegible] of this story, and as going to the place when a smiling Chinaman came up to me, and, holding his head on one side, he exclaimed: "Ingly Hong man, come again a morrow. Payee then all—payee ebbery dollar, oh, ciss."

"Well, look here," I said, "I will come in here to-morrow, at 11 o'clock, and shall expect to be—"

"Oh, ciss, payee all dollar. Give long, big order, lot. Goodee thousand dollar."

"I'll talk about taking your order, my Chinese friend, when you pay for the last," I said gruffly, and I went away.

"The fellow looks honest," I said; "but there's no trusting these foreigners. They take delight in tricking an Englishman or a Melican man, as they call it. Perhaps to-morrow, when I go, they'll all have pulled up stakes and gone east.

It was with some satisfaction, then, that on reaching their great shed warehouse, the next morning, I found Mr. Pigtail, in his long blue gown and bland smile standing at the door, ready to salute me with a dose of pigeon English, which I could hardly understand.

"Well, Mr. Ah Ree," I said, as I followed him into the bale-crowded warehouse, which certainly looked as prosperous as the great iron safe in the corner was substantial—"well, Mr. Ah Ree, I hope you are prepared to pay my little account this morning?"

"Ciss, ciss—readee payee," he said.

And placing a wicker chair for me, he went off and dispatched a couple of messengers, with urgent orders in his barbarian tongue, to each. This looked bad, for it was only a repetition of the tactics followed on former occasions—tactics which always resulted in a put-off. I looked terribly gruff; but Mr. Ah Ree, who was the senior partner, smiled and rubbed his hands as he beckoned me to follow him into the farther parts of the warehouse, and then showed me specimens of silk and sample teas, with coarse Chinese pottery.

"Well," I said to myself, growing a little more easy in my mind, "there's plenty to seize, at all events."

The result was that after my bland friend had talked to me for about a quarter of an hour, I booked a thousand dollar order for what an Englishman would call sundries.

"There," said I, closing my book with a slap, "this order shall be executed as soon as your last account is settled."

"Ciss, ciss—payee allee dollee," he said smiling and pointing to a seat.

Meanwhile, by slow degrees, five respectable-looking, Chihamen had come into the warehouse or store; and they come around me, smiling and talking in a bland, smooth way.

"You mean mischief," I said to myself, and my hand went involuntarily to my pocket, where, in accordance with San Francisco customs, I carried a revolver. "You mean to get rid of me and your debt together, my friends. Very good; but if you do, I'll take one of you by way of receipt." I suppose my face did not betray what I felt, for they closed around me in the calmest manner, making excuses, and asking me to be patient a little longer, for their messengers were out, as I understood them, to collect the amount I needed. It seemed to me that they were getting me farther and farther from the door into the gloomy obscurity of the warehouse, under the pretense of showing me fresh goods, till at last I felt that the time for action had come. In fact, one of the biggest of the party whispered something to his companions, and I seized my revolver and was about to draw it as a fresh Chinaman entered the building, and they hurried to meet him with a look of relief.

"Lucky for some of you, my friends," I said, drawing a breath of relief, and following them toward the door, meaning to take the first opportunity that offered to make a run for it. To my great surprise, though, Mr. Ah Ree came, and taking my arm, led me toward the great safe.

"Iron coffin, eh?" said I to myself.

"Countee out de dollar," said Mr. Ah Ree.

And the last arrival of his six companions went up to the safe, placed a key in a hole, and turned it. Then a second did so with another key in another hole, and so on, till six had unlocked six locks of the great safe, when Mr. Ah Ree took out a similar key to his companions and went up to the safe smiling, as he said to me—

As he spoke, he unlocked the safe, and turned the door on its massive hinges, and then, pulling out a drawer, he drew forth a bag marked 470—the amount dollars of my account—and handed the bag to me.

"No trustee no man," he said, smiling, as he shut and locked the door, his six partners locking it in turn. "No trustee once mans; all come at once, open door—all right."

From which I understood that, as to our trading communities, two or three, or even four partners have to sign a check to make it negotiable, my seven Chinese friends, all partners in their Hong or trading community, could make no payment without every man was present to help unlock the treasure safe. I laughed at the plan, for the heavy dollar bag made me feel in a very good temper. They laughed too, and shook hands very warmly, after the English fashion, as I took my departure.

"No once man run away all dollar," he said, laughing.

"I see," I said, laughing. "You shall have your goods in soon."

I sent them; and for a long while after the Hong of Ah Ree and I did a good deal of business; but it always took seven keys afterwards, when I wanted money, to open that safe.

The Way They Do It in Georgia.

Georgia has a stringent pistol law. The penalty is forfeiture of the pistol, a fine of fifty dollars and, at the discretion of the court, imprisonment for thirty days. A short time after this law went into effect, Judge Lester was holding court in one of the mountain counties of North Georgia; right in the midst of a cause, he asked the attorneys to suspend a few moments, and told the sheriff to lock the court house door and let no man pass out without permission from him. Then said the judge in a firm, decided way: "Gentlemen, I saw a pistol on a man in this room a few moments ago, and, I cannot reconcile it to my sense of duty as a peace officer to let such a violation of the law pass unnoticed. It may be that it is my duty to go before the grand jury and indict him, but if that man will walk up to this stand and lay his pistol and a fine of one dollar down here, I will let him off this time, otherwise I will go before the grand jury and testify against him."

The judge paused, and an attorney who was sitting down just before the stand got up, slipped his hand in his pocket, drew out a neat ivory-handled Smith & Wessen six shooter, and laid it and a dollar down before the judge.

"This is all right," remarked the judge, "but you are not the man that I saw with the pistol." At this, another attorney, sitting immediately in front of the judge, got up, and drawing out a small Colt's revolver, laid it and a dollar bill upon the stand.

"This is all right again," said the Judge, "but you are not the man I speak of."

Thereupon, a large man, just outside of the bar, walked around, ran his hand in his bosom, and drawing out a huge army pistol, laid it and a dollar on the stand.

"I declare," exclaimed the Judge, "if this don't beat all! You have done right, my friend; but you are not the man that I saw with the pistol."

This process went on until nineteen pistols and nineteen dollars were lying on the Judge's stand. Then there was a pause, and it appeared as if the crowd was pretty well disarmed; at least, if there were any more pistols in the house, their owners did not seem disposed to give them up.

"Gentlemen," resumed the Judge, "there are nineteen persons who have acted like men in this business; but the man I saw with the pistol has not come up yet, and now," continued he, pulling out his watch and looking toward the far side of the court-house, "I will give him one minute to accept my proposition, and if he does not do it in that time, I will point him out to the sheriff and order him taken into custody."

Immediately two men from the back part of the house began to move towards the judge's stand. Once they stopped and looked at each other, and then, coming slowly forward, laid down their pistols and their dollars. As they turned to leave the Judge said: "This man with the black whiskers is the one that I saw with the pistol."

Then Judge Lester gave a short lecture upon the cowardly, foolish and wicked habit of carrying concealed weapons and assured his audience that in the future the law would be strictly enforced. The court proceeded with its regular business, and it is needless to add that in that county the habit of carrying pistols was broken up.

A gentleman in Illinois has successfully invented a process for making paper lumber. It is made of straw, pulped and hot-rolled under heavy pressure; chemicals in it prevent it from burning at all, and it is not affected by water; can be sawed and worked as any other lumber, and can be handsomely finished, polished, or marbled. Thus the paper lumber to consume the straw of our fields, and the hay-stove, solve the problem of the failure of our timber supply. Then we have paper car wheels, water buckets, tables, chairs, boxes, dolls, twine, collars, cuffs, shirt bosoms, napkins, flags, jewelry, and we used to have plenty of paper money.

A Wonderful Runner.

"The interest in pedestrianism, manifested by the gathering of throngs of people to witness walking and running matches, was equally great in the early part of the century, but was then excited by the wonderful, and almost incredible performance of one man. This was Mensen Ernst, born in Bergen, Norway, on Oct. 19, 1799. He was the son of a sea captain, and when still a boy entered the English navy. Although his powers as a runner were displayed even in his boyhood, he had made three voyages to the East Indies, and had completed a three years' cruise on the frigate Caledonian, before he made a public exhibition of them, which he first did by running a race in London, when 19 years old. Though up to this time he had had no training, and had even lacked a pedestrian's ordinary opportunities for muscular development, he was famed throughout the navy as a runner, and wonderful stories as to his extraordinary powers circulated among all branches of the service. At last a heavy sum of money was wagered by the officers of his ship that Mensen would run from London to Portsmouth, a distance of 73 miles in less than ten hours. The feat was attempted and accomplished, the distance being covered by the young sailor in exactly nine hours. Shortly after, he ran from London to Liverpool, a distance of [illegible] hours. Although time successful as a runner, Mensen did not quit the sea until after having distinguished himself by bravery in the battle of Navarino, fought Oct. 20, 1827. Soon after that date he became a professional runner, and, after winning a number of lesser matches, was induced to undertake the great feat of running from Paris to Moscow. He started from the Place Vendome at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of June 11, 1831, and entered the Kremlin at 10 o'clock a. m. of June 25, having accomplished the distance of 1,760 miles in 13 days and 18 hours.

"This feat created a decided sensation throughout Europe, and the employment of Mensen as a courier extraordinary by kings and princes became a popular amusement in European courts. He ran from country to country, and from court to court, bearing messages of congratulation, condolence, or dispatches of greater importance, and whenever matched against the regular mounted couriers easily succeeded in beating them. He always carried with him a map, a compass, and as many biscuits and ounces of raspberry syrup as there were to be days occupied on the journey. In winter he took with him a pair of long, slender Norwegian snow-shoes, and in traveling he always chose the most direct line, turning out neither for mountains nor rivers, but climbing the one and swimming the other. He never walked, but invariably ran, keeping up a long, swinging lope for hours at a time without rest. His only refreshment was one biscuit and an ounce of raspberry syrup per day, and two short rests of ten or fifteen minutes each in twenty-four hours. These rests he took while standing and leaning against a tree or other object of support. At such times he covered his face with a handkerchief and slept, and after such a nap he would pursue his way apparently as refreshed as though he had slept for hours. He was very uneasy when compelled to be quiet, and could not sit still for an hour without feeling a sense of suffocation. He was a very amiable man, a favorite with all who knew him, and was made much of by his royal patrons.

"In 1833, he started from Munich at 1 p. m., June 6, with dispatches from the King of Bavaria to his son Otho, King of Greece. These dispatches were delivered at Nauplia at 9 a. m. on July 9; or seven days sooner than if they had been sent by the regular post. In 1836, while in the employ of the British East India Company, Mensen was charged with the conveying of dispatches from Calcutta to Constantinople through Central Asia. The distance is 5,615 miles, which the messenger accomplished in 56 days, or in one-third of the time made by the swiftest caravan. On this wonderful journey he made his way across terrible deserts, awful salt swamps, where for hundreds of mills he saw no living being, and through countries whose inhabitants were savage robbers, and who lived in a state of continual warfare. The man seemed invested with supernatural powers, and his fame spread far and wide. One of the most interesting problems of the age being the discovery of the source of the Nile, it was suggested that this wonderful man be employed to follow the course of the river to its sources, and thus determine them. Prince Puckler Muskan, who had himself traveled extensively in Egypt, and had made several unsuccessful attempts to penetrate to the head waters of the Nile, offered to defray all expenses and reward Mensen handsomely if he would undertake the trip. The indefatigable runner consented to make the a attempt, and on May 11, 1842, set out from Muskan, in Silesia, whence he ran to Jerusalem, where he had some business to attend to. Thence he continued his way to Cairo and up the western bank of the Nile, through Lower and Middle and Upper Egypt. Here, just outside the village of Syane, he was seen on the morning of Jan. 22, 1843, to stop and rest, leaning against a palm-tree with his face covered by a handkerchief. He rested so long that some persons tried to wake him, but they tried in vain, for he was dead. He was buried at the foot of the tree, and it was years before his friends in Europe knew what fate had befallen him."

A BAD PLAN.—A true wife will not cherish her husband's weaknessess by working upon them to her own advantage. She should not irritate him. If irritation should occur, women must expect to hear from most men a strength and vehemence of language far more than the occasion requires. Mild as well as stern men are prone to this exaggeration of language; let not a woman be tempted ever to say anything sarcastic or violent in retaliation. The bitterest repentence must needs follow such indulgence if she does. Men frequently forget what they have themselves said, but seldom what is uttered by their wives. They are grateful, too, for forbearance in such cases, for while asserting most loudly that they are right, they are often conscious that they are wrong.

The present year is the eighteen hundredth anniversary of the destruction of Pompeii and Herculaneum by Mount Vesuvius. There is to be a scientific commemoration of the event in Pompeii in November.

On Shop Windows.

An old song has it, "My face is my fortune, sir, she said"—and what the face is to the person, the show-window is to the merchant. We look at the stranger's face, and from it obtain some conception of his character and habits; so a casual glance at a display of goods on exhibition in window or case, betrays either artistic arrangement and perception of effects on the part of the proprietor, or carelessness and poor taste. We judge, if the window is well filled with taking goods, that a similar quality will be found inside, and are attracted; while on the contrary, neglect at once repels custom. How often should a window be changed? is a question that at once arises. No set rule can be given; but, notice this: arrange your goods with an eye to showing as full a line as you have, not placed at right angles with each other as though they were bricks, and must be placed just so—bear in mind the harmony of colors, then note the effect on passers by. An habitual wayfarer is rushing past, intent on business—some article catches his eye—his attention is arrested, and your first object is gained, for the fancy must be taken previous to the sale, as surely as fishing precedes catching; and, to repeat the old adage "a thing that pleases, is half sold." Notice, now, as the days pass by, your same man; he glances at the window, sees nothing new, and passes on.

How to arrange a window is more difficult to suggest without a knowledge of window and goods, but one or two [illegible] against placing all your goods on a level. Nothing tends to displease the eye so much. Look at a barren stretch of marsh—it is monotonous in the extreme, but, of the mountains one never tires. For the same reason, though differing in degree, aim to have your window elevated in some parts, not necessarily a pyramid, but using taller goods for a background, and so avoid the distressing flatness; again, avoid multiplying varieties in your display. Experience shows that a few goods of a kind arranged with apparent carelessness, but really with consummate art, left in for a few days, and then replaced by some other line, tend to convey the impression of an immense variety. Leading fancy goods houses in our large cities are adopting this method—imported, as it is in fact, from Paris and Vienna, and the Parisian window displays are of world-wide celebrity. A thousand and one things occur to each man in dressing his window, and no fear need be felt of having a similarity with other houses. The difference in location, shape and size of window must of course rule somewhat in determining the display, but bear in mind that but for her face the beggar-maid would not have become Mrs. Queen Cophetua, and without an attractive window, customers will have an unpleasant likeness to angels' visits.

How Women Keep "Expense-Books."

It is a touching sight to see a woman begin to make up her expenses, having firmly resolved to put down every cent she spends, so as to find out how to economize, and where all the money goes. Procuring a small book, she makes a due entry, and on the Monday after the first Saturday in which her husband brings home his pay, she carefully tears the margin off a newspaper and, with a blunt pencil, strikes a trial balance, something in this way: "John brought me home $48.40, and $1.43 I had is $49.83, and $1.00 I lent Mrs. Dixon is $50.83—but, hold on, I oughtn't to enter that, because when she returns it it'll go down. That was $49.83, and what have I done with that?" Then she puts down the figures, leaving out the items to save time—a process which enables her to leave out most of the items to where a round sum is invoved, on the supposition that they have already been put down. As thus: "Six dollars and fourteen cents for meat; and 10 cents for celery; and 10 cents on the street cars; and a bad five cent piece I got in exchange; and $2.81 I paid the milkman, who owes me 19 cents—that's $3; and 15 cents at church; and the groceries—they were either $15.60 or $16.50, and I don't remember which they were, but I guess it must have been $15.60 for the grocer said if I'd give him a dime he could give me half a dollar, which would make even change, and I couldn't, because the smallest I had was a quarter; and $2.75 for mending Katie's shoes, which, is the last money that shoemaker ever gets from me; and 10 cents for celery—no, I put that down." Finally she sums up her trial-balance sheet, and finds that it foots up $64.28, which is about $15.00 more than she had originally. She goes over the list several times and checks it carefully, but all the items are correct, and she is just about in despair when her good angel hints that there may be a possible mistake in the addition. Acting upon the suggestion, she foots up the column and finds that the total is $44.28, and that according to the principles of arithmetic she ought to have $5.65. Then she counts her cash several times, the result varying from $1.40 up to $1.97, but she then happily discovers that she has been mistaking a $2.50 gold piece for a cent, and remembers that she gave the baby a trade-dollar to cut its gums with. On the whole, she has come within 86 cents of a balance, and that, she says, is close enough, and she enters in one line of the account book "Dr.—By household expenses" so much; and is very happy till she remembers, just after going to bed, that she has omitted $2.75 for her husband's hat.

The Friend of Delicate Ladies.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing.—Wherever once introduced and be comes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents). Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

In Paris, children's parties are pretentious affairs. The decorations and toilets are fully as prominent features and as elaborate as among older society followers. At one of the children's balls was a child of eleven decked in thousands of dollars worth of diamonds, and a toilet of lace worth six hundred dollars, with a gossamer fan mounted in turquoise and pearls. Where all should be joy, life and light in this youthful crowd, there are the same rivalries, heart-burnings and envious feelings that embitter and spoil the pleasure of older hearts.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle free of cost, or regular size for $1.00. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich.

It is annoying to be over-amiable. "The fact is, I forget everything," says Jones. "There are lots of people whom I hate most religiously: but my memory is so confoundedly treacherous that I can't remember over night who they are. There is Pingree, now. I had a big row with him yesterday, and if you'll believe it, I caught myself shaking hands with the fellow, this morning."

Given Up by the Doctors.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

There has been lately turned out at Milan a new kind of bread made with blood from raw flesh. It is said to be a preventive of scurvy, and to do away, among peasants, with all desire for alcoholic drinks. The difficulty of blood coagulation being overcome, the "blood bread" will last for years. Twenty per cent. of its ingredients consist in blood, and it is more nutritious than the ordinary loaves of one cent each.

A Grand Reputation.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure has reached a reputation that is not limited by the confines of section or country. There are no injurious substances, nor false and temporary stimulants in the preparation. It is purely vegetable and compounded under a formula that has passed severe tests, and won endorsements from some of the highest medical talent in the country.—New York World.

False fronts of shirts, vest and coat are now furnished corpses by the New York undertakers for $10; a saving of $30 on a suit. "Ain't the deceased loss enough without chucking in his clothes, too?" remarked one of them in defense of the sham. He computes that $3,000,000 were annually wasted in grave clothes, besides being a temptation to grave robbery.

THE SYMPTOMS

of Liver Complaint are a bitter or a bad taste in the mouth, Pain in the Back, Side or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism, Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Bowels alternately costive and lax, Headache, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done, Debility, Low Spirits, a thick Yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the liver, the largest gland in the body, is generally the seat of disease, and if not regulated in time, great suffering, misery, and death will ensue.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 6, 1881.

Hancock's majority in the State of Texas was only 85,000. Barnum should have distributed some of this surplus through the State of New York.

The new chief of the Weather Bureau had better stop fooling around in this way. Between Hazen and Vennor the weather has become terribly tangled up lately.

Now, if Mr. Vennor would compromise on two feet of snow and a thermometer a little above zero, he would not only please the community much better but would help his own reputation amazingly.

All roads in Michigan lead to Lansing this week. The Solons are assembling in force, the friends of the different Senatorial candidates are marshalling their forces and the political trouble will now begin.

Circumstances seem to favor the appointment of Judge Cooley to the Supreme Bench. Not only his ability as a constitutional lawyer, and the high reputation of him held by the bar of several states are in his favor, but also the fact that for two years he was a resident of Ohio.

Leap year has gone. The fair damsels who neglected to improve the last week of the old year to pop the necessary question missed a rare opportunity. What old bachelor, however crusty, would feel like battling with a temperature of twenty degrees below zero, when by only saying "Yes" he could secure a dutiful helpmate to build his fires and sew on his buttons?

A story is told about a Baltimore whose mother transformed her auburn [illegible] to a blonde, to effect a [illegible] within one year afterwards fond mother had [illegible] burying her daughter whose death was caused by the poisonous substances used in coloring her hair. The follies of fashion seem to flourish even in this enlightened age.

GEN. GRANT is writing an article for the February number of the North American Review, advocating the Nicaragua Canal Scheme. The same number of the Review will contain a contribution by Judge Tourgee, author of "The Fool's Errand," entitled "Aaron's Rod in Politics," and one by Oliver Wendell Holmes, on "The Pulpit and the Pew."

Gen. Garfield went to church at Mentor the other Sunday and when hitching a pair of colts to his wagon to return home, after service, he forgot to buckle the lines to the bits, and narrowly escaped a runaway. An old farmer, who was standing by, sagely remarked, "General, you will have to do better than that when you take the reins of government or the political mules will get away with you."

Hon. C. M. Croswell retires from public life, after many years of faithful public service, and four years in the Gubernatorial chair, which will take their place in history as the most prosperous years that Michigan has ever known. Better than all else he retires with the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens of all parties. His old neighbors welcome him back to Adrian with the hearty benediction, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

One of the encouraging signs of the times is the effort now making to secure the appointment of Judge Cooley to the U. S. Supreme Court Bench.—The Evening News has these pertinent words on the subject:

The movement to secure the appointment of Judge Cooley to the Supreme Court to succeed Justice Swayne is gathering strength. The papers throughout the northwest, without distinction of party, speak favorably of it, and oddly enough, the members of the bar in Wisconsin, Illinois and other States seem to be more thoroughly in earnest in the matter than is the bar of Michigan. Petitions are being systematically circulated in other States, meetings are held, and the subject is urged through the press.—Isn't it about time the bar of Michigan was waking up?

THE NEW CENSUS.

The U. S. census of 1880 is unquestionably the fullest and most accurate of any that has ever been taken. The public will show that our aggregate population on the first of July last was over fifty million. The most expressive lesson connected with the new census is the marvellous growth of the West and South, which will increase the political power of these two sections very materially during the coming decade. Texas has increased the most rapidly of any state during the past ten years, having gained almost fifty per cent. The census suggests many interesting comparisons.

The fifty millions and more of people in the country last July must by this time have increased to fifty-one millions. New York State alone has about one-tenth of this number; and a central area of six contiguous States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, will comprise nearly nineteen million people. New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio contain twelve and a half millions. Rhode Island has more people than Florida. Illinois contains over three million people, and is now only 120,000 behind Ohio, which it will probably surpass by 1890, thus becoming the third State in the Union. If Missouri be counted henceforth among Western rather than Southern States, the most populous of the latter will be Kentucky; but just behind are four close rivals, Texas, Tennessee, Georgia, and Virginia, having each fifteen hundred thousand and less than sixteen hundred people. Iowa is one of the rapidly growing States of the Northwest; she is far ahead of Wisconsin. Two states widely separated in geographical position were neck-and-neck last July in population and both had grown surprisingly in ten years—Kansas, with 995,335 people and South Carolina, with 995,706. By this time each has more than a million to her credit, so making the States containing a million or more people already 21 in number.

THE NEW YEAR.

The year 1881 will, in all likelihood, bring with it events of great import upon both sides of the Atlantic.

The old despotisms of Europe are crumbling; the people of Ireland are making another vigorous effort to free themselves from the oppressions of the British yoke, and the common people everywhere are striving to improve their temporal and political condition.

In this country, which seems to be peculiarly favored at present, we are entering upon a new era of business prosperity. The animosity heretofore existing between the North and South is rapidly passing away, and both sections seem to be bending their energies to the development of their agricultural, mineral and manufacturing resources. We are at peace with all the world outside, and at peace among ourselves.

Every man, however humble his position in society, can bear a hand in promoting the general prosperity. He can be temperate in habit, frugal in expenditure, ready to lend his aid to the upbuilding of schools, churches and benevolent enterprises. And most important of all, he can be industrious. The greatest affliction of modern society is the drone. He who does nothing, soon learns to do mischief. The man who devotes his energies for six days in the week to some honest respectable work, and rests on the seventh day, rarely falls into evil ways. That every one may find plenty of honorable work to do during 1881 is the best wish we can offer at the beginning of this new year.

GOOD COMPANY, ($3 a year, Springfield, Mass.), number sixteen has a characteristic paper by Mr. John Burroughs entitled an Idyl of the Honey-bee, which initiates one into the methods and delights of bee-hunting as pursued by an ardent lover of exhilarating tramps through fields and woods. Another contribution characteristic of its writer, and timely as well, is Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney's story The Secrets of the Obelisks, which takes us back to the earlier days, or centuries rather, of the venerable "Needle" about to be set up in New York Central Park. Under the form of a coloquy Octave Thanet gives us an insite into the wretched condition both as to buildings and management that characterizes most of the jails throughout the country, adding suggestions as to their reform. The Remnant of a Lost Nation tells of the present status of the few survivors of a tribe that Pizarro failed of subduing.

WE direct attention to the prospectus of the Michigan Farmer in another column. This old stand-by among the agricultural press has a strong hold upon the farmers of the State, and its position cannot be shaken. It takes its place at the head of the column for all Michigan farmers.

WM. MCCOWEN, the old reliable furniture dealer of Tecumseh commences the new year with a bran new ad. Read it.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

John Chinaman in Ohio.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—Even the heathen Chinee succeeds in Ohio. One of them has just been sent to the penitentiary for three years.

The Best Thing for Canada.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat, (Rep.)—The best thing Canada can do with its unfinished railroad is to bankrupt itself by building it, and then come into the United States to get out of debt. As an independent Dominion Canada is not a success.

Healthy Place.

New York Star, (Dem.)—It has well nigh passed into a proverb that the Supreme Court of the United States is the healthiest place in the country.—Its occupants seldom die, and are never known to be so incapacitated as to be unable to draw their salary.

A Difference of Opinion.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—There is a slight diffegence of opinion in Ohio in regard to civil service reform. The ins are all in favor of it and the outs are all against it. As the outs are, however, in a large minority in that State, it does not make much difference.

Ohio.

Steubenville Gazette.—Ohio produced one-eighth of all the wheat and wool grown and one-fourth of all the iron made in the United States during the past year, besides a large crop of statesmen, including a brand new President elect. Why couldn't it be called the United States of Ohio?

Ohio at the Inaugural Ball.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—The surface of the building in Washington in which the inauguration ball is to be held covers two and a quarter acres.—The two acres are reserved for Ohio; the rest of the Union will have to stow itself away somehow in the quarter acre.

A Little Good Advice.

New York Tribune, (Rep.)—The Democratic papers which are trying hard to stir up a row in the Republican household are wasting their energies. They had better attend to the quarrel in their own family. The spectres of discord which they are endeavoring to raise around General Garfield are so unsubstantial that they are not visible in the clear atmosphere of Mentor.

Blaine In Good Health.

New York Tribune, (Rep.)—The Democratic newspapers were sure that Mr. Blaine's defeat at Chicago was his political death; yet they are now engaged in a lively discussion of his chances for the first Cabinet position under President Garfield. For a man who died last June Mr. Blaine displays astonishing vigor. He may yet attend the funeral of the Democratic party.

Change His Occupation.

Cincinnati Enquirer, (Dem.)—Weaver, who called Sparks a liar, and wanted to fight, in the House of Representatives on Tuesday, led the singing in Rev. De La Matyr's church last Sunday. It will never do for Rev. De La Matyr to allow this person to occupy such a conspicuous position in his church. Until Mr. Weaver shows a more subdued and Christian spirit let him be employed to pump wind into the organ.

Not So Bad After All.

New York Tribune, (Rep.)—There is no Secretary of the Navy. It has been decided that the President cannot legally renew Secretary Ramsey's ten days' assignment as Acting Secretary of the Navy, and there is consequently a vacancy in the Cabinet.—This would be a melancholy statement with which to begin the New Year if we did not know that the mere mention of the fact will develop unsuspected capacities of self-sacrifice on the part of a regiment of statesmen.

An Interesting Religious Event.

Cincinnati Enquirer, (Dem.)—A dispatch from Washington brought the welcome intelligence that De La Matyr preached in one of the churches in that stronghold of sin on last Sunday, his choir being led by Weaver, the Greenback candidate for President. This news comes like a bird of promise in the skies. When members of Congress and Presidential candidates turn to the church, we can not give the world up as utterly bad and without hope. We do not know whether De La Matyr is much of a preacher or whether Weaver is much of a chorister, but the country will be willing to overlook indifferent preaching and poor singing for the sake of the example these statesmen have given us. It would be interesting to know from what text Rev. De La Matyr sought to shed the light of divine truth in the City of Washington—whether he discoursed upon the thirty pieces of silver or taught a lesson from the incident of the dove bringing the green back to Noah. But whether his text was one thing or another, De La Matyr and Weaver are on the right track, and we hope to soon be able to announce that they have come over to the Lord's side indeed, and are voting the straight Democratic ticket.

PHILADELPHIA TIMES.

THE TIMES FOR 1881.

THE TIMES will enter the New Year with a larger circle of regular readers than it had at any previous period of its history, and the important events of the next year must steadily enlarge the field of independent journalism.

A new administration will be inaugurated; new political occasions will create new political duties; the great commercial and industrial prosperity of the country must stimulate progress and thrift in all sections, and the tendency of political power will be toward corruption and despotism, as it ever is when the people are diverted from the stern criticism of authority by peace and plenty.

THE TIMES will be in the future, as it has been in the past, absolutely independent of political parties, but earnestly and fearlessly devoted to integrity and patriotism in our statesmanship and to the freedom and sanctity of the ballot. Dependent party organs will continue to babble about party men and party measures; to excuse the public jobber and the demagogue; to suppress, pervert or deny the truth when party interests demand it, and to lavish the regulation praise of the servant to the master; but the growing intelligence of the age daily multiplies the readers of the independent newspaper, and the journals which best reflect the rapidly increasing independence of the people will be the great American journals of the future.

THE TIMES aims to reach the highest standard of the independent newspaper. It fearlessly opposes corruptionists and rings in all parties, whether in city, State or nation. It opposes every form of imperial political denominations, whether represented by an individual, by a faction or by a party. It opposes sectionalism North and South as the demon of the Republic, and it demands public tranquility and the supremacy of liberty and law for every citizen of the Union.

THE TIMES will begin the New Year strengthened in all its already exceptionally strong departments. Its Annals of the War will be continued in the WEEKLY EDITION, with specially interesting extracts therefrom in the other editions, and the contributors for 1881 to this important feature of the paper will be from the most distinguished soldiers and civilians of both North and South. Its large list of contributors in this and in foreign countries will be more than maintained; its reliable news correspondence is unsurpassed by that of any other journal of the country; its various departments essential to a complete newspaper for the home and family circle are constantly enlivened by fresh writers, and it will maintain the position it has won solely on its merits, as one of the most reliable and complete newspapers of the world.

TERMS: DAILY—delivered by carriers, for twelve cents a week; mail subscription, six dollars a year, or fifty cents a month, postage free. SUNDAY EDITION—Double sheet, two dollars a year, postage free; single copies, four cents. THE petitioners for Prohibitory constitutional amendment begin to rattle into the office of the Secretary of the State central committee. As per latest advices 25,000 had already been received. Word comes from all quarters that everybody signs it, with but very rare exceptions. Even drinking men eagerly sign it.

IT is not only quite exasperating to the audience but must be also to the players to see the way in which the scenery is handled in the Opera House. If the machinery by which the scenes are manipulated is in working order, then the persons that attend to it do not understand their business, and vice versa. Wherever the difficulty is it should be attended to by the Opera House managers. It is certainly quite ludicrous to an audience and embarrassing to an actor to have one half of the scenes representing a street in a city and the slide upon the other side instead of completing the street scene, represent a half of a forest scene, as it did for a very short time Tuesday evening.

INJURED BY A BULL.

On Tuesday morning last about nine o'clock, while Mr. Albert Southworth of Raisin, (2½ miles south of Tecumseh) was exercising a monstrous Durham bull, weighing nearly 2,000 lbs., in the yard, the bull became enraged, broke the strap with which he was being led and made an attack upon his keeper. The bull catching Mr. Southworth between his horns threw him into the air, falling upon the point of the right shoulder. Mr. S. sustained a dislocation of the shoulder joint and was otherwise badly bruised, the head of the bone of the arm being thrown downwards into the arm-pit. Dr. C. M. Woodward was called and reduced the dislocation and Mr. Southworth is feeling as comfortable as could be expected under the circumstances. Mr. Southworth had butchered his hogs the day before and had some blood upon his clothes, and it is thought that the smell of the blood enraged the bull After getting Mr. S. down the ferocious animal made another attack, but was driven off by Mr. Southworth, who still retained in his hand the leading stick which was used to attach to the ring in the bull's nose, and with which, coupled with coolness and courage, the enraged beast was driven off and turned his attention to tearing down the strawstack. Improving his opportunity Mr. Southworth soon placed the fence between himself and his adversary. This is truly a narrow escape from a terrible death.

A BATTLE OF FISTS.

Last Friday Doctors Vredenburg and Doty started for Ridgeway, and as they were driving over Raisin river bridge they passed a team driven by Charles Shaler, of Ridgeway. Shaler for some reason became angry because they passed him, and on the road to Ridgeway Shaler would run his horses and pass the two doctors, and then slacken the speed of his team and prevent any one from passing him. Shaler arrived at Ridgeway first and went into the store of Peter Sharp, where Messrs Doty and Vredenburg found him. When he saw Doctor Vredenburg he turned upon him, and the words that were interchanged became rather abusive and finally led to blows. Vredenburg seemed to be too much for Shaler at first and succeeded in putting in some effective blows. In a short time, however, the two pugilists were quieted and went out of doors. Mr. Doty who went down to see his sister, Mrs. Sharp, remained inside, until he noticed that Vredenburg and Shaler were again endeavoring to spoil each other's figures. Mr. Doty ran out of doors when Vredenburg cried out to him that he had hurt his knee, and at the same time Shaler run away. Vredenburg was taken into the store, and upon examination his knee-pan was found to be broken into and his fingers considerably disfigured by Shaler's teeth. Vredenburg at the present time is unable to walk, and Shaler, though able to walk around is somewhat battered up in the face. Vredenburg has taken legal action against Shaler, and as soon as he can walk will bring the matter up before the justice.

The above is Mr. Doty's version of the affair. On the other hand, Shaler claims that Vredenburg attempted to pass him and struck his horses with a whip, which was the whole cause of the trouble on the road. Shaler also claims that Vredenburg commenced the fuss at Ridgeway, and at first Vredenburg had him at a disadvantage and that Shaler acted wholly in self defence. Furthermore Shaler says he has good witnesses to substantiate his story. The affair may end in litigation.

THE Chas. L. Davis comedy company presented Alvin Joslin at the Opera House last Tuesday evening. This was the second appearance at this place, and of course he was greeted with a crowded house. The auditorium and gallery were both crowded, many not being able to obtain seats.—The play consists of the ludicrous adventures of Uncle Alvin, an old Vermont farmer, in New York city. The audience was in an almost continual fit of laughter. The support was good; and several changes for the better have been made in the rendition of the play since last year, and whenever Uncle Alvin sees fit to visit Tecumseh again he will be welcomed as heartily as ever.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A RING.

Quite a little excitement was created in the jewelry store of J. H. Sherrard last week. A party consisting of three or four persons, one of whom was a fair bewitching damsel, living within the precincts of Ridgeway came into the store and wished to look at the finger rings. Alf. James, one of the gentlemanly clerks of the establishment proceeded to show the parties the rings. After they had looked over the stock Alf. started to show them a ring that he had out at first; but to his surprise it was not to be found. This seemed to be strange to Alf. as he is certain that the ring was surely there when they came in, but it had disappeared in some mysterious manner. Alf. at once concluded that one of the party had lifted the ring, so Justice Burridge was visited and a search warrant obtained which was placed in Ed. Merritt's hands for execution. Ed. went to the store and took the parties into the back part of it and commenced to search their clothing for the ring. During all the time the young lady kept up a sobbing only interupted by her frequent violent vociferations against the cruelty of subjecting an innocent girl to such an embarassing position. Ed searched their persons as far as the warrant allowed him, but no ring could be found. The parties were thereupon released, but Alf. still thinks that they obtained a good gold ring for the mere carrying of it away.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. Alice was a most affectionate and obedient daughter. It was the habit of her life to avoid whatever she thought would not be sanctioned by her devoted parents. Invitations from friends were accepted or declined in the light of their wishes, being ever glad to let father and mother direct her steps. Companions found in her one worthy of their friendship, in whom they could safely confide. Her short life was long enough alike to manifest unusual ability of character and to win the respect and tender regards of many. The girlhood of Alice Cairns was very sweet and very beautiful. Beloved in her life and mourned for with no common mourning at her death. The funeral services were attended by a large concourse of people and conducted by her pastor, Rev. Wm. Grandy, who sought to bring the comfort of the gospel to the stricken parents and sorrowing friends. Three years ago the great Physician gave her moral healing and has since kept her as in the hollow of his hand, until now it has pleased God to receive her unto himself. Her end was peace. She sleeps in Jesus. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

"She hath gone in the spring-time of life,
Ere her sky had been dimmed by a cloud,
While her heart with the rapture of love was yet rife,
And the hopes of her youth were unbowed.
From the loving who loved her so well;
From the heart that had grown to her own;
From the sorrow which late o'er her young spirit fell,
Like a dream of the night she hath flown.
And the earth now receives to its bosom its trust—
"Ashes to ashes and dust to dust."

FRAZER—On the 30th day of December, 1880, at the residence of her father in Tecumseh, Annie May, fourth daughter of G. W. and E. M. Frazer, aged 17 years, 8 months and 18 days.

During her protracted illness of eighteen weeks, this young sufferer manifested a constancy of patience which never once allowed a murmuring word to escape her lips; while she many a time expressed solicitude for those about her, particularly for her loving mother who nursed her most. Life always sweet, seems even more so for the young. It is a hard thing to be called upon to surrender life at a time when it begins to attain its rounded fullness and to drink from the fountains of pleasure and gladness springing up around most young lives; yet Annie May turned from the buoyancy and joys of youth to her death with a resignation at once appreciative and cheerful, her eye closing in death with the dying of the year. At a time of life while it is yet morning with many, her sun went down, shining as sets the morning star which goes not down behind the darkened west, nor hides obscured among the tempests of the sky, but melts away in the light of heaven.

A boiler in a shingle mill at Vestaburg, Montcalm county, exploded last week Monday morning, killing Frank Filkins, engineer, and Frank Ainsley, night watch, instantly. M. Turk, G. Wilcox, and one other, name not known, were badly injured. The explosion was caused by the pipes being frozen and when the cold water reached the boiler it exploded. The loss will probably reach $3,500, and perhaps more.

Dr. Smiley, of Marshall, had a tooth extracted Saturday morning which was broken off, leaving one prong. Suffering very intensely from the pain, he summoned Dr. Church, who gave him a small dose of morphine. Asking for more he was refused, but after Dr. Church had gone he arose, went to his own medicine case and took a liberal amount. As it proved, it was an over-dose. Some hours after, an attendant tried to wake him from his deep sleep, but in vain. Medical aid was called, when it was found that the doctor had quite ceased to breathe. Artificial respiration was created, and in an hour's time faint traces of life were manifest. Antidotes were administered through the skin, and the patient gradually rallied; till Monday he is out of danger.

Poisonous Coin.

Dr. Manouvrieg, a French physician, has published some novel observations on a disease peculiar to bank clerks. It has been repeatedly noticed for years that bankers' clerks after having handled for some days in succession large quantities of silver five franc pieces, suffer from disorders of the respiratory and digestive organs. These have been ascribed to a dark-greenish metallic dust, which is raised by taking the coin from the bags where they are generally kept, weighing them and putting them back. This dust impregnates the air of the room, blackens the skin and penetrates into the respiratory and digestive tracts together with the air and saliva. In the years 1872 and 1874, when the money which had been paid by France to Russia as a tribute was returned to France through mercantile transactions, the clerks spent an unusually long time in handling the coins, which had not been taken out of the bags for some years, and the affection was more marked than ever. Owing to the peculiar circumstances under which this affection has been first observed, there can be no doubt as to its being due partly to the copper (verdigris) and partly to the oxidized state of the silver. Both metals are used in the coinage of five franc pieces, in the proportion of nine-tenths of silver and one-tenth of copper.

CHANGE IN TYPES OF DISEASE.—Thirty years ago, chills and fever were common along the river bottoms of south-eastern Pennsylvania. The disease then almost disappeared, and for a score of years was nearly unknown. Now, miasmatic fevers are the prevailing type of disease in this section. As in the West and South, quinine and its salts are the great remedy, but the physicians have not yet learned to give large enough doses, the common form being a two-grain pill.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers, now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

A newspaper of January 8, 1821, mentions an extraordinary performance by the postmaster of Lismore, Ireland, then in his ninety-seventh year. He traveled for a wager from that town to Fermoy, in a Dungarvan oyster-tub, drawn by a pig, a badger, two cats, a goose and a hedgehog, with a large, red nightcap on his head, a pig-driver's whip in one of his hands, and in the other a common cow's horn, which he blew to encourage his team and give notice of this new mode of posting.

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies, positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents per bottle.

In some things the Chinese do not progress. Twenty centuries ago they made round coins with a square hole in the middle, and they have made no advance beyond that since then. The well known cash is a brass coin of that description, and although it is valued at about one mill and a half of our money, and has to be strung in lots of a thousand to be computed with any ease, it is the sole measure of value and legal tender of that country.

A clean and excellent paste is made from two parts gum tragacanth and one part powdered gum arabic; cover with cold water till dissolved, then reduce to the desired consistency with same. A few drops of carbolic acid will prevent its souring.

Many people who boast of being very "plain" and "blunt" are merely coarse and boorish. Such persons are constantly inflicting wounds which neither time nor medicine can ever heal.

On reading and filing the petition of Edwin B. Wood, administrator of the estate of said deceased with the will annexed, alleging that the debts of deceased and the expenses of administration of said estate have been paid, and that he is ready to file his final account, and praying that said account may be allowed, that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed to and amongst the persons entitled thereto, and for his discharge.

FARMERS' CLUB.

The Manchester and Franklin Farmers' Club met at the Dorr school house, Wednesday evening, Dec. 15, agreeably to adjournment. The President being absent, Mr. C. Davis took the chair and called the meeting to order. The Secretary's report was then read and approved.

Mr. James Bostedor opened the subject for discussion: winter care of breding ewes and their lambs and care of sheep generally. Mr. B. said he had usually had poor luck raising lambs; had lost nearly or quite one half; did not know whether he had fed too much or too little grain; had fed low ground hay and corn last year; had fed clover hay and clear corn; had lost more when he had fed part oats and corn than when he had fed clear corn.

Mr. Wm. English had never had bad luck, except one year, and that he thought was owing to over-feeding and lack of exercise; did not tend his buck that year, the only year in twenty; feeds a peck of corn with four quarts of oats mixed once a day to 50 ewes; had raised 36 lambs last year from 40 ewes. Mr. E. asked for the experience of others as to tending the buck or turning him loose into the flock.

Mr. Charles Davis said as far as his experience goes, he could see no difference; thought fat ewes were more liable to have weak lambs than those not fat.

Mr. English said fat ewes, made so by feeding on grain, might have weak lambs, but if fat from feeding on grass the lambs would not be weak.

Mr. Charles Bostedor kept a small flock of sheep; had good luck raising lambs; had not lost over three lambs from 30 ewes; feeds corn and oats equal parts; believes in giving sheep air and exercise and keeping them in a dry place; had kept his buck three years and his lambs were hearty and healthy.

Mr. Eddy had always kept his sheep under shelter in winter; had good luck raising lambs; paid good attention to his ewes in breeding time; feeds cornstalks, straw and hay; feeds corn and oats, increasing the feed gradually towards spring; had fed corn with bran and clear corn with good results; after a ewe drops her lamb would feed bran-mash. To remove a dead lamb would give the ewe a teaspoonful each of laudanum and turpentine.

Mr. English had a sure remedy for a sheep having the stretches, viz: a tablespoonful of epsom salts.

Some general remarks were made upon the liability of sheep being poisoned from eating plants. As sheep will eat a much larger variety of plants and reject fewer than any other domestic animal, it was therefore decided that sheep are liable to be poisoned.

The Secretary asked what time farmers usually commenced feeding grain after sheep are taken up. Several answered as soon as the sheep are taken up for winter feeding.

The executive committee decided on the following subject for discussion at our next meeting: Winter butter making and cows, and how to feed for butter.

Club adjourned to meet again in four weeks. S. H. HARTWELL, Secretary.

THE DAIRY.

The lack of uniformity in the quality of dairy products has been a great drawback to their profitable manufacture. The men who have been able to make good butter every week in the year have been able to sell for high prices. But the men who have carried good butter to the market one week and poor butter the next have not found a ready sale at prices which were wholly satisfactory. And it may be regarded as settled that the one great thing for which the butter maker should strive is uniform excellence of the product. When this uniformity can be secured, and not till then, will the demand be steady, sales quick and prices high enough to yield a large profit.—Farming For Profit.

Vick's Floral Guide.

Of the many Guides and Seed and Plant Catalogues sent out by our Seedsmen and Nurserymen, and that are doing so much to inform the people and beautify and enrich our country, none are so beautiful, none so instructive as Vick's Floral Guide. Its paper is the choicest, its illustrations handsome, and given by the hundred, while its Colored Plate is a gem. This work, although costing but 10 cents, is handsome enough for a Gift Book, or a place on the parlor table. Published by James Vick, Rochester, New York.

FERTILIZERS.

There are soils on which wheat does not yield well, because they are deficient in organic matter. Yet thirty bushels of wheat and thirty-six hundred pounds of straw would require, in a soluble form and properly distributed, only about sixty-two and a quarter pounds of organic material, in addition to that which is freely supplied by water and the air. In such a case the failure results from the want of this very slight quantity of plant-food, in a condition in which it can be used, in a whole acre of land. By means of the decay of plants, and the death of worms and insects, together with absorption by the soil, the land is being constantly replenished with organic materials, while the chemical and mechanical changes constantly going on slowly, but surely, add to the stock of mineral elements which plants require. The gradual decomposition of the soil is a wise provision for preventing its waste by the carelessness of man, and keeping a constant supply of food ready for each generation of plants as its needs may require. The soil is really inexhaustible as far as its mineral elements are concerned. It may be badly used—so badly that only very small crops can be grown—but there will still remain vast quantities of plant-food waiting the proper time for their change. To some extent man can hasten the process which nature is constantly carrying on. He cannot do this so rapidly as to involve a great waste of these elements, but he can secure all that the largest crops which can be grown will require. The method is simple, and consists in merely following, on a smaller scale, the processes which nature has so long carried on. Pulverizing the soil will certainly unlock stores of plant-food which otherwise had remained unavailable. By taking a peck of soil from a common field which has been long under cultivation, drying and sifting it, it will be found that much the larger part will remain in the form of fragments of rocks, gravel, and hard lumps of earth, which will not pass a fine sieve. It is only the very fine particles which are in any condition to yield the plant-food which they contain. Consequently, only a small proportion of the soil has its plant-food in an available form. But the fragments of rocks, the pebbles, the gravel, and the lumps of earth, all contain some of the elements which plants require, and will surrender them just as soon as they are pulverized and rendered soluble.—Farming for Profit.

SAVING FODDER.

Col. F. D. Curtis, of Charlton, N.Y., a frequent contributor to the N. Y. Tribune and to Land and Home, says: "A large stock and a short supply of food have compelled us to study economy in feeding. Our system, as now fairly inaugurated, results in saving everything, that is, every sort of fodder is made and food is eaten up. The breeding sheep are fed straw in the morning, and a gill of buckwheat each, at noon they get another feeding of straw, and at night hay. In the morning the racks are cleared, and the pens raked down to the solid manure, and the entire quantity taken to the stable and fed to the young cattle. They eat this readily, as they get no other, and do just as well as if fed fresh forage from the barn. Nothing is wasted by the sheep. The horses are made to eat the contents of their racks clean, and they do just as well and better than to have a lot of hay left in the racks after each feeding. By this manner of feeding they are not allowed to gorge themselves, which is a good foundation for heaves, and a common one, and their appetites are kept keen, which improves digestion. An empty manger is always a good appetizer, and when stuffed is a poor one. An animal can feed too much as well as too little. The manure from the horse stable is kept separate from that of the cow stable, and carefully thrown into a pile by itself. When the cattle are turned into the yard in the middle of the day there is no waste from the horse stable. The cows are all fed in the stable, all they will eat up clean, so there is but little refuse, and what there is, is used for bedding the horse. Every animal is fed in a stable, and never in a yard. This is the daily round, and the way we make fodder go as far as possible."

Hints to Farmers.

Don't let your horses be seen standing much at the tavern door; it don't look right. Don't be without Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment near at hand to apply in case of accident. Keep good fences—especially line fences; it promotes good feelings among neighbors. Keep Downs' Elixir always in the house, and use in cases of sudden coughs, &c., as a safeguard against consumption and other dangerous diseases. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, taken according to directions, saves large expense in doctor's bills.

Nothing surpasses the purity and efficiency of American Ball-Blue in imparting to your washing an immaculate clearness. All grocers have it.

AGRICULTURE IN SCHOOLS.

It is probable that most of the pupils in the district schools, especially in rural districts, will follow farming as a business through life; hence, they should therein be taught that kind of learning which will specially aid and qualify them to practice their business most successfully.

Suitable text books should be supplied and competent teachers employed in the rural districts, to instruct the pupils in the principles and practice of agriculture; next to learning to read and write the science and practice of farming should be a regular branch of study, as the one next in importance; it is certainly of more consequence than Latin, Greek, or higher mathematics; botany, chemistry, geology, at least, should be taught in the schools.

While the several classes of farmers constitute a large proportion of voters, and a large majority of the wealth-producers, also paying the largest share of taxes into the National and State treasuries, they still have but a small, meager representation in National and State Legislatures—very disproportionally represented compared to their numbers, importance, and the heavy taxes which they pay.

But let them and their children be generally better educated, and they will soon be more largely and adequately represented in Congress and Legislatures by men of their own class and profession; and they will soon cease to be at the mercy of, so subject to, and controlled by, great railroad and other monopolies. Therefore, let us have agriculture taught as a regular branch of study in all our district schools.

With increased intelligence on all matters of interest to farmers—subjects of demand and supply, foreign markets, finances, etc., the proud and grasping ten, twenty and fifty-millionaires will not be so able to make and control laws and legislation, in a manner to exempt them from taxation; from employing, and being producers in some shape, instead of being merely accumulators of wealth. Look at W. H. Vanderbilt, for instance. He holds over $50,000,000 worth of Government bonds, on which he draws over $2,000,000 annually in interest—over $1,000,000 every six months—and yet he pays not a single dollar of taxes on all that immense sum; worse, he produces not a dollar of new wealth with it, neither of food, or clothing, or any useful article—he simply hoards that much of the profits of farmers' earnings; and worse still, he employs or pays not a single day's labor of the work of other men with it, but simply draws his gold certificate of interest from the U. S. Treasury, and no one is benefitted in the least.

Now, assume the majority of Michigan farmers to be worth $5,000, it will take 10,000 of those farmers to be owners of $50,000,000 worth of property, and they will have to work hard the year round and manage with close economy, all of them, to earn the interest he draws, even without work, while these farmers will also have to pay at least half a million of taxes annually out of their property—while his millions are exempt from taxes.

More study and knowledge will not only make farming more pleasant and profitable; but they will secure larger and better representation of that class in Congress, and guard against oppression by the money power. Agricultural papers can do, and are doing much in this direction; but the effective help of the common schools should be added to the good work of the public journals.—D. S. C. in Michigan Farmer.

With the new year, Ayer's American Almanac makes its customary appearance. It is a welcome visitor in every family. Its pages are replete with crisp medical advice, refreshing humor, and much information not usually found in such a work. Its astronomical calculations have a high reputation for accuracy, and they are adapted, in the various editions of the Almanac, to all parts of the globe. While a large portion of its pages are devoted to an elaborate advertisement of the medicinal preparations of this house, it is a noticeable feature that many prescriptions are freely given for the benefit of the sick, irrespective of Ayer's medicines. These preparations are universally used and appreciated for their valuable and reliable qualities. The almanac describes the application of these medicines to the diseases they are intended to cure. It can be obtained free of charge of any druggist or dealer in medicine.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. Our or other testimony merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption it is invaluable. Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and as cheap as its careful preparation and costly ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

DR S. D. HOWE,

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to add my grateful testimony to the army of witnesses to the virtues of your justly celebrated Arabian remedies. For a long time my wife was seriously afflicted with hacking cough, oppressed breathing, soreness of the chest, and constant acute pain in the lower portion of the right lung and under the shoulder blade. Her sufferings were intense, and she became extremely nervous and prostrated. Her disease was pronounced consumption by the physicians of Chicago and other cities, whose prescriptions had been taken without benefit. When you visited Chicago in June, 1878, we called on you, having very little hope of deriving help from your treatment. We were inspired with hope by the skillful manner in which your thorough examination was conducted, and the satisfactory explanation with which you closed your diagnosis. My wife determined to take your medicines in accordance with your plan, and practical directions. She began to use the Arabian Milk Cure and Arabian Tonic; their beneficial effect at once became manifest—the cough loosened and soon ceased, respiration became easy, the soreness of the chest was relieved and all pain removed, she began to gain in flesh and improve in strength and appearance. I fully believe that your medicines and skillful advice have saved the life of my wife. She unites with me in this grateful tribute to the merit of your remedies.

Very respectfully yours,
JOSEPH E. GRAY.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The Lenawee County Legislature assembled last week and remained in session from Monday until Friday. Much important business was transacted, an abstract of which is given below:

MONDAY, Dec. 27.—Board met pursuant to adjournment.

The bonds of the County Clerk elect were presented and referred to the judiciary committee.

B. L. Baxter appeared before the board and made some suggestions with regard to a proposed amendment of the drainage laws. The matter was referred to the drainage committee.

A committee consisting of Harkness, Warren and Knapp was appointed to consider the claim of a reward by the capturers of the jail breakers.

On motion of Sup. Bradner the board of County Canvassers were allowed the same mileage and per diem as the board of Supervisors.

On Thursday Mr. Harkness, from the special committee to settle the claims for the capture of the jail breakers, reported that the committee had decided to recommend an equal division of the reward offered for the capture of Butler and Austin between James A. Pratt, Leander Baker, Martin Harmon, W. A. Mace, T. A. Rowley, Levi Acker, Geo. Blair, D. B. Morgan, Z. Crittenden, Thos. Heekman, Henry House, Wm. Price, Joel Beeckey, Milo Wilson, John and Lucien Baldwin and James Holmes.—Report accepted and adopted. This would give the persons aforesaid at least fifteen cents apiece. Sup. Gates moved to amend by striking out the first thirteen names and paying them $2, and dividing even between Lucien Baldwin and son, James Holmes and Levi Acker the balance of the reward. Lost. The vote was then taken on the original report which was carried.

A large batch of small claims were then reported and allowed.

A ditch grievance of Mr. Patterson was referred to the drain committee.

TUESDAY.—Sup. Dreher offered a resolution, reciting that the county drain law was defective and provocative of billious law suits and extravagant litigation, and instructing the representatives of the legislature to try and secure the repeal of the county drain law and make such improvement of the township system as will best answer the demands of the people. The resolution was adopted.

The bond of the County Treasurer was referred to judiciary committee for approval.

Another installment of moderate sized claims was allowed.

Sup. Knapp offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a Probate Register is needed in and for the county of Lenawee and that the Judge of Probate be and is hereby authorized to appoint such register in accordance with the statute in such case made and provided, that the salary of such register be fixed at the sum of $900. The resolution was adopted by 16 yeas to 7 nays.

Previous to the adoption of the resolution an amendment was offered by Sup. Lowe, fixing the salary at $750. Amendment defeated 11 to 12.

Following is the vote on the adoption on the original resolution: yeas, Sups. Wagner, Crane, Loomis, Warren, Cogswell, Bradner, Bates, Beers, Bradish, Colgrove, Munn, Decker, Harkness, Knapp, McKinnon, Kelly. Nays: Sups. Baker, Maxwell, Harrington, McComb, Holdredge, Lowe, Gates.

A grievance on county drain No. 205, was referred to the drain committee.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 29.—Sup. Dreher offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

WHEREAS, The county drain law, after a thorough trial, has proved a prolific source of extravagant litigation and dissatisfaction to our people; and believing that the township drain law will be far more satisfactory and less expensive, therefore,

THE

Leading American Newspaper.

The New York Tribune for 1881

The Largest Circulation Among the Best People.

During the past year THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE reached the largest circulation it ever attained, with the single exception of a short period in the first Lincoln campaign. It is a larger circulation, and more widely distributed over the whole country than any ever enjoyed by any other newspaper in the United States. This fact may be taken as the verdict of the American people on The Tribune's political force, its fidelity to sound principles, and its merits as a newspaper.

For 1881 The Tribune will try to deserve equally well of the public. What and how much it did for the success of General Garfield it is content to let earnest Republicans tell. It now hopes to give to his administration a discriminating support as effective as its efforts for his election.

Every citizen who helped to bring in this Administration should watch its course. The events to be recorded in The Tribune for 1881 will therefore have a peculiar interest. The year promises broadly to show whether the South will still sacrifice everything to solidity; and whether the Democratic party, after twenty years of disloyalty and defeat, will at last accept in earnest the results of the war. Abroad it will show whether England can conquer Ireland; whether the Republic in France, without the support of the leaders who established it, can stand alone; whether the Turk can longer pollute Europe; in science it promises such practical triumphs as the use of electricity for gas, new modes of healing, and new forms of power in place of steam. In Literature and Art, it offers the very flower of our nineteenth century development; in Religion a concentration of force, and union of organizations on similar creeds and better work.

The well known special features of The Tribune will be continuously maintained. Its Agricultural Department will remain the fullest and best. The Home, and the Young Folks' Departments, the literary, scientific and religious features, the standard market reports, will all be kept up, and, as opportunity offers, extended.

THE TRIBUNE PREMIUMS.

The Tribune has never been equalled in the substantial and permanent value of its premiums to agents and subscribers, and it adds to its list this year two of the most desirable it has ever offered. Note the following:

The Great Bible Concordance.

Analytical Concordance to the Bible, on an entirely new plan, containing every word in alphabetical order arranged under its Hebrew or Greek original, with the literal meaning of each and its pronunciation; exhibiting 311,000 references, 118,000 beyond Cruden; marking 30,000 various readings in the New Testament; with the latest information on Biblical Geography and Antiquities, etc., etc. By Robert Young, LL.D., author of a new Literal Translation of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures. Concise Critical Comments on the same; a Grammatical Analysis of the Minor Prophets in Hebrew, Biblical Notes and Queries; Hebrew Grammar, etc., etc.

This great work was originally published in England in October, 1879, and was sold at $15. We can now offer it in connection with the Tribune at the following remarkably low rates:

For $6 the Concordance and one copy of The Weekly Tribune five years, or five copies one year.

For $11 the Concordance and one copy of The Semi-Weekly Tribune five years, or five copies one year, or ten copies of The Weekly Tribune one year.

The postage on the Concordance is 40 cents, which the subscriber will remit if wishing it sent by mail. Except for short distances the mail will be cheaper than the express.

Our second premium for this year is the following:

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE

Embracing Chambers's Encyclopædia complete, omitting only some of the cuts, with extensive additions by an able corps of American editors, treating about 3,000 additional topics, thoroughly Americanizing the entire book, adding to it over 25 per cent. of the latest, freshest and most valuable matter, the whole making 15 Handsome Octavo Volumes of 6 by 9½ inches in size, printed in large type on good, strong, calendered paper, and neat and substantially bound in cloth.

We can offer this valuable work in connection with The Tribune as follows:

For $15 The Library of Universal Knowledge complete in 15 octavo volumes, substantially bound in cloth as above described, and The Weekly Tribune 5 years to one subscriber.

For $20 The Library of Universal Knowledge, as above described, and The Semi-Weekly Tribune 5 years to one subscriber.

Five volumes of the work are now ready, the sixth is nearly through the press, and the rest will rapidly follow. It will be sent by mail or express at the subscriber's expense. The postage, if sent by mail, will be 21 cents per volume. In packages, by express, they can be had much cheaper.

PROMPT WORK.

To induce quick work for this great premium we make the following most extraordinary offer:—With the first 2,000 orders received for The Library of Universal Knowledge we will send free, as a present from The Tribune, Macaulay's History of England, in three handsome volumes, printed on large type and good paper, and neatly bound in cloth.

These books, like the others, will be sent at subscriber's expense by mail or express. The postage on the three volumes will be 21 cents.

A Magnificent Gift!

Worcester's Great Unabridged Dictionary Free!

The New York Tribune will send at subscriber's expense for freight, or deliver in New York City free, Worcester's Great Unabridged Quarto Illustrated Dictionary, bound in sheep, edition of 1879, the very latest and very best edition of that great work, to any one remitting

$10 for a single five years' subscription in advance, or five one year subscriptions to the Weekly, or,

$15 for a single five years' subscription in advance, or five one year subscriptions to The Semi-Weekly, or one year's subscription to The Daily, or,

$30 for a single three years' subscription in advance to The Daily Tribune.

For one dollar extra the Dictionary can be sent by mail to any part of the United States, while for short distances the express is much cheaper.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the office, the newsroom, the counting room, everybody will find [illegible]

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their doings, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and from news, originality, accuracy, and decision in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest common sense. THE SUN's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blameable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is the one to keep. Its notion of duty is to render to it the utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

For the Daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free. Address,

I. W. ENGLAND,
Publisher of THE SUN, New York City.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

CLINTON.

Another cold wave. Mercury cavorting around Tuesday morning from 17 to 19 degrees below zero.

Sleighing is poor, yet the boys are striving to get some consolation out of it.

This cold weather is hard on the hens, and many of them have refused to do domestic duties.

There being no new cases of scarlet fever, our school commenced Monday, the 10th.

Mrs. John Bush is out of health.

Donation Tuesday evening for the benefit of Rev. Mr. Payne of the Baptist society.

Thursday evening of this week, Hon. Wm. Parsons will deliver his lecture entitled, "The heroes of the Homeric age,"—it being one of the regular course.

Next week Tuesday evening, the 18th, Theodore Tilton will deliver an address. His theme is "The world of to-morrow."

To W. H. Amspoker and wife, a daughter.

MACON CENTER.

The open Grange Friday evening, the 7th, was a good one. In the absence of G. H. Field, Dr. Geo. Howell gave a lecture on Physiology, illustrating his points by means of the heart and lungs of a pig, prepared for the occasion. The lecture was very interesting and instructive.

The debate on the question, "Resolved, That Congress should regulate interstate transportation," was the best of the season. Speakers on the affirmative, Geo. Howell, John Boyd, H. Gray and Isaac Mills. Negative, Jno. C. Mills, A. Easlick, M. J. Martin and W. H. Osborn. Decision by the ladies in favor of the negative.

The Red Ribbon concert Saturday evening was very creditable, all things considered. The death of Mrs. Hendershot, who was expected to assist in the concert, had a tendency to postpone, and a portion of the committee did postpone in localities where they were at work, but this was not generally understood in time to make the announcement. The only singers present were Mr. Lester's class, who acquitted themselves very creditably.

Miss Helen Hartwells elocutionary entertainment Tuesday evening was first-class, and merited a better house. If Miss Hartwell had been announced for Tecumseh opera house at 50 cents admission, there would probably have been more of our town's people present than were at the hall Tuesday night at 15 cents admission. Strange that people will not patronize home enterprise; still there were several drawbacks. There had been three successive entertainments at the hall just previous, with two more coming on during the week, besides the season of prayer in all the churches. If Miss Hartwell would reappear before us some three or four weeks hence, I think our people would turn out.

Open Grange Friday evening, the 14th inst. Address by Rev. G. H. Field, followed by literary exercises, and closing with a debate on the question, "Resolved, That the law for the support of the poor is not adequate to the best interests of the commonwealth." Aff.—Isaac Mills. Neg.—John Boyd, with the privilege of three speakers each.

SPRINGVILLE.

Singing schools closed.

Married—Mr. Martin Lee and Miss Delpine Laur—Monday, Jan. 3rd.

Married—Mr. Francis Lewis and Miss Carrie Quick—Wednesday, January 5th.

George N. Stacy will meet with the Springville band Thursday evening of this week, to make arrangements for another term of school.

Asa Draper has contracted with J. H. Smith to build him a house the coming summer.

Between 6,000 and 7,000 lbs. of chickens were delivered here Tuesday, bought by Ayres Bros., for Frank Osborn of Franklin.

Eugene Blowers, son of James Blowers, died very suddenly Wednesday, Jan. 5th.

Wm. Furgeson, Sen., an old and respected citizen of this township died at his son's in Jackson, on Tuesday, Jan. 4th.

Byron Secor, son of Wm. Secor, came to Springville on horse back on Tuesday evening; upon returning about a quarter of a mile from the village, his horse which was trotting began stumbling and reared up falling over sideways, dying in a few minutes.

The singing school under the directions of Prof. George P. Wright closed Monday evening, on account of the series of meetings at the M. E. church which are expected to commence next week. Mr. Wright has been with the class something over a year, during which time he has discharged his duties as instructor with the best of satisfaction. The class have done nobly under his instructions, especially the juveniles. In behalf of the class we extend our best thanks to Mr. W. for the interest he has taking in the class. Hoping that should the class be in need of a teacher again that the services of Mr. Wright may be secured.

RIDGEWAY.

G. P. Waring was home for Sunday.

Mrs. H. Eaton returned to her home in Clinton county on Wednesday.

Meetings are being held every night at the M. E. Church, and also at the Free Methodist Church.

The social which was to have been held at Frank Davidson's to-night, has been postponed until further notice.

There is talk of offering the company a bonus to put this village in telegraphic communication with Detroit and Adrian, by looping from Britton station.

As usual Ridgeway is credited with all the deviltry committed in Milan Macon, and a part of Tecumseh' naughtiness to boot. We are willing to stand what belongs to us, but don't like to be smeared all over with somebody's else dirt.

Rev. N. L. Swank, pastor of the Christian church, died at the parsonage on Friday morning, 7th. Mr. S. had been in poor health for some time but filled his pulpit up to within two weeks of his death. He has done a good work for the congregation, a good work during his ministration, as the beautiful brick church testifies. The remains were taken to Ohio for burial.

Vick's Floral Guide.

This work is before us, and those who send 10 cents to James Vick Rochester, N. Y., for it will be disappointed. Instead of getting a cheap thing, as the price would seem to indicate, they will recive a very handsome work of 112 pages, and perhaps 500 illustrations—not cheap, but elegant illustrations, on the very best of calendered paper, and as a set off to the whole, a beautiful Colored Plate that is worth twice the price of the book.

GLEANINGS FROM THE COUNTY PRESS.

George M. Lewis upon retiring from the superintendency of the Clinton Woolen Mills was presented with a twenty-five dollar gold chain by the employees of the mills.

The Adrian Press, in a half column article, warns other papers against trusting the Day Liver Pad Co., of Toledo, because they wouldn't pay cash, but wanted the corpulent proprietor to take pads for pay.

Adrian Press: Mr. Harkness, if you have any claims on me for that saddle, now is your golden opportunity. For two years my post office address will be Adrian; headquarters at the jail. C. BIDWELL.

Morenci Observer: Morenci was grandly illuminated, a minute or so, last Saturday evening by a gorgeous meteor which went blazing over town. It came from the south and soon disappeared in the frosty northern sky.

Hudson Post: By reference to our marriage notices, it will be seen that Hope Welch, a hitherto confirmed bachelor, has hoped to better his condition, and has taken to himself a wife, Mrs. Anna Ballard, of this village.

Adrian Press: Some graceless scoundrel palmed off a couple of [illegible] dollars upon Recorder Bixby, for taxes, the evening of the last day for collection. Dave has a leaning toward soft money, but thinks that for a "90 cent 'in God we trust'" these are altogether too soft.

Hudson Gazette: The wife of our worthy townsman, Mr. Wm. T. VanCamp, has been taken to the asylum at Pontiac, for treatment, her mind having become somewhat deranged from over-work and anxiety during the recent illness of her much loved daughter. It is to be hoped her affliction may not be of long duration.

Blissfield Advance: The house of John G. Heckert, living in south part of Ogden, was burned to the ground yesterday morning. A son-in-law of Heckert's had arisen about 1 o'clock in the morning, built a fire in the stove and went back to bed, and about four o'clock the whole house was found in flames, and the fire is supposed to have originated from the stove. Loss estimated at about $1,500; with an insurance of $1,100—$800 on house and $300 on furniture.

Hudson Post: Last week it befell us to chronicle the sudden death of Miss Theresa Haley which occurred on Christmas day. To-day it befalls us to record another death, scarcely less sudden, but devoid of the violence and injury of that of the week previous. Mrs. Ermina A. Patterson, wife of David H. Patterson, of this village, died very suddenly at her residence on Friday evening, December 31st, of difficulty of the heart. She was yet in the prime of life, only 38 years old, but had been for some time in poor health, having had at different times previously similar attacks to that which caused her death. She had, however, been unable to attend to her household duties, and for the last week previous to her death was seeming to be in better health and spirits than for some time before. The fatal attack came about 7 o'clock in the evening, and medical attendance was promptly summoned, and all was done to restore her to life and consciousness that human hands could do, but all to no avail, and about 10 o'clock she passed peacefully, quietly to rest. Brief services were held at the residence on Sunday afternoon, and the remains were taken to Jackson, Monday, where the funeral services were held, after which they were placed in a vault to await burial in the spring.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

FOR THE HERALD.

MEMORIES OF INDIAN RIVER, FLORIDA.

In this clime of snow I'm longing
For the balmy air of June,
As it breathes thro' all the winter
O'er thy waters, fair Lagoon.

In the silent hours I'm dreaming
Of thy song bird's everywhere,
Singing out their heaven born music
On the orange scented air.

Ne'er did earth hear sweeter music
Since the Christmas song of old,
Than thy morning songs, oh! wild birds,
In your robes of red and gold.

Oh! what gladness! oh! what rapture
Did thy swelling throats outpour,
From the tall pines and palmettos,
As we sailed along the shore.

Memory brings it all back to me;
And I live those hours again;
When all time from morn to evening
Was one song of glad refrain.

I can hear the palm leaves rustle,
I can see the old pines sway,
As the soft wind bloweth gently
Thro' their foliage day by day.

I can see the proud banana
Vestured like a tropic green;
And the oranges, and lemons,
Rich in form and golden sheen.

I am dreaming of our boat life;
I am sailing down the shore,
By the curious Mangrove Islands—
Ne'er had life such charm before.

I can see the cranes and herons,
With their plumage white as snow,
And the pelicans, and eagles,
As they ever come and go.

Fair the winds and blue the wavelets;
Serving us as willing slaves;
While from o'er the narrow lowland
Comes the roar of ocean waves.

Down by Fabers; on by Rockledge;
Merrit's Isle, home of the deer;
Past St. Lucie; thro' the narrows;
Lo! the Light of Jupiter!

At Jupiter we moor our boat
Safe in a sandbar sheltered cove,
And many a pleasant hour we stroll
O'er shell strewn beach, as thro' the grove.

Now in the ocean surf and foam
We cast our lines with sinewy strain,
And the sea bass and carali
Struggle on our hooks in vain.

Now a shark, and now a bluefish,
Land we on the shore with glee;
Thus we vary daily pastime,
In our boat life by the sea.

* * * * *

The days have passed, and sleet and snow
Are tapping on the window pane;
But in my room, with fire aglow,
I live those joy days o'er again.

And while I live, in sun, or storm,
In forest camp, or gay saloon,
I'll ne'er forget the days we sailed
On thy blue waves, O, fair lagoon!

Electricity in Silk Winding.

An inventor claims to have perfected an electrical device which will materially reduce the cost of silk-reeling, and so make the production of silk commercially profitable in this country. From their exceeding fineness, the silk strands are liable to break while being unwound from the cocoons, necessitating close attention on the part of the person superintending the work. The strands of silk from four cocoons are usually run out on one reel to form a single thread, and one woman can not do more than attend at most to two reels. It has been claimed by many interested in the silk trade that no machinery could be made delicate enough to watch this work automatically. The attention of the inventor was drawn to this subject two years ago, and he has lately perfected his application of the electric current to this work. By running the strands over carefully balanced wires, when one breaks the wire drops into mercury and closes a circuit which acts on an electric stop in the reel. The work is thus stayed until the strand is spliced and the circuit broken. In this way the electricity watches the strands, and the attendant has only to notice the reels and start them when they stop. In the old way not more than six pounds of silk could be wound in a week; by this invention it is claimed that forty pounds will be wound in the same time. The promoters of this invention hope by it to increase greatly the silk industry in this country. Owing to the cost of labor, cocoons are not reeled in this country to any great extent. They are raised here—none better, it is claimed, can be found elsewhere—and exported for reeling, and then much of the raw silk is imported for manufacturing. A large amount will be saved if the cocoons can be cheaply wound off here. In the South, where the mulberry is common, it is believed that the culture of silk may rival that of cotton.

The Difference.

"No," the honest farmer remarked, in terms of the deepest dejection, "the big crops don't do us a bit of good. What's the use? Corn only thirty cents. Everybody and everything's dead set agin the farmer. Only thirty cents for corn! Why, by gum, it won't pay our taxes, let alone buy us clothes. It won't buy us enough salt to put up a barrel of pork. Corn only thirty cents! By jooks it's a living, cold-blooded swindle on the farmer, that's what it is. It ain't worth raising corn at such price as that. It's mean, low robbery."

Within the next ten days that man had sold so much more of his corn than he intended, that he found he had to buy corn to feed through the winter with. The price nearly knocked him down.

"What!" he yelled, thirty cents for corn! Land alive—thirty cents! Why, I don't want to buy your farm—I only want to buy some corn! Thirty cents for corn! Why, I believe there's nobody left in the world but a set of grasspin', blood-suckin' old misers. Why, good land, you don't want to be able to buy a national bank with one corn crop. Thirty cents for corn! Well, I'll let my cattle an' horses run on corn stalks all winter before I'll pay any such price for corn as that. Why, the country's just flooded with corn, and thirty cents a bushel is a blamed robbery, and I don't see how any man can have the face to ask such a price."

Never stop to argue the point with an excited hornet.

The Dictionary as a School Book.

The meaning of words goes deep, and its study has not had due prominence. Indeed, the child in school uniformly learns what many do not know. The words he sees and uses are the very instruments of thought. Perhaps no word has an exact synonym, and no word means precisely the same to any two persons. To avoid misapprehension, words must be employed in the sense which the hearer will attach to them, and as this cannot be divined, a common standard of definitions must become the arbiter as to their meaning. Words must not only be used according to their standard signification, but they must, also, be uttered according to a common standard of pronunciation, for pronunciation both makes the spoken word intelligible, and frequently determines its meaning by fixing its office in the sentence.

It is well known that reading books and text-books in the sciences are not written in children's language, and contain not a few words not understood by them. The stage of knowing things without having learned them comes later in life, usually about the age when one is eligible to office, and children possess the ability to define words only in a low degree, without a special training. But reliance on oral instruction in the school meets with less and less favor. The pupil is taught early to gain his knowledge from printed pages. He is trained to help himself, to seek no assistance outside his text-book until he has exhausted his resources. It is indispensible that he know the meaning of the words. His own vocabulary is limited; it does not afford him the terms essential to a neat or satisfactory statement of what he knows. He may perhaps have mastered his idea as to his own comprehension of it, but he lacks the language to communicate it to another. He can get on and live his life with a vocabulary of three thousand words, but as he will hear or read five times that number, he needs to know the meaning of a multitude of words he will never speak or write.

He must seek the aid of a school dictionary to enrich his verbal repertoire, and to determine the meaning, not only of the words he may use, but still more, of the words he will hear, or see in print.

The pronunciation of a word must be learned from the dictionary, for it is surprising that even men of otherwise liberal training should so often sin against orthoepy. There is need of a reform in our educational system here, and it would do no harm to have one winter of a furor to learn orthoepy, as there was a few seasons since to practice spelling. Unless we conform to a common standard here, the language of one man may become quite unintelligible to another. One to conform to this standard must know its decision as to the special case. The word being spoken correctly, it is then essential that it be used in the sense in which it will be understood. If either party is ignorant of its established import, no idea will be conveyed, or an erroneous one will be accepted.

In our scheme of school education, it is assumed that comprehension and progress in the text-book will keep side by side, and as words are the instruments of conveying instruction, the pupil will fail to understand his lesson and the remarks of the teacher if he does not know the meaning of the words employed. Precision of thought is indicated by clearness of language, in which each word retains its appropriate meaning. In all trades and callings, there are special words for brevity and clearness. They are more frequent as subjects of conversation or printed articles become wider, and the language of special topics becomes more and more topics of daily consideration. The meaning of these words must, by the general reader, be sought in the dictionary. Object lessons can help in part, only in the case of nouns. Books and papers do not define the words they use, and the context fails to reveal their full signification. To-day no one can "talk shop" without technical words, not slang, but words made peculiarly expressive and concise, by their use in a special sense, made clear and precise by long unvarying usage.

The English tongue, used a century since, by 17,000,000 of people, is to-day the business or fireside language of six times that number. During that century, by creation and importation the vocabulary has been doubled, and the rate of increase is quite one per cent. or nearly a thousand words a year. This increase is the growth of necessity. The new words meet the reader in the newspaper, in public speeches, and notably in scientific treatises. The information they embalm is for the people for use in the affairs of life. We cannot expect any one person will learn the definitions of all the words in our language. It is needless. Nor will there be classes in school for the consecutive study of definitions. The pupil is expected to look up for himself the meaning of the words he sees or hears. His dictionary should be his constant auxilliary in all this course, to be consulted at each step until the spelling, pronunciation and the definition of each word is securely grasped and retained by his mind.

There is well advanced a proposed change in our written language, to eliminate silent letters, and spell words by their sounds, appropriating one character, and only one, to each elementary articulate sound. It is proposed to do this in part, by employing Webster's diacritical marks to indicate the powers of the letters. A study of his system of guides to the true vowel and consonantal powers of our letters in each word will prepare the way for this change. But a knowledge of the system is even now indispensible to one who would understand the right pronunciation.

A school dictionary is inexpensive, durable, of daily service, and an invaluable corrective of the capriciousness which seeks to confuse or disturb the mind by employing words in a new or unusual sense, or by substituting for a univocal word, one with two or more meanings to the destruction of precision in the use of language. Law presumes that words are used in their ordinary meaning, and unless one knows what this is, he is liable to be misunderstood or to misunderstand, or he must when confronted with the consequences make the humiliating plea of ignorance, or else claim his language was Pickwickian.

Business men of New York have formed what they call a "Moderation Society." It does not seek to establish total abstinence, but requires its members to promise to observe moderation. One rule is to discontinue the practice of treating—that is, when gentlemen join in a drink, each one is expected to pay for his own. The society has grown rapidly, and accomplished much in the way of reform.

"Whar's de Kerridge?"

He was a new bootblack, but already seemed quite at home at the old stand so long a familiar object on the line of our daily peregrinations.

"Sartin, boss, shine 'em up in less n no time," said he, and we mounted the hurricane deck of his place of business.

"Well, yes, boss, not bin here long, but I'se gettin' insight inter der ways mighty fast. De ways here, sah, is different to what dey is down in ole Massissip. Bin Massissip, sah? Fine ole state, sah."

"The colored people here appear to be quite as happy as in any part of the world," we ventured to remark.

"No, sah, beg leave to diffah; you's not on the inside, sah; dar's too much elevation; dat's what's matter. Give you an instance: Las' week, you know, sah, de collud folks had a ball; quite a high-toned affair, sah. Well, I engaged a young lady for de party, sah; one dat I at dat time looked on as de pride ob de country, sah. I am not indifferent to dress, and I put on clothes, sah—clothes dat don't every day see the light ob de sun—and went to de residence ob de gal.

"I 'rived at de 'pinted time. De gal was in de bes' room an' in her bes' clothes, wattin' my arrival on de scene. De ole man was dar, an' de ole woman figgered in tableaux, wid a few juvenile supernumerary members ob de family.

"Miss Augusta smiled on me in dat meltin' way ob de eyes dat allers gave me a movement ob de heart. I was interjuiced to de more influential members ob de household, an' de discourse was agreeable. Presently I suggested dat it would be well to be movin' for de party, an' Miss Augusta rose in all de pompand circumstance of her high-priced attire.

"We arrived at de stoop of de door, an' offering my arm, I s'posed we should progress. No, sah, not a bit of it. Dat gal receded. She rose erec to an astonishin' hight an' as she trasfixed me wid her gaze, she uttered dese memorable words:

"Whar's de transportation?"

"Eh what? says I, feelin' dat suffin was agoin' wrong.

"De trans-pot-ation! Whar's de transportation?"

"What's de trespotation? says I.

"De wehicle—whar's de wehicle? she says.

"I don't kno nuffin 'bout no wehicle," says I.

"Whar's de kerridge? says she.

"De kerridge?" says I. "I haven't seen no kerridge!"

"Mistah Berry, does you pretend to tell me dat you've come to take me to de ball without a kerridge?" and she became of a still greater hight.

"Why, of course," says I. "I thought we could walk. Down in ole Massissip de gals think nuffin of going miles and miles"—

"So you expect me to hoof it, Mistah Berry? You tell about de galls in Massissip, Mistah Berry; do de gals in Massissip know any thing 'bout proper attire, Mistah Berry?" An' she gav a sort of kick an' a sling of her body an' trailed out about four yards of train.

"De ole man an' de ole woman an' all de rest now put in dar' pearance, an' says de ole man: "What's all dis confusion of tongues?"

"Mistah Berry doesn't consider de honah sufficient to warrant him in de outlay necessary for de furnishing of propah transportation?" said Miss Augusta.

"Sah!" said de ole man; "Sah!" said de ole woman; "Sah!" said all the little members."

"I said nuffin'."

"Does de niggah' spect he's gwine to lead our darter off on de hoof like she was a cow?" said de ole woman.

"Who you call niggah, ole woman?" says I. "Why, I'se drove better lookin' heifers nor yours to de plow in ole Massissip."

"De gal shriekt."

"Dar you talk to me an' my darter in dat bituminious manner?" said de ole man, an he guv me a lift wid his ole stogas dat raised me off'n de stoop, an' follered it up wid numerous of de same, dat was much assistance to me in gettin' out de gate.

"Dar's too much elewation, sah, creepin' into cullud society. I turns my back to it."

How Postal Cards are Made.

The postal cards now used in the United States are made by the Phototype Company, Holyoke, Mass. Their manufacture is thus described in the Transcript of that city: The postal cards are printed in sheets containing forty each, two of Hoe's super royal presses being used for the purpose, and after being "seasoned" for two or three days, they are taken to the "stripper," where each sheet passes between rollers armed with circular knives, which operating precisely like a pair of scissors, with a continuous cut, quickly divides it into four strips, each containing ten cards. These strips are next taken to the "cross-cutters," which being fitted with circular knives like the stripper, divides them into single cards. Strip follows strip in rapid succession and the cards drop one after the other, into a revolving receptacle or hopper, which being turned as soon as twenty-five strips have been fed through the machine, brings an empty hopper into position for catching a new lot of cards, and at the same time brings those previously cut within reach of the bander. Each machine has three young women, besides the feeder, whose duty it is to recount and assort, throwing out all dirty or torn cards, press-marks or miscuts, and to band the cards in packages of twenty-five, and it requires nimble fingers to do the work in a proper manner. From the machines the cards go to the boxing tables, where they are carefully packed in paste-board boxes, each containing twenty-five packs of five hundred cards. These boxes are in turn packed in wooden cases of various sizes, containing from two thousand to twenty-five thousand cards, ready for shipment to the post offices of the country. Many small offices order less than two thousand cards at a time, and cards to fill such orders are shipped in packages; but larger amounts are always shipped in cases. All the cards are sent by mail. The orders for cards vary greatly in size, according to the amount of business done at the different post offices. Thus the New York post office, which takes nearly one-tenth of the whole number of cards issued, requires a million cards every two weeks or so.

A good advertisement in a newspaper pays no fares on railroads, costs nothing for hotel bills, gives away no boxes of cigars to customers, or merino dresses to customers' wives, drinks no whisky under the head of traveling expenses, but goes at all times about its business free of expense.

Parental Government.

Scene in a library—gentleman busy writing—child enters.

"Father, give me a penny."

"Haven't got any; don't bother me."

"But, father, I want it for something particular."

"I tell you I haven't one about me."

"I must have one, you promised me one."

"I did no such thing; I won't give you any more pennies; you spend too many. It's all wrong—I won't give it to you, so go away."

Child begins to whimper. "I think you might give me just one; it's really mean."

"No, go away; I won't do it, so there's an end of it."

Child cries, teases, coaxes—father gets out of patience, puts his hand in his pocket, takes out a penny and throws it to the child. "There, take it, and don't come back again to-day."

Child smiles, looks shy, goes out conqueror, determined to renew the struggle in the afternoon, with the certainty of a like result.

Scene in the street—two boys playing. Mother opens the door, calls to one of them, her own son: "Joe, come into the house instantly."

Joe pays no attention.

"Joe, do you hear me? If you don't come, I'll give you a good whipping."

Joe smiles, and continues his play; his companion is alarmed for him, and advises him to obey. "You'll catch it if you don't go, Joe."

"O no, I won't; she always says so, but never does. I ain't afraid."

Mother goes back into the house, very much put out, and thinking herself a martyr to bad children.

That's the way, parents; show your children by your example that you are weak, undecided and untruthful, and they learn aptly enough to despise your authority, and to regard your word as nothing.

American and Canadian Women.

There is as great a difference between the American women and the Canadian women as between the men. American women who have not to work for their living, object to any sort of exercise, except, perhaps, dancing; they neither walk nor ride; they go by rail, or drive in carriages; they object even to the work of looking after and superintending a house, and on that account prefer to live in hotels; those who are obliged to work for a living do so as teachers, clerks in postoffices, in shops, in any way, in fact, where physical exertion can be dispensed with. American women have perfectly regular, though rather sharp features, and when young are undoubtedly pretty; the bloom, however, rapidly fades away, and they are old women at thirty; they have but one, or at most, two children.

The Canadian woman is a marked contrast. She is in appearance quite an English woman—generally a blond. Canadian ladies are full as much addicted to out-door pursuits and amusements as the English ladies. Even in the depth of winter they have their daily walks, or their snow-shoeing, trabagganing or skating parties. Thanks to this more healthy mode of life, to their robust constitutions and to their healthy climate, they preserve their good looks to the last. As to the poorer women in Canada, they have no Chinamen, Irishmen and negroes to work for them, and so they are compelled to attend to their own households and dairies, and this seems to agree well with them. Unlike the Americans, there seems to be no limit to their families and no end to their good looks, and middle aged Canadian women—if such an expression can be applied to the fair sex—present as great a contrast to the worn out and faded American women of a similar unmentionable age as can possibly be imagined.

The Source of Disease.

"The way it is done," is the title of an interesting little book by Mrs. Warren, the well known writer of several valuable books on domestic economy. Here is an extract which might be read with interest by sufferers from rheumatism—

"I can't get up stairs, I be so crippled."

"Just try it a step at a time, and rest. And what do you sleep in, sheets or blankets?"

"Sheets of course; what else? I have got blankets over me, and a good thick counterpane over that."

"I thought so; put away the sheets and the counterpane, and sleep in blankets, under and over, and no counterpane at all. The sheets and the counterpane do a great deal of mischief."

"Well, now, how can that be?"

"The cotton keeps the sour heat and perspiration from the body in the bed, and so you breathe the poisoned air all night, summer and winter, and that poisoned air makes your rheumatism ten times worse. If you were in blankets, they would not absorb the perspiration; it would pass through from one to the other, but in cotton, if it absorbs it—I had better say soaks into it—there it remains cold or hot, or clammy."

"That may be right, sure enough, for I do perspire so with pain, that one might wring the sheets sometimes."

Evil Effects of Rivalry.

Thirteen hundred years ago, the jealousy which existed between Pompey and Cæsar threw Rome into a civil war. Each was envious of the other, and each strove for personal aggrandizement. Both were actuated by personal and selfish motives. The jealousy that arises in the two great political parties in the United States to-day is the cause of the political strifes and animosities that continually arise. The troubles that exist in communities arise from the jealousy of some individuals. One individual or class is more prosperous than some other, and at once the "Green-eyed Monster" raises his head, threatening destruction to the succesful.

A generous rivalry is commendable. It is promotive of the growth and development of all, and will lead to active measures and zealous work, and all parties are benefited; but when the envious man attempts to pull down others, that he may rise, he injures himself while injuring others, and the whole community suffers from it, and the injury he attempts to do others will react on his own head.

"With charity for all and malice toward none," labor in life in such a way that you may promote the good of the great human family, and that you may have the approval of God and the consciousness of having lived to benefit others and promote the well being of society.

Ladies are like violets; the more modest and retiring they appear, the more you love them.

OUR CHIP BASKET

WHAT WE LOVE.

We love to lie beneath the shade
And quaff the cooling lemonade;
We love to feel the cheerful ants
Crawl calmly up our summer pants;
We love to see the apple worm
Upon our shirt front squeam and squirm;
We love to watch with placid eye
The doodlebug go tumbling by;
We love to hear in distant bogs
The rueful rumbling of the frogs;
We love to hear the slimy snake
Wind in and out the verdant brake;
We love to hear the crispy cry
Of bumble-bees bumb bumbling by;
We love to scent upon the air
The balm of squashbugs balming there
With ivy trailing all the land
And poison oak at every hand;
Far from the city's dusty strife,
How sweet to lead a rural life!

One of the unfathomable mysteries of this life is to understand how a handcuffed criminal can jump off a train when it is going at the rate of forty miles an hour and escape injury, while a man who never committed a wrong in his life cannot step off a train running at a speed of six miles an hour, without plowing up two or three feet of earth with his nose, having a leg crushed off or his skull fractured.

Mrs. Muriel took great interest in parish affairs. Last year she promised to assist in decorating the parish church. One illuminated text she thought would look well over the chancel screen, and she requested her husband to bring it from town. As he expected, he forgot the text, and wired to his wife for particulars. To the surprise of the telegraph clerks, this message came flashing over the wires: "Unto us a child is born, nine feet long by two feet broad."

Bangs, who had been kept in the house all winter with rheumatism, was tempted by the warm sun to venture into the open air and hobble down street, when, with many sympathetic handshakings by his friends, he learned that the following would each cure him of his complaint: Iodide of potassium, quinine, glauber salts, onions, raw silk, oiled skin, gin and tansy, Turkish baths, a potatoe carried in the pocket, an eel-skin tied around the leg, a suit of red flannel, a chloroform liniment, hot water, cold water, a trip south, a dry atmosphere, equable temperature, sulphur baths, mustard and hot water, camphor liniment and electricity.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Honey Cake.—Mix half a pound of sifted flour with two ounces of butter, rubbing them well together. Add two ounces of sugar, half a pound of fine white honey, one ounce of powdered ginger, and two well-beaten eggs. Mix all well together, and bake in buttered tin pans, in a brisk oven.

Graham Bread.—To two pounds of graham flour allow a pint of milk, a pint of water, a wineglassful of molasses, a teaspoonful of soda, and two tablespoonfuls of strong yeast. Beat the yeast, molasses, soda and salt in lukewarm milk and water. Stir in the flour until too stiff to use a spoon. Knead and bake as usual.

Apple Bread.—To one quart of meal put one pint of ripe chopped apples, one egg, a small piece of butter, a little salt, and fresh water enough to form a stiff dough. The apples should, of course, be peeled and minced very fine. Some persons like a little sugar on the dough, but it is generally preferred without. This is a favorite with children.

Rice Fritters.—Two eggs, one pint of milk, half a pint of boiled rice, two tablespoonfuls of yeast powder, one of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter, sufficient flour to make a thin batter. Beat the eggs separately; put the butter in the milk and warm until the butter melts; add the yolks of the eggs, rice, flour and other ingredients. Drop a large spoonful at a time in boiling lard; fry brown and serve at once.

Boston Taffy.—In a shallow vessel, melt together one pound of brown sugar and one quarter pound of butter. Stir together for 15 minutes, or until the mixture becomes brittle when dropped into cold water. Lemon or vanilla flavoring should be added before the cooking is complete. Butter a flat plate, and pour the taffy on it to cool. When partly cold, mark in squares with a knife; it can then be easily broken.

Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhœa, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external and internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Selling Hair in Switzerland.

The trade in human hair is by no means an insignificant one in many parts of Europe. The principal countries in which the article is grown for the market are Normandy and Picardy in France, portions of Germany and Austria, Switzerland and Sweden. The value placed upon the produce of different countries depends mainly upon its length and fineness, but also very considerably upon the prevailing fashion as to color. As a general rule, however, that from France ranks first in the market, then comes the Swedish, German and Swiss. Italy also produces some, but it is not a favorite in the market. Hair merchants, or collectors, are usually women, who travel in couples, preferably a young one to do the enticing, and an older one to do the bargaining. It is a maxim among the trade that the more stupid are the women the finer is their hair. The hair is rarely cropped off in mass, but thinned out at regular periods.

Envied Beauty.

What is more handsome than a nice, bright, clear complexion, showing the beauties of perfect health? All can enjoy these advantages by using Electric Bitters. Impure blood, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs, are speedily cured. For nervousness and all attendant ailments, they are a never failing remedy, and positively cure where all others fail. Try the Electric Bitters, and be convinced of their wonderful merits. For sale by all druggists, at fifty cents a bottle.

GOOD ADVICE.—An exchange gives the following sensible advice: Don't believe every senseless rumor you hear respecting reputable citizens; don't retail a calumny against any man unless you have good foundation for believing it true; don't bite off your own nose to spite your face; don't let passion knock down judgment and choke its life out; don't go back on principle to gratify personal feeling; don't betray the confidence of your friends; don't give your friends the "dirty shake," as the boys say because he don't look through your spectacles; don't harbor animosity against a neighbor because his opinions conflict with yours. Be Christlike; be charitable.

Astonishing the World.

For a perfect renovation of exhausted and enfeebled constitutions, female weakness and decline, nothing so surely and speedily produces a permanent cure as does Electric Bitters. Their wonderful cures are astonishing the world. For Kidney or Urinary complaints they are a perfect specific. Do not give up in despair, for Electric Bitters will positively cure, and that where everything else fails. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co., at 50 cents a bottle.

Ira Cook was to have been married in Northampton Mass., at the age 66. He started for the town clerk's office to get a license, and doubtless was excited and nervous for he fell while climbing over a fence, caught one foot between the pickets, and hung head downward until he was dead.

Hints to Farmers.

Don't let your horses be seen standing much at the tavern door; it don't look right. Don't be without Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment near at hand to apply in case of accident. Keep good fences—especially line fences; it promotes good feelings among neighbors. Keep Downs' Elixir always in the house, and use in cases of sudden coughs, &c., as a safeguard against consumption and other dangerous diseases. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, taken according to directions, saves large expense in doctor's bills.

Which is oddest, the one who asks an odd question or the one who answers it? The one who asks it, because he is the querist.

The Friend of Delicate Ladies.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

A Cure For Dyspepsia.

We have never experienced the miseries of dyspepsia, but those who have "gone through the mill" tell us the different stages of the ailment are far from being enjoyable. Of course, for that, as for every other disease, there are one hundred and one remedies, more or less effective. We copy from an exchange the following cure, which is said to be infallible, and, as it is very simple, those who are afflicted may be glad to try it: On the first day, take from the time of rising, once an hour, one tablespoonful of skim milk, omitting it one hour before and one hour after dinner. For dinner, rare roast beef—all the patient desires—and half a cup of clear coffee; nothing else. After dinner resume taking the tablespoonful of milk once every hour for the rest of the day. On the second day let the dose of milk be two teaspoonfuls, the other details remaining the same. On the third day take three spoonfuls of milk each hour, and after that a little bread may be crumbled in if desired. This diet should be continued fifteen days, at the end of which time the worst case of dyspepsia will be cured—so it is said. Don't take our word for it, however.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Keep to the Right.

Only villagers or persons with rural ideas now contend that ladies should always be given the inside of the pavement in passing. The rule adopted in cities is to turn to the right, whether the right leads to the wall or to the gutter, and an observance of this common sense rule would obviate much unpleasant "scrouging" by over-gallant gentlemen who persistently crowd for the outside of the walk. Another common custom, and required by fashionable etiquette, and one which is nearly as inexplicable and absurd as the practice of a whole string of men filing out of a church pew, making themselves as ridiculous as an "awkward squad" practising at "catching step" in order to give a woman the wrong end of the pew, is that of a man, when on a promenade or walk with a lady, to keep himself on the outside of the pavement. A little exercise of judgment will convince any person of the utter uselessness of this bobbing back and forth at every corner. The common rule is this: "If a man and woman are walking, she should always be at his right arm, whether it be towards the inside or outside of the walk; then the woman will not be shoved against the passers."

ACCUMULATED WEALTH.—It is a common mistake to suppose that wealth is often accumulated by accident. So far is this from the truth, that scarcely a wealthy man can be found in this country whose wealth was not gathered by persistent devotion to some legitimate trade or business, either by himself or another whose riches he has inherited; and in nine cases out of ten the wealth came not beause it was the prime object of attainment, but as the collateral reward of an occupation enthusiastically pursued till thoroughly mastered for its own sake.

THE SYMPTOMS

of Liver Complaint are a bitter or a bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism. Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Bowels alternately costive and lax; Headache, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the LIVER, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of disease, and if not Regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue.

THE LOCAL AMERICAN NEWSPAPER.

The New York Tribune for 1881.

The Largest Circulation Among the Best People.

During the past year THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE reached the largest circulation it ever attained, with the single exception of a short period in the first Lincoln campaign. It is a larger circulation, and more widely distributed over the whole country than any ever enjoyed by any other newspaper in the United States. This fact may be taken as the verdict of the American People on The Tribune's political force, its fidelity to sound principles, and its merits as a newspaper.

For 1881 The Tribune will try to deserve equally well of the public. What and how much it did for the success of General Garfield it is content to let earnest Republicans tell. It now hopes to give to his administration a discriminating support as effective as its efforts for his election.

Every citizen who helped to bring in this Administration should watch its course. The events to be recorded in The Tribune for 1881 will therefore have a peculiar interest. The year promises besides to show whether the South will still sacrifice everything to solidity; and whether the Democratic party, after twenty years of disloyalty and defeat, will dissolve or reform. Abroad it will show whether England can compose Ireland; whether the Republic in France, without the support of the leaders who established it, can stand alone; whether the Turk can longer pollute Europe. In Science it promises such practical triumphs as the use of electricity for gas, new modes of heating, new forms of power in place of steam. In Nature and Art it offers the ripe flower of our nineteenth century development in Religion, a concentration of force, and union of organizations on similar creeds and better work.

The well-known special features of The Tribune will be sedulously maintained. Its Agricultural Department will remain the fullest and best. The Household and the Young Folks' Departments, the literary, scientific and religious features, the standard commercial reports, will all be kept up, and, as opportunity offers, extended.

THE TRIBUNE PREMIUMS.

The Tribune has never been equalled in the substantial and permanent value of its premiums to agents and subscribers, and it adds to its list this year two of the most desirable it has ever offered. Note the following:

The Great Bible Concordance.

Analytical Concordance to the Bible, on an entirely new plan, containing every word in alphabetical order, arranged under its Hebrew or Greek original, with the literal meaning of each and its pronunciation; exhibiting 311,000 references, 115,000 beyond Cruden; marking 50,000 various readings in the New Testament; with the latest information on Biblical Geography and Antiquities, etc., etc. By Robert Young, LL.D., author of a new Literal Translation of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures; Concise Critical Comments on the same; a Grammatical Analysis of the Minor Prophets in Hebrew; Biblical Notes and Queries; Hebrew Grammar, etc., etc.

This great work was originally published in England in October, 1879, and was sold at $15. We can now offer it in connection with The Tribune at the following remarkably low rates:

The postage on the Concordance is 40 cents, which the subscriber will remit if wishing it sent by mail. Except for short distances the mail will be cheaper than the express.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 13, 1881.

Will Ex-Gov. Bagley present Adam Bloom with a box of cigars? Will he?

They all do it. And now Governor-elect Plaisted, of Maine, aged fifty-three, will lead to the altar Miss Mabel Hall, aged twenty.

Representative Bloom, of Detroit, has blossomed out into a bigger man than Grant. He was not born to bloom [illegible].

The last week of 1881 set the new year a rolling in rather a ghastly fashion. Every day last week chronicled some awful calamity by fire or flood on land or sea.

During the year 1880 there were 104 murders in Michigan. This is certainly not a very good record for such an alledged moral and philanthropic state as Michigan.

Although we are enjoying good hearty weather outside, with the mercury below zero, still the political thermometer inside some of the state capitals is boiling and bubbling away up among the nineties.

Conger walked off with the cake.—The feud between the two Detroit candates threw Baldwin's forces against Bagley, and the worst man of the three won the prize. It is a very rare thing that the best man wins in a rough and tumble political contest.

The appointment of General Goff, of West Virginia, as Secretary of the Navy, will be received with general satisfaction. He had an excellent war record, and has for many years led the Republicans of West Virginia to inevitable defeat with a cheerful courage that deserved recognition.

The political machines at the different state capitols seem to be in fair working order. The bosses are getting in their work very successfully. Conger has fixed things here in Michigan, Cottrell ditto in Missouri, while Conkling and Cameron have the joints well oiled and the axeltrees all greased for a fine Senatorial harvest next week in their two states.

Congressional absenteeism seems to be the great evil which besets the present Congress. The public business is delayed, important bills are unconsidered, because so many members are absent from their posts without leave. The N. Y. Sun has begun to open fire upon the truant members by publishing the names of all those who are absent without leave. It makes quite an interesting list.

JUDGE COOLEY'S CANVASS.

The movement for Judge Cooley is gathering strength. Fred Geddes, a young attorney of Toledo, and son of Probate Judge Geddes, of Adrian, started out with a petition the other day in Toledo, and soon obtained forty signatures upon it, having captured nearly the entire Toledo bar. The Evening News suggests a plan for aiding the canvass which might be made very effective. It says:

"Leading papers throughout the country have recognized his eminent fitness for the position, and petitions asking for his appointment have been extensively signed by the members of the bar in Milwaukee, Toledo and perhaps other cities. We have now to point out how the movement in his favor can be given such increased force that the president must yield to it. Let every one who has been a student of the University law school constitute himself a committee of one to see that a petition for his appointment is circulated and signed by the members of the bar in his own town. These students are scattered over the whole United States. Many of them are men of influence, and all of them know that there is no jurist in the whole country who would shed more lustre upon the bench of that high tribunal than Judge Cooley. The task of circulating a petition for him is one they would gladly undertake if the matter was only suggested to them, and they knew that the students of the law school were moving as a body in favor of his appointment. Their names and residences can be ascertained from the "University book" just published by Richmond, Backus & Co., of this city.

Adam Bloom, of Detroit, is a very fragrant flower. He must belong to the thistle family.

Detroit people do not seem to be particularly pleased with the outcome of the Senatorial contest. It is rather humiliating that the interests of Detroit should be sacrificed to the political feuds of two Detroit politicians.

Ex-Senator J. Hipple Mitchell, of Oregon, rises to say that he is not a candidate for an office under the administration, and would not take a seat in the Cabinet if it were offered to him. Mr. Mitchell is one of the most modest and disinterested of Republican patriots.

The latest move on the political chess board in this State, is a movement to secure for John J. Bagley the interior portfolio in Garfield's cabinet. It is claimed that Mr. Conger will strengthen himself by urging his late opponent's claims, and that Garfield will make the appointment for the purpose of harmonizing the party differences in Michigan.

By virtue of the new treaty with China no chinaman can become naturalized in the United States, and those who possess naturalization papers at the present time must forfeit them. The emigration from China to this country can also be prohibited at any time this government sees fit.—The ratification of this treaty will be a long stride toward solving the vexed chinese question.

Chicago, the young giant of the West, received during 1880, a hundred and sixty-five millions bushels of grain and flour, a billion and five hundred millions feet of lumber, six hundred and fifty million shingles, and twenty-five million dollars worth of hogs, horses, cattle and sheep. Of course Chicago received several other things in 1880 in small quantities, but the above items will do pretty well to start the list with.

Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal has written a fine pen picture of Senator Blaine in which he says: Mr. Blaine is a man who will exhaust the ordinary methods of pleasing. But he is also a man who, when his methods have failed, sets himself boldly and alertly to crush.—No gilded lordling in the Senate can tramp him down without a fight; and of all men he seems to be made for the purpose to which his big brained but kindly friend is about to put him. Mr. Blaine has a touch of the Earl of Beaconsfield in him. Let him, in this matter, emulate Dizzy, and bring us to a realizing sense of his splendor and prowess, not by the mean bullying of the weak, but by boldly tackling the strong.

BOYCOTTING.

What is boycotting? We see this term frequently used of late in accounts of the Irish land troubles. The Nation gives a full explanation of the term. It is not exactly bulldozing for no physical force of any kind is used. It may be described in short as a form of social and business ostracism. The process is a very simple one. Under secret orders or warnings, issued probably by the local committee, the obnoxious person is put under a ban.—His servants and laborers refuse to work for him, the shopkeepers to sell to him or buy of him, the livery-stable keepers to transport him, the blacksmiths to shoe his horses, and he is lucky if his cattle are not driven off his land in the night. In order still further to shake his nerves threatening and abusive letters are written to him, and if these fail to produce any effect on him they are sure to do so on his family. Of course, under these circumstances life becomes intolerable. The police can protect against armed violence but they cannot enable a man to farm his own land, harvest his own crops, sell his own produce, and perform all the domestic duties of a large household. Mr. Boycott was enabled to gather in his crops by the aid of a band of volunteers, but they had to be escorted by so large a force of troops that it cost the Government $50,000 to secure $2,500 worth of corn and potatoes.

Of course, the relation of the value of the crops to the cost of gathering them is of no consequence, for the Government spent the money to enforce the law and not to save so much farm produce. But the fact that it was necessary to spend so much to save so little is the very strongest evidence that there is some radical defect in the law regulating land tenures in Ireland.

Mr. Bence Jones is the latest victim of the "boycotting" process, but he is apparently disposed to fight it out, and has hired armed retainers to garrison his house. This may save his property, but it cannot make his home a very domestic and happy one. We shall probably hear before long of his abandoning the field, and of other landlords being subjected to the same process. The land leagers have the sympathies of the working masses with them, and this agitation will continue until the land tenants of Ireland shall secure their proper legal and civil rights.

THE GUBERNATORIAL MESSAGES.

The citizens of Michigan have just reason to be proud of the material prosperity and financial condition of the Wolverine State. We give herewith, as fully as our space will permit, an abstract of the two messages which were submitted last week at the opening of the Legislature.

THE RETIRING MESSAGE.

The retiring Governor leaves it to his successor to indicate measures for future policy and only suggests changes as appeared to him during his administration.

On account of the increase of population, Michigan will undoubtedly have an increased representation in Congress and a revision of districts will be necessary, and the message asks that it may be fair and just. The finances of the State are in a healthy condition, there being at the close of the last fiscal year a balance of $1,578,-643.01 in the treasury. There is more than sufficient money in the treasury to pay the bonded debt. The total amount of bonds outstanding is $905,-149.97, of these $15,149.97 are past due and draw no interest, and $591,000 fall due in 1883, and $299,000 in 1890. The total value of the property of the State is not less than $12,000,000. The message pointedly shows and demands from the Legislature a revision of the present tax laws.

The State institutions are in a satisfactory condition, not running in debt or anticipating appropriations. The daily average of inmates that the Reform School provided for was 311, at a per capita cost of $96.

The Governor recommends the transferring of the control of St. Mary's Falls ship canal from the State government to the United States, on condition that it remain forever free from tolls. Also that an assistant Attorney General be appointed, who shall reside at Lansing and devote his entire attention to the business of the State. He also renews his recommendation of two years ago, for the abolition of the provision authorizing contracts to be made at ten and for a uniform rate of interest at 7 per cent. per annum.

THE INAUGURAL.

The inaugural covers nearly the same points as the ex-augural.

It recommends that the State exert itself to induce immigrants to settle in the unoccupied State lands, inasmuch as there are millions of good farming land in this State unoccupied.

The salt producing territory of the State now covers 8,000 square miles, and is divided into nine districts, over which there is an inspector and deputy. The aggregate capacity of the different districts is 3,000,000 barrels.

The Governor picks to pieces our complicated and insufficient tax laws, and recommends certain remedies, among which is that a board be created composed of the Judge of Probate, the Prosecuting Attorney and the County Treasurer, in the several counties, to whom the proper officers should submit all taxes to be levied for their approval.

He further recommends several appropriations for the different State institutions, among which is an appropriation for the long needed library building for the University.

He makes an eloquent and forcible plea for the proper care of the insane, recommending that appropriations be made for increasing the State's facilities for treating its insane. He recommends more stringent insurance laws to punish agents who come into this State and obtain business for companies that do not comply with the laws of the State.

THE Michigan Sportsmen's Association for the protection of game, fish and birds, will hold its sixth annual session at Lansing, commencing Tuesday, January 25, 1881, at 2 P.M., and continuing one and a half or two days. Headquarters at the Lansing House. Every local club or society organized in the interest of game and fish protection or propagation, improvement in marksmanship and outdoor recreation, or the study of the natural history of game animals of the land and water, in the State, is earnestly desired to send delegates to the number of five (or less) to this meeting, and individual sportsmen and citizens interested in the objects of this Association, are invited to attend and become individual members of the State Association, and be entitled to all the privileges if elected delegates.

DARWIN'S theory of the "survival of the fittest" is simply that the weakly die while the robust and hardy thrive and live. How true this is of all seed growth, and how necessary to sow only that which is suited by nature to live and develop. D. M. Ferry & Co., the great Seed growers and Seed dealers of Detroit, Mich., supply only the best and purest, raising their own seeds by the most approved methods and with the greatest care, and bringing to their business the invaluable aid of 25 years' experience in culture. Their latest Seed Annual, for 1881, is a real help to the gardener, and should be in the hands of all who desire to purchase pure and true Seeds. It is sent free to all who apply for it.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

Slow Transit.

New York Tribune, (Rep.)—The confession that the Morey letter was a forgery has not yet reached The World office; yet it started three days ago just across the street. This is the slowest transit on record.

Is This a Joke?

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—The Pennsylvania Legislature may now go about its business of electing a United States Senator with new courage. It cannot possibly choose a man so unfit that he will not shine in the Senate in contrast with the choice of Michigan.

Where The Trouble Lies.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—According to the census, Illinois is only one hundred and twenty thousand behind Ohio in point of population. But it should be remembered that if the Ohio men who hold office all over the country had gone home to be counted, the Buckeye State would make a much better showing in the decennial enumeration.

John Kelly's Head.

New York Tribune, (Rep.)—Senator Pendleton might modify his belief that the Democracy had recovered from its recent defeat were he to come here and spend a few hours with the brethren of this city. A cursory examination of the condition of John Kelly's head would be likely to convince him that the future holds in its unfathomable depths possible shindys within the party which may be detrimental to its health.

Getting Rich Pretty Fast.

Cincinnati Commercial.—A man with the enormous wealth now possessed by Mr. Vanderbilt could add to it very rapidly; in fact, it will double itself in twenty years if put into four per cent. bonds and let alone, save to add the annual interest. With the present "start" which Mr. Vanderbilt has in bonds and dividend paying stocks, it will be an easy matter for him to be worth at least $250,000,000 should he live twenty years hence. It is said that he is worth more than half that sum now.

An Era of Calamities.

Chicago News, (Ind.)—An era of calamities is upon us. Mother Shipton's prophecy as to the distruction of the world in 1881 may not be fulfilled, but all the people in the world may be blown up by boiler explosions, burned to a crisp in tenement houses, mangled by railway trains, drowned from ocean steamers, torn to pieces by coal oil lamp accidents, perforated by didn't-know-it-was-loaded pistols, swept out of existence by tornadoes and hurricanes, or starved to death by famine if there isn't a change for the better pretty soon.

Room for Only One More.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—Mr. Murat Halstead is now fixing up a Cabinet for General Garfield. He has already got five of the seven members fixed, and these are: Blaine for Secretary of State; Foster for Secretary of the Interior; Campbell, of West Virginia, for Postmaster General; Senator Bruce, late of Mississippi, now of Ohio, for Secretary of the Navy, and Allison, of Iowa, for the Treasury. In the course of the next sixty days Mr. Halstead will probably be able to pick out the right men for the two places remaining. There will be room, however, for only one more Ohio man.

New York in 1880.

New York Sun, (Ind.)—The population of the State of New York was 5,083,173 last year. We therefore gained between 1870 and 1880 a total of 700,414 inhabitants. Of this increase much the greater part took place in the five chief cities of the State, New York, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Albany and Rochester. They added 520,769 to their population. This State therefore now contains about as many people as Belgium and a million more than Portugal. It also has a larger population than all New England by about a million. These comparisons help us to gain a proper conception of the magnitude of the State which ranks first among the States of the Union in population and in resources.

The Ohio Man Described.

New York Herald, (Ind.)—"The Ohio man" of the political directory is, in the average, a bulky man of about two hundred pounds; at the same time he can be blown up to almost any size without loss to the country, except in bread and butter. The size of him does not measure his value, because usually he is like one of the big trees of California—hollow enough for a whole political procession. He naturally loves pop corn, and when he is not holding up his ears for an office he is listening to the little kernels popping in the pan. He is very green in regard to Eastern customs and when he eats terrapin in Baltimore or Philadelphia he writes home, "Jane, this beats sugar cake all to pieces and when I get home I'm going to have terrapin if I have to kill a whole hog." When he goes to a New York theatre he always asks to be put into the ladies' cabin and wonders whether there is any wood in the stove.

ALTHOUGH a frozen sand bank would afford as good sleighing as we now have, the ecstacy that the idea of a sleigh ride brings to a girl's mind compels the young man who is accustomed on a midsummer eve to swing upon her paternal's gate, to relentlessly drive a horse attached to a cutter over the frozen earth to satisfy the frivolity of her nature.

READ the prospectus in another columns of the Detroit Free Press. This stirling Michigan newspaper begins the new year with flying colors and with brilliant prospects for continued prosperity in the future. A SEVERE BLOW.

Last Tuesday M. W. Sweet, the Adrian pump man, with a force of men, among whom was one George Carter, was repairing a pump at the place of Mr. J. Bowen of Newburg. A windlass had been erected for raising the pump from the well, sixty-five feet in depth. Mr. Carter was turning the crank attached to the windlass when the crank slipped from his hands and flew around striking Mr. Carter upon the forehead, cutting a deep gash about three inches long. Mr. Carter was, of course, knocked senseless, and if a man had not been standing near to catch him by the clothes he would have been in the bottom of the well. Dr. Gray was called and sewed up the gash and left the man considerably better.

MATRIMONIAL.

Our marriage column contains the wedding notice of Mr. Albert S. Hayden, and Miss Eva Lacy Trimble. The affair was very quietly conducted, in the presence of a few relations and intimate friends without any of the pomp and ceremony usual on such occasions, but the congratulations of their friends are none the less hearty on that account. The groom is one of our most promising young business men, and the bride has lived among us long enough to gain the esteem of a large circle of friends. Their wedding tour consisted of a trip from the house of the bride's parents to their own household where they propose to begin house-keeping at once. A very sensible arrangement. May their journey down life's pathway together be under the protecting care of a lucky star, and may the fates deal kindly with them.

WHO SHALL DECIDE?

Last Monday's Times contains this interesting tid-bit of medical gossip:

According to the story of one of Tecumseh's M. D.'s, one Dr. Rynd, of Adrian, received a severe castigation by a brother "Med." at the late session of the State Medical society at Hillsdale.

The above is clipped from the Tecumseh correspondence to the Adrian Press of Dec. 31st, and it is amusing to say the least.

The certain Dr. J. "M. D." from Tecumseh never met Dr. Rynd in Hillsdale. Finally, and conclusively, Dr. Rynd did at a late meeting of the "Michigan Southern Medical society" held in the city of Adrian, without malice aforethought, and with the easiest grace imaginable, in fact it cost no exertion whatever, "sit down upon," castigate, obliterate, annihilate, triturate, dilute to the infinitesimal 30 potency a certain M. D. from Tecumseh, and further deponent saith not.

Now, there seems to be a double difference here; first between two knights of the quill, and secondly between two lights of the healing art. The difference between the correspondents of the Press and Times is not at all alarming. Newspapers frequently disagree! It is a way they have. In fact two newspapers seriously disagree sometimes and both tell the truth; that is, reflect precisely the information they receive from outside parties. The Press correspondent we know, and the Times correspondent we believe to be an honorable man. We do not apprehend any duel between them. Besides, their difference can be settled by reference to the parties directly interested.

But when two doctors disagree, who under the sun is going to decide then? This is the serious aspect of the case. If doctors are going to castigate, obliterate, annihilate and triturate each other in such an unceremonious fashion, the foundations of society will soon be broken up. And yet we think this bloody chasm can be crossed, and this apparent difference harmonized. The gentlemanly, handsome Tecumseh M. D., in giving his version of the affair to the Press correspondent probably spoke in a Pickwickian sense. He castigated Dr. Rynd the same as John Phœnix once castigated an antagonist of his: "I threw him to the ground," said John, "and held him firmly on top of me by my nose, which I had inserted between his teeth for that purpose." We await further developments in this controversy with intense interest.

TWO GOOD INVESTMENTS.

There is an excellent field undeveloped here in Tecumseh for two manufacturing enterprises, either of which would pay well upon the capital invested.

One is a fruit canning factory. The climate in this latitude cannot be surpassed for fruit of all kinds, as well as vegetables, and much larger quantities of both could be easily raised and would be if a better local market could be established here. To be sure the Tecumseh market is already good, but a large fruit factory here would improve it,—a few thousand dollars capital, united with a little good business talent, could start such an enterprise here as would certainly prove remunerative to the stockholders and beneficial to the community at large.

The other business which we have in mind is a cheese factory. Several of these are already in successful operation in other sections of the county, and they have invariably paid well.—Men of experience in the cheese making business can easily be obtained to start a new factory, and the amount of capital required is not very great.—Twenty farmers could be found within three miles of Tecumseh who could organize a cheese factory and have it in operation inside of ninety days.

We drop these hints hoping that the seed may fall on fertile soil.

Adrian Times: Wednesday afternoon the evidence of a probable crime was accidentally discovered under the ice near the paper mill. Harry Cole, who was passing by on his way from school, called to another boy named Otis Bartholomew, who was skating, to accompany him home. Young Bartholomew took off his skates, and just as he reached the edge of the ice his foot broke through, and beneath the ice he observed a strange package. He called to the Cole boy, and the two opened the bundle and found the body of a half developed child. Young Cole placed the remains in the hands of the authorities, who will institute an investigation. The body is that of a four months' foetus. It was wrapped in a copy of the New York Saturday Journal, and apparently had recently been cast into the river.

ONE morning last week a clerk in Henry McClure's grocery store took the ashes out of the stove and placed them in a wooden box which he set out in a back store-room upon some starch boxes. Later in the day the door of the back room was opened and the room was found full of smoke. There were a number of live coals among the ashes and had burned through the wooden box, and was preparing the way for a lively time amidst the oil barrels when discovered and extinguished.

THE FIRST SERMON IN LANSING.

The Detroit Free Press gives the following historical reminiscence of the first sermon preached at Lansing:

"A reporter of the Free Press was walking down Griswold street with Rev. F. A. Blades last evening, their conversation being upon the recent Senatorial caucus at Lansing. Mr. Blades remarked that he had not visited that city since the new Capitol had been opened.

"I wish to go very much," said Mr. Blades, "having a lively interest in the place. Did you know that I preached the first sermon there?"

"No," answered the reporter, "how did it come about?"

"I was then on my way from Eaton county one day," continued Mr. Blades, "when I met in the woods, now the site of Lansing, a sturdy looking fellow who hailed me with, 'What's your name and what are you looking for?' I answered, 'My name is Blades; I am a Methodist minister and I'm looking for a congregation.' 'Well,' said he, 'my name is Glenn; I'm a capitol commissioner, and if you'll help me to find a place for the new capitol I'll help you find a congregation.' I agreed, and in an hour or two we had settled the most important part of the question, and duly blazed the trees. Glenn asked me where dinner could be had, and I piloted him to a saw mill a mile or two away. We had a good dinner, and as there were some twenty people about the place—mill hands and all—Glenn says: 'This is as good a congregation as can be found; there is twenty minutes time, and we'll hear Blades preach.' I preached to them then and there."

GEORGE ELIOT'S ROMOLA.

A timely interest is given, by the death of the author, to the new edition of her masterpiece, "Romola," just issued by the American Book Exchange, New York. It shows her work at its best and strongest, and at the same time gives the reader the opportunity to acquire a lasting familiarity with the scenes and society of mediæval Italy. It is one of the few really great historical novels of the world. It is issued in handy and beautiful form, extra cloth binding, simple but rare elegance and taste in design, and like the other issues of the "Literary Revolution" its cost is almost nominal, viz: 35 cents. It is one of a series intended to form a library of classic fiction, which will include one representative and characteristic work of each of the great authors who have won lasting fame in the realm of fiction. Life is too short and too full of work to permit the reading of all that is beautiful and valuable in these creations of the imagination, but even very busy people can find time to read one book by each of the score of authors who have won immortal fame and place in the affections of the people. Not to be acquainted with them is to be ignorant of much that is most important and most interesting in the history of nations and of men. Not to possess them is to be deprived of most faithful and profitable sources of enjoyment. Among those issued or nearly ready are Scott's "Ivanhoe," Bulwer's "Pompeii," Irving's "Knickerbocker," Cooper's "Mohicans," "Tom Brown at Rugby," "Adventures of Don Quixote," and "Uarda, a Romance of Ancient Egypt." Full catalogue of standard publications will be sent on request, by the American Book Exchange, Tribune Building, New York.

THE edition of the January St. Nicholas (the New Year's number) has been entirely exhausted, and the editors are getting up so many attractions for the February number, that the publishers expect a similar fate for that issue. Charles Barnard has written for it a full account of the Obelisk—its history and all about its great move; the article will be brilliantly illustrated from photographs and sketches, and will have much to interest the older people as well as the children. In the same number are to be contributions from Boyesen, Susan Coolidge, Rossiter Johnson, Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, and others, while Lucretia P. Hale is expected to tell us about the Peterkins' Plan of Going to Egypt—possibly with the intention of visiting the home of the aforesaid Obelisk.

LETTER OF INQUIRY.

A letter addressed from France, addressed to the "Superior Director of the Hospital for the Poor, Lenawee county, Mich." was received at the Adrian post-office, and was handed to the superintendent of the poor. The letter was written in French and was signed by M. Reffier, a citizen of a small town in the province of Lorraine.—The writer makes inquiries concerning a brother whom he learns is an inmate of the county house, and with whom he formerly corresponded. We are informed that the person indicated is E. Reffier, who with his wife was received into the institution from Hudson two years ago. The man is somewhat advanced in years, and blind. Some time ago two of his children were taken to the state public school, where one of them died.—The writer of the letter appears to be a French gentleman in good circumstances, and he expresses a desire to minister to the wants of his unfortunate brother. The authorities will communicate with him.—Times.

A Word of Explanation.

Our Macon subscribers failed to get their HERALDS last week and we owe them a word of apology. Their bundle, in the hurry of mailing, was misdirected by us and sent to Ridgeway. It arrived there on Friday afternoon. The next Tuesday a postal was received informing us of the fact. Our clerk sent a request that the bundle be immediately returned to Tecumseh, but at this writing it has not yet put in an appearance. It took a postal about four days to travel from Ridgeway to Tecumseh. We consider it our duty to report this fact to the Postmaster General, as it is probably the fastest postal time on record. To our Macon friends we say: We are willing to shoulder all responsibility for any carelessness in our own office, but we do not care to be held responsible for the official courtesy, the business promptness and the lightning rapidity of the Ridgeway postmaster. That is a little too much.

Disappearance of a Ring.

EDITOR HERALD:

Under the above title in a late issue of your paper appeared an article reflecting upon the good name of a young lady of Ridgeway, and in which is stated she was searched by authority of a search warrant. In justice to all parties, and to correct your errors, I will state:

1st. No search warrant was issued by the justice; on the contrary I searched the party at request of Mr. Sherrard and Mr James, and of the young lady herself, in Mr. James' presence, at the store where I found her waiting.

2d. After searching until I was satisfied, and not finding the ring, I asked Mr. James if he was satisfied, as did also the young lady, who expressed her anxiety they should be satisfied she had not taken the ring, when Mr. James replied he was satisfied.

Tape-Worm in Cucumbers.

The dietetic reputation of cucumbers is bad enough already, but it is likely to become worse, now that Dr. Leidy, of Philadelphia, has discovered that they are liable to be infested with tape-worm. At a meeting of the Academy of Science, Philadelphia, he exhibited a specimen of tape-worm taken from the inside of a large cucumber. It is said to have had all the characteristics of a true tape-worm, but belonged to an unknown species, the peculiarity being that the ovaries, containing the round yellow eggs, are confined to the anterior extremity of the segment.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

THE NATIONAL GRANGE.

Report of the Committee on Transportation and Commercial Relations.

The problem of transportation, in its relation to agriculture, confronts every farmer throughout the land. He may apply his labor with rare skill, propitious seasons may bless his efforts, and the fertile soil under these influences may return the most bountiful crops, yet there is the necessity for a market, and the means of reaching it, as the prime condition of profit. There is ever-increasing demand for the product of his labor; he makes the supply, but there is one intervening condition necessary to bring these two elements of commerce into profitable union—transportation. Time was when the water-ways of the country served the purpose well, but new and improved highways of commerce have been provided; railroads threading the continent, the lines laid in advance of the plow, reaching athwart the broad domain of an industrious people, whose restless energies have thus been led to new effort, on new land, and this country has, by such means become the granary of the world. But while agriculture has been enlarged and extended through this agency, working to promote its development, it has, by rapid stages, become subjected to the very power whose kindly offices were at first employed to give it encouragement and support. Between it and the railways there is close inter-dependence, reciprocal obligation that must be honestly observed; for if it is not, one or the other must suffer. The railways depend upon the products of agriculture more than upon all else for employment out of which to secure profitable return for expense of operating, and capital invested in construction; while farmers depend on the railways to move their crops at such cost for the service as will leave them fair return for their labor and capital employed. As a question of political economy, it is clear that these relations must be maintained for the security and the welfare of both interests; and it is equally clear that they will not be maintained without just rules to define the obligations.

Experience has shown that the corporate power which manages a railway is rapacious. It is marked by encroachments and usurpations. It does not abide within its sphere, where it is well nigh autocratic; it assumes rights that belong to the people, forgetful of the fact that its first duty is respectful obedience to the people whence it emanated. It taxes the products of labor at will, because it has usurped the power to do so, and with astonishing effrontery, it warns the people against attempts to recover rights they have carelessly yielded. It makes the plea that railway property is private property, and, therefore, not amenable to the public for errors and wrongs in its management, and not subject to regulations offered by the public. As the outgrowth of this sentiment, there is a system of charges for transportation dependent only on the will of railway managers, and they care only to get from their traffic what it will bear, without reference to the interests of the owners of the property they transport. That they do so, is not denied; it is admitted by themselves, and the practice defended as a right. In this they exercise power which even the State would not use without delicate regard for the interests of citizens generally, looking to their welfare, and yielding the power in their behalf wisely lest it might bring suffering. Yet this corporate railroad power, defiant, challenges the multitude of sufferers and sneers at Legislatures that attempt to impose restraints upon its rapacity, or check its assumed prerogatives. Ever alert and unscrupulous, it goes into various districts, selects its supple servants, and by defrauding the suffrages of the people, puts upon its plant tools and seal of authority, by which they become law-makers, to betray the rights of citizens at the behest of a soulless master. Or, if the expedient of direct representation be not employed, they do not hesitate to use bribes upon legislators, for there is abundant testimony showing that they have purchased the honor of Senators and Representatives in many Legislatures, and trampled manhood in the covetous dust of frail nature until in some States the debasement of law-makers has become a byword and lasting shame. Even now, while we deliberate upon the means of restraining the monstrous tyranny of railroad power those who wield it are plotting to send into the United States Senate their paid attorney from the most powerful State in this Union to forestall the day of reckoning, and in four other populous States, Senators directly in the service of railways, will soon be chosen if the people do not make prompt and vigorous protest. Already these corporations have secured powerful influence in the Senate, and they have numerous willing and obsequious servants in the other branch of Congress, ready always to barter away their right in the interests of the magnates they serve.

Intrenched in the seve[illegible] citadel, itals, domiciled in the c[illegible] railway confident and strong, [illegible] continent, and domina[illegible] industries with cold neglect [illegible] golden rule that is the vitalizi[illegible] it of free government, and wit[illegible]ical contempt of the commo[illegible]esty and homely virtues that su[illegible] the structure of civil liberties. [illegible]er within the State, accelera[illegible]n growth, licensed by its own i[illegible]ate greed, usurping as desire ad[illegible] limitless in audacity—how lon[illegible] it be before the State itself [illegible] be a supplicant to its creature [illegible]lays lustful hands upon the sh[illegible] of authority yet preserved, swagg[illegible] every precinct of the legislat[illegible]main, with its mammon defile[illegible]ermine, and has towering scorn [illegible] people, and especially contemp[illegible]he class that suffers most by it[illegible]l exactions—farmers?

Shall there be an [illegible]nized effort by the people to recov[illegible] rights filched from them by the [illegible]tures of their generosity? Will [illegible] mark the limit of concession and [illegible] after guard its boundaries? The[illegible] is opportune, their strength [illegible] to the requirement—do they ha[illegible] purpose? Will the American fa[illegible] join in positive, earnest, determi[illegible] effort to secure just protection, [illegible]gh the peaceful medium of law[illegible]e in their design and just in [illegible]eration, whereby railway corpor[illegible] shall be gently but firmly rest[illegible]d within the limits so defined? I[illegible] will, the day is near at hand [illegible] their industry will be free to distr[illegible] its profits through all channels o[illegible]le in just measure, according to [illegible]rts, and they will labor in the p[illegible]ry avocation of man. It is not th[illegible]se now to mark each step of [illegible]eneficent work, nor can this be [illegible]at once by any legislation; for t[illegible] must be nice adjustment of the[illegible]at forces engaged, on the one han[illegible] production, and on the other [illegible]ransportation essential to the dev[illegible]ment of all useful industry. T[illegible] must be wholesome growth o[illegible]mon honesty so that the legisla[illegible] will spurn the bribe insiduously [illegible]red in a railway pass, a judge be [illegible]ed and ashamed when the hint i[illegible]en that his palm can be tickled b[illegible]or, and a Senator of the United S[illegible] execrated when he betrays th[illegible]nor of his high position by accep[illegible] a fee to carry the case of a railwa[illegible]rporation against the gov[illegible] has sworn to serve before a judg[illegible]hose appointment he has procure[illegible]d by the damnable prostitution o[illegible]onor mulcts the people he is unwa[illegible]y to serve. It is not yet enough [illegible]at there must be honor and honest[illegible] high places. Power will not be [illegible]re pure than its source; the peopl[illegible]ust be honest and delegate their [illegible]wer only to those who are worth[illegible]f the trust.

In [illegible]wer to the assumption of private [illegible]ghts, vociferously proclaimed by [illegible]way attorneys, there is the opin[illegible] of Chief Justice Waite, delivered[illegible]m the bench when rendering the [illegible]ision in the celebrated 'Granger case' so called, carried to the Supreme Co[illegible] upon this very point. These are [illegible]e words quoted from the decision "When therefore, one devotes his [illegible] property to a use in which the public [illegible]as an interest, he in effect grants to [illegible]he public an interest in that use, a[illegible] must submit to be controlled by t[illegible] public to the extent of the inter[illegible]s he has thus created." This is [illegible]mplete refutation of the charge that [illegible]e people assail private rights when [illegible]ey try to regulate the methods of [illegible]ransportation in the interest of the [illegible]whole public. They have an undoubted right to establish regulations for the conservation of their private rights, and they ask nothing more in the restraints they would place on railway management. They do not lose sight of the inter-dependence of their interests and the corporations created by the State to render a public service, but they would regulate and establish these relations on the basis of common justice.

It may be said that the evils of railway transportation will in due course of time be remedied by competition. Not so. A distinguished authority, whose interest was principally in railways, has said, truly, that where combination is possible, competition is impossible. Witness the pooling of the trunk lines leading from the grain fields of the West to the seaboard. So far as the earnings on the traffic are concerned, they have a common treasury from which they draw pro rata, according to allotment of capital by the terms of their compact. Here are all the conditions of competition inoperative, because joint interest necessarily favors combination. In other cases, where combination cannot be maintained, and rates are, therefore, reduced to competitive points, the abatement is sure to be restricted to those points, and corresponding additions are made at other points more than compensating all concessions. In this there is an alarming power of discrimination. Citizens of one locality are compelled to pay for the support of industries in another locality, equally favored by nature and artificially aided by a power that should distribute its benefits with impartial regard for all concerned. This is the power to make or unmake, to tear down or to build up, an inequality abhorrent [illegible] and at variance with the fundamental principles of free government.

What shall we do? Let us exert the force inherent in our numbers. Direct this through the ballot in such a manner that every Legislature, State and National, shall reflect the will of the people and their interests rather than of corporations. Secure in these bodies due representation of the chief interests of the land. Let farmers organize in utter disregard of the restraints that political parties impose, and let them keep steadily in view the governing purpose to urge the body politic of the venalities that handicap material progress. They may co-operate with all persons and all associations that work in the interest of free and enlightend administration of justice, but for themselves they must move for the protection of natural rights against the monstrous greed of corporate power that rots in the chaos of principles overturned and confused by its wanton assumptions. They must invoke order, law, peace, justice for all, lest revolution intervene to clear away with rude hand the fabric of tyranny that now fetters industry and retards development.

Household Hints.

Chapped Hands.—A correspondent says that a simple mixture of equal quantities of rich cream and strong vinegar will make a compound which, if used on the hands after washing them, will cure chap.

Milk of Roses.—Put into a small bottle two ounces of rose water, one tablespoonful of oil of sweet almonds, ten drops of oil of tar. Shake the bottle until the whole is combined, and you have a nice cosmetic to apply to the skin after washing.

Celery.—Persons who are of a nervous temperament should make free use of celery, which acts at once upon the nerves. It is most palatable in the form of salad, but may be eaten with salt only. Physicians have only lately recognized this fact.

Earache.—There is scarcely an ache to which children are subject so hard to bear and difficult to cure as the earache. A cure not often known to fail is to put a pinch of black pepper upon a bit of cotton batting, tie it up, dip in sweet oil, and insert into the ear. Put a flannel bandage over the head to keep it warm.

Feed for Chickens.—The Massachusetts Ploughman says: "Skimmed milk, and even loppered milk, will make chicks grow wonderfully fast. Boiled potatoes are also excellent for them, and if chopped into hash with some refuse meat, nothing delights them more unless it is a fat angle worm. Like all other animals, chickens like a variety of food, and their taste should be gratified. Among other things, they like fresh grass. Few farmers seem to be aware what a graminivorous animal a hen is.

English Pickle for Tongue.—For two tongues, make a brine of two ounces of saltpetre, half pound of brown sugar, one pint of barrel salt, one teacup of molasses, water enough to cover them. Let them stand in a crock, well kept under the brine, for ten days. When ready to use, boil two or three hours; skin and eat cold. This brine can be used as long as it keeps sweet, and is good to keep hams or dried beef in.

SIGNING ONE'S NAME.

A young man traded a poor for a good horse, giving his note of $90, payable by agreement, six months after date, without interest. When called upon for payment he claimed that it was not due by any means, and a careful examination showed that it read "payable six months after death." In this case the father prevailed upon the young man to pay the note, on the ground that "he (the son) was in a fair way to have plenty of other accounts to settle about the time the note, as written, would be due." This is an illustration of how easy it is to entirely change the purport of a written agreement so as not to be noticed by the casual observer. In this, first number of the volume, we wish to impress our former advice upon every reader, especially farmers, namely, not to sign any paper for a stranger. Millions of dollars have been filched from farmers who have thoughtlessly, or carelessly, or ignorantly signed their names. Beguiled by the promises of large profits, they have undertaken to act as "agents" for this, that, or the other invention, or a lot of other implements, new patents, spring mattresses, etc., etc., with the guarantee that all not sold would be taken back. They give notes for the payment with the verbal (or may be separate written) agreement that the note will not be collectable if the articles are not sold. But the seller soon disposes of the good note at a bank or elsewhere and disappears. His guarantee amounts to nothing, he is out of reach, and the innocent buyer of the note collects it. Very often the victim signs what he supposes to be merely an order for the articles with his address for having them correctly forwarded, but the swindler has adroitly got his signature to a very different document. The only safety is to not write one's name and not even make a pen mark for any stranger whatever—under any circumstances.—American Agriculturist.

Ayer's

Sarsaparilla
Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.
By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.
It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

Senator Coxe, elected to the General Assembly of Pennsylvania from the Luzerne District, has refused to take the oath of office because he spent money to secure his election. He stated to the Assembly that he did not use money corruptly, but that he employed men to electioneer for him, paid expenses of meeting, etc., and that under the circumstances he should refuse to take the oath of office. It should be added that Mr. Coxe is an imposing looking gentleman, with a bright, clear countenance and a keen black eye. As an honest legislator, his colleagues regard him as a curiosity.

Ten Persons Burned to Death.

A fire in a five-story tenement house, in Madison street, New York, fatally burned ten persons, and caused the serious injury of a number of others. The fire started at the bottom of the stairs that furnished the only means of exit for the tenants in a five-story building, excepting the fire-escape attached to the building outside, and in less than five minutes swept through the stairway to the roof, cutting off the escape of a score of persons. The flames soon found vent also through two lower stories, and thus barred egress by the fire-escape. The tenants, panic stricken, made a rush for the roof, but the scuttle was firmly hooked and would not yield. The ascending flames drove the people back within their rooms, and the wildest confusion followed. Men and women threw their children from the windows and jumped after them through the flames that swept across the yard and set their clothing ablaze. When the firemen obtained mastery, the dead bodies of nine persons who had been burned were taken out from the building. Several were injured in their efforts to escape and were sent to the hospital. The following is a list of the dead: Ellen Sheridan, aged forty-three years; Kate Sheridan, aged fourteen; Maggie Sheridan, aged five; Martin Sheridan, aged three; John Walsh, aged thirteen; Thomas Cassiday, aged six; Charles Cassiday, aged eight; a girl name Egan, aged two; and Mrs. Sheridan, age unknown. Several persons were injured, among them James Cassiday, Mary Egan, and Charles Walsh. The fire was caused by plumbers, who were at work at the foot of the stairs, thawing out frozen water pipes. In an instant black smoke rolled up the long stairway, drawn onward by the draught caused by an open window in the upper hallway. There was a momentary hush as the frightened plumbers hurried into the yard. Immediately there was a wild rush over head and the sound of breaking glass, and the air was filled with the wails of the imprisoned men and women, shrieks of frightened children and cries for help of the barkeeper and plumber who ran through the street to a near-by police station. Very soon the clang of the fire bells filled the street, and the narrow alley became filled with firemen and police, struggling to bring help to the imprisoned and burning tenants. They came too late, and the fire finding vent through the open doors and windows of the untenented ground floor of the house, and through the doors had seized upon the shutters, window frames and wooden floors of the balconies outside, licking them up like so much tissue paper, and reaching upward toward the floor where the frightened men and women huddled together afraid to venture out on the fire-escape that was itself aflame, while the flames within the house were plainly visible through the ill-fitting doors then being fast consumed. Eight families occupied the house, two on each floor, and of these, all who escaped, did so by jumping.

The Hanging of Mrs. Meierhoffer.

Mrs. Margaret Meierhoffer and Frank Lammens were hanged at Newark, N. J., on the 6th inst., for the murder of J. W. Meierhoffer—husband of the condemned woman—October 18, 1879. The woman's arms were pinioned at the elbow and the noose adjusted around her neck before being taken from the jail. With the condemned woman marched the Sheriff, and immediately behind them came an under-Sheriff and deputies, and in the rear two constables. Once under the shadow of the gallows no time was lost in pinioning the lower limbs of the woman. The noose was then hooked onto the rope that dangled from the crossbeam, the black cap was drawn over her face and the fatal signal was given. There was a dull thud as the weight was released and the body of Margaret Meierhoffer shot upward with a convulsive jerk. It spun around several times and at last hung an inert mass. When Lammens was brought from his cell he asked to see the jury that convicted him, but they were not present. He declared his innocence and was led trembling to the gallows. At 10:27 the drop fell and in fourteen minutes his pulse stopped and he was pronounced dead.

The crime is related as follows: "Mrs. Meierhoffer, with her semi-imbecile husband and two sons, lived on the Orange Mountains, at a place called St. Cloud's; the house being situated on the Northfield road, about five miles from Newark. Lammens came along and asked for food, which was given him. Mrs. Meierhoffer, who had necessarily the management of the farm, asked him if he could work and wanted to. He replied that he did, and she hired him to gather in the harvest. On the 9th of October Meierhoffer was carrying potatoes in a basket from an out-house into the cellar of the residence. At the foot of the steps he was shot by Lammens, as Mrs. Meierhoffer alleges. This was between 11 and 12 o'clock, as fixed by the prosecution on the trial. During the afternoon three hunters called at the house and purchased milk, which was brought from the cellar by Lammens, and the groceryman and butcher called. Nothing was told to these persons of the tragedy which had been perpetrated. But Mrs. Meierhoffer explains her reticence by saying that she was afraid of her life at the hands of Lammens, and thought it better to wait until night to bring the police. If they came during daylight Lammens might see them and escape. She sent for the police and kept him in the bed-room until they arrived. Lammens and Mrs. Meierhoffer were arrested and returned for trial, which came off in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Essex County, before Judge Depue. They were found guilty and remanded for sentence. Judge Depue then sentenced both to be hanged on the 6th of January. Mrs. Meierhoffer's two sons, Joe, aged twenty-one, and Theodore, aged sixteen years, were at first very attentive, to their unhappy mother, and their devotion to her, especially during the trial, was quite touching, and the subject of much talk by those attending court. But Joe had not been to see her for nearly five months, and Theodore had not paid her a visit for a couple of months.

Gen. Terry telegraphs from St. Paul, January 5, to military headquarters the following from Maj. Iliges, at camp, Popular River, January 3: "I moved the hostiles to-day to my camp and have them under guard. There are by actual count 135 of them, and 100 more to come over from the Yankton camp to-morrow. I proceeded against them this morning and was met by the Yankton chiefs, who requested I should not visit their camp, and promised to turn all the hostiles over to me to-morrow. When this is accomplished I will move at once to Buford. I burned and destroyed forty-two of their guns which were worthless, and will get more to-morrow. There will be about 300 horses. Reliable news just received is that Sitting Bull, with over 100 lodges, is at the crossing at Mills River, fifty-two miles from here. A train from Keough, on Red Water, will probably reach us to-morrow. The Crow surrendered his ponies and guns this morning."

Inventors and Patentees

XLVIth CONGRESS—THIRD SESSION.

SENATE.

Congress met and resumed its labors on the 5th inst.

In the Senate, the Vice President submitted from the Secretary of War papers showing maintenance of the channel at South Pass, Mississippi River, for quarter ending November 9, 1880; also from Secretary of War, indorsement of recommendation by Quartermaster General for additional appropriation of $1,000,000 to replenish depot stock of clothing, which is exhausted.

A resolution offered by Mr. Butler was adopted directing the Secretary of the Interior to furnish information and the report of the Superintendent of the Census touching alleged frauds in the enumeration of the inhabitants of South Carolina.

The Senate Committee on Appropriations authorizes Mr. Eaton to report back the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation Bill, with a few amendments. One provides that the Charge d'Affaires at Bucharest, Roumania, shall be also Consul General. Others reclassify some of the Consulates. Belfast, Ireland, is raised from fourth to third grade.

Mr. Kernan introduced a bill respecting silver coinage which provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall hereafter coin only such an amount of standard silver dollars as he may find necessary to meet the demand.

HOUSE.

An amendment offered by Mr. Clymer appropriating $125,000 to pay land grant railroads 50 per cent. of what the Quartermaster General finds justly due them, was agreed to.

Mr. Regan offered a substitute to the Inter-State Commerce Bill. It provides that one man should not be charged more than another for the same service; that no drawbacks or rebates should be allowed; that the people should not be deprived of the benefit of the competition by passing of freights between competing railroads. That the people of localities should be protected by partial restrictions on the power of corporations, and that more shall not be charged for a shorter distance than for a long distance over the same line.

Mr. Rice inquired whether the gentleman (Reagan) believed Congress had power to oblige the New York Central Railroad Company, in any way, to modify charges for freight received by it at Buffalo, either by railroad or steamboat to be carried within the State of New York.

Mr. Reagan replied that it was the origin and destination of freight that fixed the nature of the commerce. If freight was shipped from one State to another, it was inter-State commerce, whether it went over one or more railroads.

The bill went over. When it next comes up, one or two days will be allowed for debate.

Mr. Kelley, in Committee of the Whole made a speech in opposition to the Funding Bill, and Mr. Crittenden announced an amendment repealing all acts imposing a tax on the capital and deposits of savings banks, national banks, State banks, and private bankers, providing that the tax on the circulating notes of national banks issued on bonds authorized by this act shall not exceed one-half of 1 per cent., and providing, further, that the total amount of silver dollars of 412½ grains, authorized under the act of February 28, 1878, shall not exceed $100,000,000.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads The Sun. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. The Sun long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning The Sun prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. The Sun's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. The Sun believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. The Sun believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

For the Daily Sun, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of The Sun is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the Weekly Sun, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy gratis. Address

AROUND THE COUNTY.

WOODSTOCK.

One of the most remarkable family reunions that has been held in this county took place January 5, at the commodious residence of A. C. Osborne, the oldest settler now living in the township. In June, 1824, Jesse Osborne purchased a farm adjoining the present Judge Stacy farm in Tecumseh. He lived there until 1832 when he sold out and purchased a farm on section 9, in Woodstock, and built a large log house and established a home that will never fade from the memory of his children, and should one log or brick ever fall from that old house which is the pride of his children, it will not be the fault of his son Alvin C. Osborne, the present owner, who supports it tenderly with props and stays, forgetting that to other eyes it could appear anything but an ornament opposite his fine residence. It is hard to prevent the minds' return to scenes once enjoyed, and it was natural that the children who were nurtured so fondly in the old house should return from the remotest parts of the earth after a separation of nearly thirty years to greet their playmates of half a century ago. The roll being called all the children now living answered to their names: Mrs. Louis Beaubien, of Detroit; Mr. Alvin C. Osborne, of Woodstock; Mr. Charles H. Osborne, of Jackson; Mrs. O. Lamb, of Adrian; Mrs. C. H. Powers, of San Francisco—three sisters and two brothers, whose ages range from sixty-seven to fifty, all in good health and spirits, and able to sing in harmony with Mr. C. H. Powers, as he sang "Home again, home again from a foreign shore." Fortune has been kind and time has dealt gently with them, for the oldest as well as the youngest "tripped the light fantastic toe." At 8 o'clock all were in pleasant converse, and supposed that nothing more could be added, when music which had been provided arrived, and a quadrille was formed, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Powers, of California, leading, followed by Mr. C.H. Osborne and Mrs. Beaubien, the oldest sister, the sets all being filled by near relatives of the family with the exception of Mr. Smith Briggs, who in early days was considered one of the family and who now claims their friendship in memory of "Old lang syne." At 11 o'clock all sat down to a table loaded with good things which spoke silently but surely of a well filled cellar and larder. After supper C. H. Osborne, a gentleman nearly 60 years of age, danced a double shuffle and cut an ancient pigeon wing, to the merriment of the old and envy of the young. This was followed by a side-splitting dance and performance by Mr. C. H. Powers and Mrs. Phebe Lamb Mitchell, entitled Punch and Judy, in a manner unequaled even by the original. All now joined in singing, and engaged themselves until the "wee sma' hours" admonished them that the party must separate never again to meet until the Archangel shall proclaim that time is no more.

CLINTON.

Last week Thursday the mercury stood at 40° above zero, when the wind shifted to the west, and it went down 30° in three hours, and at 5 A. M. next morning it had settled 50°. Rather sudden.

Mr. Wm. Parsons' lecture was entertaining and instructing to those who have read the history of that far off period, especially the excavations made of late in Troy and Greece by Schliemann.

One of our hotels has changed hands. E. Yost leaves it, and Frank Silvers has purchased it of Hiram Reynolds, the owner of the premises.

Our Postoffice underwent a change between Saturday night and Monday morning. It is changed so as to facilitate delivery, and 127 new boxes added, 12 of which are lock boxes.

Theodore Tilton is expected here this evening, Tuesday, Jan. 18.

To G. C. Fisk and wife, a son. All doing well.

Deerfield Record: The crossing of the Lake Shore and Toledo & Ann Arbor roads, about one mile west of Ida, has been named Federman, in honor of John Federman, the tender of the target, who has been in the employ of the former road over thirty years.

THE two masonic lodges of Hudson have voted to consolidate.

ADDISON.

Your correspondent had a very pleasant call at the HERALD printing office Friday evening. In point of taste and convenience it is by far the best appointed office he has ever visited.

Farmers of the western border of the county are busily engaged hauling logs to mill, since the recent fall of snow.

Mr. J. S. Briggs, late with O. Kelley, of Kelley's Corners, if now in the employ of Smith Bros., of this place. Mr. and Mrs. B. are people of acquirements and worthy of a hearty welcome by Addison society.

The Addison sick list is by no means wanting for names, among which is that of Miss Emma Rickey, who is very low with heart disease at this writing.

The ice crops on Devils lake and the mill pond here are unusually good ones this winter. Large quantities are being secured for summer use.

The union schools here were opened again Monday morning with a Mr. Fuller and Miss Clara Lumbard, both of Rollin, for teachers. We trust the engagement may terminate with mutual satisfaction.

Dr. Wm. Brown is now in his new apartments in the Kline building. His drug trade just opened will doubtless realize a fair patronage.

The general scarcity of fodder of nearly all kinds causes a troubled frown to rest upon the countenance of many whose want it has been to whistle the "Cow Boy."

NAPOLEON.

Messrs. C. & H. Hawley have just been having a fine granite monument erected on their cemetery lot which is very beautiful and an ornament to the yard. It was put up by the Hardwick Granite Company, and speaks well for the company.

The N. C. B., the best band in the county outside of Jackson, is to give our citizens a grand musical treat next Friday and Saturday evenings, January 21st and 22nd, at the Baptist Church in this village. They will be assisted by Profs. Boos, Hanna and Church. Their teacher, Prof. Boos, has taken great pains to make this a grand success.

Resolutions of the Macon Reform Club and W. C. T. U.

In view of the sad fact that since we last met, death has removed from our midst an earnest sympathiser and fellow-worker, Mrs. Isaiah Hendershot.

Resolved, That we as temperance societies do hereby give public expression to our sense of the great loss we have suffered.

Resolved, That we will hold in affectionate remembrance the services and the encouragement given by the deceased to the cause that is dear to our hearts.

Resolved, That we especially record the help our societies have received from the departed sister's talent of song, and that the happy, inspiring songs she has sung will continue to live in our memories, although the singer has departed.

Resolved, That as our comrades fall by our side, we promptly "close up" our ranks and continue to present an unbroken and unyielding front to the enemy—the more determined and zealous because of the recent reminder we have had that "the night cometh when no man can work."

Resolved, That we express our sincere sympathy for the bereaved family; and that a copy of these resolutions be handed them, as well as placed upon our records, and sent to the Tecumseh HERALD for publication.

She was a member of the Presbyterian church. The funeral will take place to-day at 2 P. M., from the deceased's residence. Rev. Dr. Kendall will officiate, and the remains will be deposited in the Pine lake cemetery.

FROM AN EASTERN FRIEND.

LYSANDER, N.Y., Jan. 7, 1881.

EDITOR HERALD:

Your wide awake and interesting journal found its way from our quiet and secluded home in the East through the liberal generosity of a brother, who resides in the immediate vicinity from whence it starts out on its weekly visits to its numerous readers throughout Lenawee and adjoining counties in Michigan. Most assuredly the HERALD has warm friends here in our household in Lysander, and not a few among the neighbors who chance to see and peruse its pages. Long may it continue to be the HERALD of progress and reform. Lysander, a quiet little hamlet, located in the northwest corner of Onondaga county, contains about four hundred inhabitants, laying claim to no small amount of enterprise. With its two churches, the Methodist and Congregationalist, three stores, one hotel, a carriage shop and other mechanics, and last but not least, the good folk have now in process of building, a fine two story brick school house that will be second to none in the town. Have had good sleighing since about Thanksgiving. Weather has been severely cold for a few days past, mercury crawling down to zero and below. Potatoes and apples have frozen badly. A.

LENAWEE COUNTY ITEMS.

Clinton News: The Clinton Woolen Mills are about to add five new looms, a new wool washer, new finishing machinery, etc., which will give employment to about ten more hands.—Let the good work go on.

Adrian Times: Parties from Chicago are buying frozen apples in the county, paying twenty-five cents per barrel for the fruit alone. The apples will be converted into cider, for which they are said to be peculiarly adapted.

Deerfield Record: The house of Charles Lewis, corner of Raisin and Keegan streets, was discovered to be on fire about five o'clock, Monday afternoon, but the flames were quickly extinguished by the application of a few pails of water. The fire caught from coals dropping through a rod hole in a parlor stove, and setting on fire the carpet underneath, by which it extended to a partition. The damage done consisted of a large hole burned in the partition and a like one in the carpet.

Hudson Post: Charles Monahan, a young man who has been working around Hudson for some time past, stole an overcoat and watch from W. Van Akin, for whom he was at work, on Friday of last week. He was arrested at Archbald, O., by constable Rogers, and the stolen property was found on his person. He was brought back to Hudson and arraigned before Justice Hiller, where he plead guilty, and was sentenced to ninety days imprisonment in the House of Correction at Ionia.

Blissfield Advance: Chas. Dixon, a fireman on No. 3 west last night, as he was engaged in letting water from water-tank at the station into the tank of the engine, by some means was knocked from the tender by the stream of water, and falling upon his head on the sidewalk, fractured his skull, producing a severe wound. He was taken to the residence of Dr. Eccles, where he remained in an unconscious state all night, but at this writing is somewhat improving under the Doctor's care.

Adrian Press: A discharged Lake Shore conductor couldn't discover why the "grand bounce" had been made so suddenly operative in his case, and appeared before the bouncing magnate, with a somewhat urgent demand to be made acquainted with the cause. "Well, sir," replied the "high bouncer," "I suppose it is fair that you should know. I have got a better man in your place." The conductor says the explanation was "brief but satisfactory."

President—Mrs. J. M. Geddes.
Rec. Sec.—Mrs. Geo. M. Knight.
Cor. Sec.—Miss M. J. Sherman.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. C. Rowley.
Vice Presidents—Mrs. Charles Humphrey, Mrs. E. Wilcox, Mrs. E. Clegg, Mrs. Prof. Lowrie, Mrs. A. E. Crane.
Executive Committee — Mrs. Dr. Vanderburg, Mrs. C. B. Ackley, Mrs. E. Foote, Mrs. E. Crane.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts during the year, $549.92; expenditures, $539.96; leaving a balance in the treasury of 96 cents.

FROM the biennial report of the trustees of the State Insane Asylum, at Pontiac, we see that thirty-four patients have been received at the institution from Lenawee county during the past two years. Out of the 328 that were treated, 112 were farmers, more than double the number of any other occupation. Only four printers have been received since the institution began, which fact is extremely cheering to the craft. Eighteen cases resulted from intemperance, there being only one other cause to which a greater number of cases are referred.

MR. O. E. HUMPHREY, a sewing machine man of Adrian, who is at times subject to fits of mental prostration, started on December 21st to visit friends in Victor, N. Y. Nothing was heard of him for some time and his wife thought probably that some accident had befallen him; thereupon letters of inquiry were written and it was found that a man named Humphrey had been killed by the cars near Buffalo. This news seemed to be convincing as to the fate of the Adrian gentleman. But further investigation revealed that the Humphrey who was killed by the cars at Buffalo was not O. E. Still the whereabouts of the latter were not yet known until relatives in New York State learned of a Humphrey being found by the police of Buffalo in a penniless condition and sentenced to the work house for thirty days. This Humphrey turned out to be O. E., and the relatives immediately obtained his release, much to the comfort of his wife at Adrian.

THE GOLD OF HOPE.

Bright shines the sun, but brighter after rain;

So rest is sweeter when it follows pain.
And the sad parting makes our friends more dear.

'Tis well it should be thus; our Father knows
The things that work together for our good.
We draw a sweetness from our bitter woes—
We would not have all sunshine if we could.

The days with all their beauty and their light
Come from the dark and fine gold region;
Day speaks of earth, but heaven shines through the night,
Where in the blue a thousand star-fires burn.

So rules the law, the law of recompense
That binds our life on earth and heaven in one;
Faith cannot live where all is sight and sense,
Nor faith can live and sing when these are gone.

We grieve and murmur, for we can but see
The tangle through that life is strewed by;
When if we only saw the things to be,
Our lips would breath a song, not sigh.

Wait, then, my soul! and edge the darkening cloud
With the bright gold that Hope can always lend.
And if to-day thou art with sorrow bowed,
Wait till to-morrow, and thy grief shall end.

And when we reach the limit of our days,
Beyond the reach of shadows and of night,
Then shall our every look and voice be praise
To Him who stores our everlasting light.

THE ELDER'S SERMON.

"I really wish, deacon, that you would tell me what your candid opinion of our minister is."

Deacon Brown looked meditatively at the speaker, a small, wiry-looking man, whose features were almost as sharp as the sharp, black eyes fixed so intently upon him.

"I don't know, Brother Quimby, as a candid opinion of our minister would do him any good."

"I dare say not," responded Mr. Quimby, darkly; "but then it would do me a great deal of good to hear it."

"I don't know as to that either."

"There's no one in the church whose opinion I think more of," continued Mr Quimby. "Not that I approve of giving it to everyone. But you needn't be afraid of saying just what you think to me, deacon, for it won't go any further, and it might serve to clear up some doubts that trouble me."

"What doubts?"

"Well—about various things. But you haven't told me what your opinion is, deacon?"

"I have only one opinion of Elder Wakeman, and that is that he is a man who tries to do his duty in all the relations of life."

This was evidently something that Mr. Quimby neither expected nor desired to hear, and he stared blankly at the speaker. But quickly recovering himself, he said:

"Ha! I think I understand you, deacon. What you say is very well put indeed. I have thought that he might be a leetle more willing to take advice; but there is no question in my mind but what he tries to do his duty, as you say. But is he sound?"

"Perhaps not. Some ministers are all sound."

The merry twinkle in the good deacon's eyes found no reflection in the solemn visage opposite him.

"It's no laughing matter, deacon," responded Mr. Quimby, with a rebuking shake of the head. "I am surprised that you should speak on so serious a subject with such unseeming levity. I refered to being sound in doctrine. I have been a good deal exercised in my mind in regard to this ever since I heard his sermon on 'justification,' which is no justification at all, as I understand it, and as good old Dr. Seaver used to lay it down. Dear old man! I wonder what he would say, if he could come back and hear the new-fangled ideas that are taught from the pulpit where he preached such good, old-fashioned doctrines nigh on to twenty years."

"If he's where I think he is, he doesn't want to come back. I only hope that some things he used to preach about are clearer to him now than he ever succeeded in making them to me."

"There's no merit in believing where everything is made clear. There are mysteries of faith, deacon, that nobody has any business to try to understand. Now, Elder Wakefield is forever preaching about what we ought to do, as though such poor, weak creatures as we are can do anything toward effecting our salvation. As for me, I'm free to own that I don't consider anything I have done, or am doing, of the least account whatever."

"A man ought to know better than anyone else the quality of his own works, Brother Quimby, so I won't dispute you on that score. So as far as I am concerned I feel that the Lord will have quite enough to do in effecting the work you allude to if I help Him all I can."

"Well, deacon, I wish I could have my mind cleared up in regard to Elder Wakeman. What did you think of his sermon last Sabbath morning?"

"There is one thing I might say about it, if I thought it a prudent thing to do. We can't be too careful speaking, especially if it's anything that's likely to affect the character and usefulness of a man like Elder Wakeman."

"Very true, deacon. But you needn't be afraid of my telling; I'm not one of the leaky sort. I knew, as well as I wanted to, that a man of your sense couldn't approve of such doctrine as that."

"Oh, I've nothing to say against the sermon; it was a very good discourse—you won't often find a better. But the fact is, every word it contained—I really don't know that I ought to mention it, though; if it should get about, it might make trouble."

"I'll never lisp a syllable of it to any living soul," was the eager response.

"Well" here the deacon lowered his voice to an impressive whisper—"I have a book at home which has every word of it in."

Here the train for which Deacon Brown was waiting came rushing up to the depot.

"Is it possible?" ejaculated Mr. Quimby, with uplifted eyes and hands. "But you haven't told me—"

Deacon Brown was already up the steps, smiling and waving his adieux from the platform of the rear car, which rapidly disappeared around a curve in the road.

He was absent nearly a week. When he returned, he found not only the church but the whole village in a state of excitement and commotion.

He had not been home more than an hour when Elder Wakeman called on him, and in the course of the day he was waited upon by two deacons and several church members, to say nothing of being interviewed by various of his acquaintances and neighbors, all of whom were anxious to ascertain if there was any truth in the rumor of the grave charge made against his pastor.

Deacon Brown, though evidently somewhat startled at first by a result so little [illegible] took all this well, his usual calmness [illegible] reticent on the subject, asserting that he had said nothing that he was not both able and willing to prove when the proper time came to do so. His interview with Elder Wakeman was a private one, but it was noticeable at its close that the countenance of the latter had a serene, almost smiling aspect. But as the elder took no measures to prevent the meeting of investigation that had been called, no particular importance was attached to this. He did not seem disposed to talk much about it, merely saying "that he thought the deacon ought to have an opportunity to prove or explain what he had every reason to believe he had said about him."

The meeting in question was held at the vestry, which was filled to its utmost capacity before the two chiefly interested, Elder Wakeman and Deacon Brown, entered, and who appeared to be the least excited ones present.

Mr. Quimby was there full of importance, and with an exultation of look and manner only thinly veiled by the gravity that overspread his countenance. He was standing by the stove, the center of an interested and curious circle, when the two entered, but [illegible] meeting the eye of either.

At the motion of Elder Wakeman, one of the deacons called the meeting to order, briefly explained its object, the serious nature of the imputation under which their pastor rested, and, appealing to Deacon Brown to put a stop to the talk it had occasioned by either denying or proving his assertion.

Rising to his feet, Deacon Brown looked around upon the excited and curious faces that were directed toward him.

"Behold, brethren, how much mischief the tongue can do! I said a few words to one of you, under a pledge of secrecy. I think it was under a pledge of secrecy, Brother Quimby?"

"I considered it to be my duty to tell what you told me," said the individual addressed, turning red.

"You are to be commended for having performed your duty so thoroughly," continued the deacon, "a very painful duty, as it is easy to see. I understand you have said that I told you Elder Wakeman stole his sermon from a book in my possession; are you sure that I used the word 'stole,' Brother Quimby?"

"You said that you had a book that had every word of it in! Where's the difference, I'd like to know?" was Mr. Quimby's prompt and triumphant rejoinder.

"There might be none at all, and, again, there might be a great deal," responded the deacon.

"I did use the language ascribed to me by Mr. Quimby," continued Deacon Brown, addressing the rest of the assemblage; moved thereto by his evident desire that I should say something to our pastor's discredit, and without a thought that it would lead to this trouble and excitement. I declare, furthermore, that I have seen a book containing every word of his sermon in Elder Wakeman's own library. I have taken the liberty of sending for it, and will offer it as evidence as to the truth of my statement."

Taking a ponderous volume from the hands of his son, who had just entered, Deacon Brown laid it on the table before the presiding officer, who, carefully adjusting his spectacles, opened it.

"Why, this is a—a dictionary!"

"Very true," responded Deacon Brown. "But you'll find every word of Elder Wakeman's sermon in it—if you look long enough."

"I must confess, however," added the deacon, as soon as the general laughter and astonishment had subsided a little, glancing smilingly across the table at Elder Wakeman, "that there are not many that can string them together so as to form such an interesting and instructive discourse."

Here the elder and deacon shook hands, which was the signal for a general hand-shaking, congratulations, and good feeling. No one was dissatisfied, with the exception of Mr. Quimby, who, mortified and confounded at the unexpected turn of affairs had taken, had slunk from the room.

A Bit of Married Experience.

I married my wife over 35 years ago. The ceremony was performed about seven o'clock in the morning. Before retiring that evening we had a good talk with each other, and the result has sweetened our entire lives.

We agreed that each should always be watchful and careful; never, by word or act, to hurt the feelings of the other. We were both young, hot-tempered, both positive in our likes and dislikes, and both exacting and inflexible—just the material for a life of conjugal warfare. Well, for a few years we found it hard work to always live by our agreement. Occasionally (not often) a word or look would slip off the tongue or face before it could be caught and suppressed; but we never allowed the sun to go down on our wrath. Before retiring at night on such occasions there was always confession and forgiveness, and the culprit would become more careful in the future.

Our tempers and dispositions became gradually more congenial, so that after a few years we came to be one in reality, as the marital ceremony had pronounced us nominally. In looking back for more than 20 years, our little agreement has been unbroken, and there has been no occasion for confession and forgiveness. In business we have had adversity and prosperity, failure and success. We raised a family of children, and now have our grandchildren about us; and we are simple enough to believe that we have better children and better grandchildren because of our little agreement. Under such a contract, religiously kept, no ill-natured children will be reared, and no boys will find the streets and barrooms more pleasant than home. To make a good wife or a good husband requires the co-operation of both.

A gentleman of Everett, Mass, has pursued successfully the following manner of raising squashes: He first digs a small hole for each hill, into which he puts a liberal quantity of manure and covers it to the depth of an inch or two with soil. The whole is then covered with coal ashes, with which the hole is filled, and the soil on the manure is covered. The seed is planted, or plants set, in the ashes directly over the manure. At each hoeing a fresh supply of ashes is scattered around the plants, which are thus kept entirely free from grubs.

A Noted Make of Violins.

[illegible] Wilhelmj, the violinist, was to [illegible] he was the guest [illegible] a classical amateur of note and [illegible] Schultz regards Wilhelmj as one of the greatest masters of the violin the world has seen. Wilhelmj told him the curious fact that the best violins now made anywhere are made in this country; and it seems that the masters of this noble instrument will in future send to New York or Brooklyn when they need a first-class violin. Three men, it appears, have by their skill mastered this branch of art; two of them are Germans—the brothers Schnaudé; the third is an American, Walter Colton, himself a musician of decided skill, and from his eighth year an amateur of the violin. Mr. Colton is the son of the Rev. Walter Colton, a well known author, chaplain in the navy, and the first Alcalde of Monterey, in California, after the Americans took possession, whose "Deck and Port," "Ship and Shore," and "Three Years' Life in California," were popular books in their day. The elder Colton died many years ago, and young Colton was educated under the care of his mother, now the wife of Representative Chittenden, of the Brooklyn District. He was graduated from Columbia College, studied for the medical profession, married Miss Litchfield of Brooklyn, and traveled in Europe, where his fondness for the violin developed into a passion. He spent much time in hunting up the most celebrated old violins, and on his return began to make instruments, at first only for his amusement, and to give away to his friends; but presently there arose a demand which has of late kept him busy. Ole Bull, Remenyi, Wilhelmj, and all the noted professional players come to his house, and send him their instruments when they need repairing. He employs 20 workmen, but makes all the parts of an instrument himself, having contrived many of the tools he uses, and he aims to make but a small number of violins in the year. Many valuable violins are sent him from different parts of the country to be repaired; not long since one was received from a Western city, which was insured during transmission for $800, and the owner presented Mr. Colton with a bow valued at $100 for repairing the instrument. It is certainly odd that America should be so famous for violins that the great players of the world acknowledge the superior merits of American instruments.

His First Chinaman.

A country man came up Vine street yesterday morning, with just enough whiskey aboard to make him unsteady. At Sixth street he ran foul of a Chinaman, the first one he had ever seen.

"You almond-eyed heathen!" he exclaimed, grasping John by the hand and shaking it joyfully; "you are the first of your good-for-nothing breed I ever saw."

"Chinaman in hully," said the Celestial, struggling to free himself.

"Devil take your washee-washee, or whatever you call it," said the countryman, as he picked up a parcel of boiled shirts and things which the Chinaman in his fright had let fall to the sidewalk. "I want to see if you are the outlandish beast the newspapers say you are. How about the pig-tail, eh? Yes, by gracious, here it is!" and he took hold of the tip end of that adornment, and lifted it up like a pump handle. "Beats anything I ever saw on the head of mortal man. And this beastly shirt," he continued, as he took hold of the flowing garment, while John struggled vainly to get loose, "if you had any shame about you, you would wear it inside of your infernal pants."

"Lettee me glow!" yelled the Celestial.

"Don't fret the cattle," said the countryman soothingly. "I want to see if they have lied about your hoof-harness!" and, looking down at John's feet, he burst into a loud laugh.

Ho, ho!" he roared, "I wouldn't be caught dead in shoes like them, so help me heaven!" and he contemplated them with unmixed pleasure; "turned up at the toes as if they were looking for a bee-tree," he continued, "no strings, no heels, and cellar doors for soles, as I'm a sinner! Ho, ho, ha, ha! Shoot them! shoot them!"

These innocent words struck terror to the Chinaman's heart, and backing away he dashed down the street, yelling:

"P'lice, p'lice! hoodlum shoote Chinaman! P'lice, p'lice!"

The countryman watched the terrific pace of his late friend with some astonishment, and after his pig-tail had cracked around the first corner, he went on his way, remarking:

"No man could have made me believe that kind of time could have been made in them shoes if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Leather.

Leather has a long history. If it is a too exclusive motto that "there is nothing like leather," very few manufactured things are older. It was probably the very first bit of manufacture—rude, yet suited to its purpose, the use of bark for hardening and preserving skins having no doubt, been practiced in prehistoric times. Even our progenitor—the ancient Briton—used a strong hide thong to throw his stones with, and was scantily clad in leather—anticipating the odd desire of George Fox, the founder of Quakerism. Within the period of authentic history, it has been legislated for and protected, and often included in sumptuary regulations. It is very odd to read that in England in the sixteenth century complaints were made that skins were tanned in three weeks, (thus unconsciously shortening the period of use and wont, which had been about one year,) and that in consequence an act was passed in 1538 prohibiting tanners from selling hides that were not attested to have been nine months in the tan-pit. And the jealousy of rival guilds, which did something in old days to secure the division of labor, if nothing more, is also seen in the history of leather. In 1439 tanners were prohibited from being shoe makers; while in 1565 butchers were precluded from becoming tanners under a penalty. Some of the restrictions which surrounded the leather-manufacturers actually remained until 1830, when they were completely removed by an act of George IV. Free trade in tanning, then introduced, gave an immense impetus to the application and extension of the chemical discoveries which had been made by Seguin in 1785, and by Sir Humphrey Davy in 1803.

Why are all games of chess of equal duration? Because it always takes four knights to play a game.

Why Aunt Sallie Never Married.

The following "yarn" is an old one, but will bear reading several times, and [illegible]

Now, Aunt Sallie, do please tell us why you never got married. You remember you said once that when you were a girl you were engaged to a minister, and promised us you would tell us about it sometime. Now, Aunt, please tell us."

"Well, you see, when I was about seventeen years old I was living in Utica, in the State of New York. Though I say it myself, I was quite a good looking girl then, and had several beaux. The one that took my fancy was a young minister, a very pious young man, and remarkably steady. He thought a good deal of me, and I kind of took a fancy to him, and things went on until we were engaged. One evening he came to me, and put his arms around me, and kind of hugged me, when I got excited, and some flustrated. It was a long time ago, and I don't know but what I might have hugged back a little. I was like any other girl, and pretty soon I pretended to be mad about it, and pushed him away, though I wasn't mad a bit. You must know the house where I lived was on one of the back streets of the town. There were glass doors in the [illegible] these doors were drawn to. I stepped back a little from him, and when he came up close I pushed him back again. I pushed him harder than I intended to; and don't you think, girls, the poor fellow lost his balance and fell through one of the doors into the street."

"Oh, Aunty! Was he killed?"

"No; he fell head first, and as he was going I caught him by the legs of his trousers. I held on for a minute and tried to pull him back, but his suspenders gave way, and the poor young man fell clear out of his pantaloons into a parcel of ladies and gentlemen along the street."

"Oh! Aunty! Aunty! Lordy!"

"There, that's right; squall and giggle as much as you want to. Girls that can't bear a little thing like that without tearing around the room and he-he-ing in such a way, don't know enough to come in when it rains. Catch me telling you anything again."

"But, Aunt Sallie, what became of him? Did you ever see him again?

"No, the moment he touched the ground he got up and left that place in a terrible hurry. I tell you it was a sight to be remembered. How that man did run! We went out West, and I believe he is preaching in Illinois. But he never married. He was very modest, and I suppose he was so badly frightened that time that he never dared to trust himself near a woman again. That, girls, is the reason why I never married. I felt very bad about it—for he was a real good man, and I've often thought to myself that we should have been very happy if his suspenders hadn't given way."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

She Took Him at His Word.

A capital story is told of a Kentucky girl who had agreed to elope with a lover whom her parents had refused to admit to the house. She descended the ladder in the night and started with him on horseback. "Now you see how much I love you," she said; "you will always be a true, kind husband, won't you?" He gruffly answered, "Perhaps I may, and perhaps not." She rode in silence a few minutes, when she suddenly exclaimed: "Oh! what shall we do? I have left my money behind me in my room!" "Then," said he, "we must go back and fetch it." They were soon again at the house, the ladder was again placed, the lady remounted, while the ill-natured lover remained below. But she delayed to come, and so he gently called: "Are you coming?" when she looked out of the window and said: "Perhaps I may, and perhaps not," and then shut down the window.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle free of cost, or regular size for $1.00. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich.

A writer in the Springfield Republican, without the fear of Richard Grant White before his eyes, asks "Shall we make it 'queriod?'" thereby avoiding cumbrously speaking of a "note of interrogation." It is a good idea, and queriod is as good a word as period.

OUR CHIP BASKET

Circus clowns will appear in fool dress this season.

When you offer a tramp bread, and he makes a rye face, you can conclude he prefers whisky.

The only thing which men are universally willing to lay up for a rainy day is other people's umbrellas.

A pretty girl won a musket at a fair. When they delivered it to her she asked, "Don't they give a soldier with it?"

Two Kentucky maidens have opened a blacksmithing shop, and it's an interesting sight to see a mule blush when the girls accidentally tickle him while putting on his new shoes.

A correspondent asks: "What is a bat?" A bat my friend, is that part of a brick which will encourage your neighbor's hens to vacate the bed of peas which you have just planted.

"The moon is always just the same," he said languidly, "and yet I always find some new beauty in it." "It's just so with the circus," she answered. He took the hint and bought tickets for two.

A little girl in one of our public schools the other day had occasion to parse the word 'angel.' Coming to the gender she stopped dismayed, and asked her teacher if "there are any men angels."

An honest Hibernian, in recommending a cow, said she would give milk year after year without having calves. "Because," said he, "it runs in the brade; for she came of a cow that never had a calf."

That story of a young man in Iowa descending the walls of a well twenty-one feet deep, and ascending again with a woman weighing one hundred and thirty pounds, is all right. It was just such lies as this that made George Washington the father of his country.

Two gentlemen slept in a very close room. The window was apparently stuck fast. A pane was broken to let in the air, and then another, when they both felt better and went to sleep. In the morning they discovered that they had broken two panes of an old-fashioned bookcase.

A certain lawyer was compelled to apologize to the court. With stately dignity he rose in his place and said "Your honor is right and I am wrong, as your honor generally is." There was a dazed look in the judge's eye, and he hardly knew whether to feel happy or fine the lawyer for contempt of court.

"Did not God do it?" suggested a Sunday school teacher to a ten-year old girl who was pondering over the previous question: "Who made you?" "Oh no," quickly replied the girl. God never made but one man and woman—and then, slowly—I guess he must have taught them how."

A popular concert singer advertised to participate in an entertainment in a Missouri village excused her absence on the ground of having a severe cold in the head, and the next day received the following from an admirer: "This iz gouse grese; melt it and rub on the bridge of yore noze until kured. I luv you to distraxshun."

A tutor of a college, lecturing a young man on his irregular conduct, added with earnest pathos: "The report of your vices will bring your father's gray hairs with sorrow to the grave." "I beg your pardon, sir," replid the pupil, "my father wears a wig." He may be said to have had him that time where the hair was short.

Clean hands in matters of money among the young ought to be an indispensable qualification of gentlemanliness. No man that borrows and does not care whether he pays or not, is a gentleman, no matter how witty, or gay, or fine he may be. To speak good, plain English, the man who dresses himself at another's expense, knowing not how to pay, nor caring whether he pays or not, is a genteel scoundrel.

Paragraphic Wisdom.

It would be well if we had less medicine and more cures, less cant and more piety, less law and more justice.

When men grow virtuous in their old age, they are merely making a sacrifice to heaven of the devil's leavings.

The wisest man we ever knew was a Jew who remarked: "I tells you vat it is, young man, I buys my egsperience fresh every day.

It has been discovered by a close observer that hen-pecked husbands are invariably men with hairless lips. It takes a mustache to awe a female.

An observing politician says that the difference between those going in and coming out of office is mainly this: the former are sworn in, and the latter go out swearing.

Advice to young writers: If you would be clear and forcible, don't use foreign words. Be natural. A man never stops to hunt up a foreign word when he is stung by a hornet.

The man who kan't talk with you ten minnits on an ordinary bizziness subject without expressing a great anxiety about the welfare ov yure sole, wants the very klussest kind of watching.

Quaint Conceits.

Memory is the shadow-land of the heart.

Appearances are deceitful. So are disappearances.

They are never alone who are accompanied with noble thoughts.

Beauty and death make each other seem purer and lovelier, like snow and moonlight.

A smile is ever the most bright and beautiful with a tear upon it. What is the dawn without the dew?

Tears do not dwell long on the cheeks of youth. Rain drops easily from the bud, rests on the maturer flower, and breaks down that which has lived its day.

A cynic says that marriage is like putting your hand into a bag containing one eel and ninety-nine snakes. You may get the eel, but the chances are against you.

"So, your pretty daughter has married a rich husband, has she?" said a lady to a merchant. "Well," slowly replied the father, "I believe she has married a rich man, but I am afraid he will prove to be a poor husband."

How small a portion of their lives the majority of mankind truly enjoy. In youth we are looking forward to things that are to come; in old age we look backward to things that are past.

Household Hints.

How to Remove Adhesive Plaster.—The portion of the plaster which is not adhering to the skin may be quickly and completely removed by the use of turpentine and sweet oil. Use a little more than half turpentine. This compound rubbed over the parts with a bit of cloth or sponge, and then washed off with warm soapsuds, will leave the surface as clean as nature ever intended.

Washing Compounds.—Take one pound of Babbitt's pure concentrated potash, one pound sal-soda; boil until all is dissolved; then add three pounds of clean grease, set it to boiling; after boiling from one to six hours, and it becomes soap, keep the same quantity of water in the kettle as at first, add two ounces of liquid ammonia, half a pound of borax, quarter of a pound of resin, six gallons of soft water; stir well together, then your soap will be finished, and use this for boiling; after rubbing the clothes through one water, they will usually come out white and clean. This is nice for spreads or heavy goods.

Canning Strawberries.—Take large, select but not overripe ones, the Wilson's Albany preferred. Stem them and put into a bottle, giving them a shake now and then to settle them down; have ready a hot syrup of sugar, with just water enough to dissolve it; let boil ten minutes, then pour over and seal up; turn the bottle upside down to be sure there is no air in it. If done so, they will retain their color and flavor better than any way you have ever tried. Then wrap the bottles in paper and put away in the cellar.

Chloride of Lime.—Le Cultivateur remarks that rats, mice and insects will at once desert grounds on which a little chloride of lime has been sprinkled. Plants may be protected from insect plagues by brushing their stems with a solution of it. It has been noticed that a patch of land which had been treated in this way remains religiously respected by grubs, while the unprotected beds round about were literally devastated. Fruit trees may be guarded from the attacks of grubs by attaching to their trunks pieces of tow smeared with a mixture of chloride of lime and hog's lard, and ants and grubs already in possession will rapidly vacate their position.

Borax and Butter.—Within the past year or two borax has been recommended for scores of domestic purposes never before thought of, owing, perhaps to, some one having discovered an unlimited supply of this salt. We learn from an Italian journal that borax is an absolute preservative of butter. Eight per cent. of borax added to fresh butter will insure its keeping sweet for months, the borax imparting no flavor to it, and being in itself, it is said, entirely harmless.

A Nice Way to Prepare Pop-Corn.—Put into an iron kettle one tablespoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of water and one teacupful of white sugar; boil until ready to candy, throw in three quarts of corn nicely popped; stir briskly until the candy is evenly distributed over the corn; set the kettle from the fire, and you have each grain separate and crystalized with the sugar; care should be taken not to have too hot a fire, lest you scorch when crystalizing. Nuts of any kind prepared in this way are delicious.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing.—Wherever once introduced and be comes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents). Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

THE WISCONSIN PAPER PLANT.—A curious plant is said to grow in Wisconsin, which produces a kind of cotton and flax from the same stalk. It has been woven into fabrics, and any article that will make as good cloth as can be made from this plant will make good paper; hence it has been called the paper plant. It can be planted in the spring, and cut in the fall or winter. It bleaches itself white as it stands, and will yield at least three or four tons per acre. From a single root that was transplanted there grew twenty large stalks, with three hundred and five pods, (containing the cotton,) with at least sixty seeds in each. From this root were obtained seven ounces of pure cotton, and over half a pound of flax. It is a very heavy plant, and grows from six to seven feet high.

The prompt action of the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters in changing the condition of the stomach and correcting its irregularities establishes the fact that the cure of disease by absorption is in perfect accord with the laws of nature. If you have Indigestion, Constipation, or any stomach disorder, try this remedy. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by all druggists.

Fire-proof shingles can be prepared as follows: Make a quantity of whitewash in a large trough, of a bushel of lime, half a bushel of salt, and five or six lbs. of potash. The bundles of shingles are to be saturated with this preparation for about two hours. Quite dry shingles will absorb the wash best, and with the bunches opened.

The First Slave Case in England.

A planter brought to London a slave called Lewis Sharp, [illegible] When he fell ill, unmanfully turned him out of doors. Mr. Granville Sharp, a philanthropic barrister, found him in the street, placed him in the hospital, where he recovered his health, and then got him a situation as a servant. Two years after, his old master arrested and imprisoned him as a runaway slave. Mr. Sharp brought the case before the Lord Mayor, who ordered the negro to be set at liberty. But the master seized him violently in presence of the Lord Mayor and Mr. Sharp, on which the latter brought an action against the master for assault. The question of law was finally referred to the twelve judges, in February and May of that year, who decided unanimously that, no man can be accounted a slave on English territory, this decision is often quoted as though the soil of Great Britain made a slave free; but that is a legal fiction. Evidently, it is only when a slave (so-called) comes within the reach of an English court that his freedom is declared.

At that time the American colonies were beginning their quarrel with Great Britain, but had not renounced allegiance. All the colonies were subject to the common law of England; and if in Virginia and Jamaica there had been a judge as upright and able as Lord Mansfield, and a philanthropist as zealous as Granville Sharp, it would seem that slavery might have been dissolved by a few judicial trials.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhœa, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external and internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Camel Riding.

Mounting the camel is not difficult, but it has some surprises for the novice. The camel lies upon the ground with all his legs shut up under him like a jack-knife. You seat yourself in the broad saddle and cross your legs before you on the pommel. Before you are ready, something like a private earthquake begins under you. The camel raises his hindquarters suddenly, and throws you over upon his neck, and before you recover from that he straightens up his knees and gives you a jerk over his tail; and, while you are not at all certain what has happened, he begins to move off with that dislocated walk which sets you into a see-saw motion, a weaving backward and forward in the capacious saddle. Not having a hinge back fit for this movement, you lash the beast with your koorbash to make him change his gait. He is nothing loth to do it, and at once starts into a high trot, which sends you a foot into the air at ever step, bobs you from side to side, drives your backbone into your brain, and makes castanets of your teeth. When you have enough of it you pull up, and humbly inquire what is the heathen method of riding a dromedary. It is simple enough. Shake the loose halter rope (he has neither bridle nor bit) against his neck as you swing the whip, and the animal at once swings into an easy pace; that is, a pretty easy pace, like that of a rocking-horse. But everything depends upon the camel.

Given Up by the Doctors.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

LET THE BEDS BE AIRED.—It is a bad plan to "make up" the beds immediately after breakfast. The sleeping apartments in the house should be aired every day. Beds should be opened every morning to the sun and to the atmosphere. Do not be in too much haste to get the chambers in order. Let the sheets and blankets be spread over separate chairs, the matrasses lifted apart, and the pure morning air be allowed to get into every nook and cranny of the room before the beds are made. Better to endure a little delay in getting the house in order than loss of health.

Hints to Farmers.

Don't let your horses be seen standing much at the tavern door; it don't look right. Don't be without Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment near at hand to apply in case of accident. Keep good fences—especially line fences; it promotes good feelings among neighbors. Keep Downs' Elixir always in the house, and use in cases of sudden coughs, &c., as a safeguard against consumption and other dangerous diseases. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, taken according to directions, saves large expense in doctor's bills.

Nothing surpasses the purity and efficiency of American Ball-Blue in imparting to your washing an immaculate clearness. All grocers have it.

THE SYMPTOMS

of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth, Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism, Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Bowels alternately costive and lax; Headache, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the LIVER, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of disease, and if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue.

AS AN UNFAILING SPECIFIC

Take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Leading American Newspaper.

The New York Tribune for 1881.

The Largest Circulation Among the Best People.

During the past year THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE reached the largest circulation it ever attained, with the single exception of a short period in the first Lincoln campaign. It is a larger circulation, and more widely disseminated over the whole country than any other daily, or any other newspaper in the United States. This fact may be taken as the verdict of the American People on The Tribune's political force, its fidelity to sound principles, and its merits as a newspaper.

For 1881 The Tribune will try to deserve equally well of the public. What and how much it did for the success of federal capital is content to let earnest Republicans tell. It now hopes to give to Mr. Garfield such a discriminating support as will secure him its cordial and effective help in bringing in this Administration, and watch its course. The events to be recorded in the Tribune for 1881 will charge like a regular interest. The year promises marked to show whether the South will still escape from every thing in military, and whether the Democratic party, after twenty years of disloyalty and defeat, will dissolve or reform. Abroad it will show whether England can continue ruled; whether the Republic in France without the support of the men who established it, can stand alone, whether the Turk can longer pollute Europe. In Science it promises such practical triumphs as the use of electricity for gas, new modes of heating, and new forms of power in place of steam. In Literature and Art it offers the very flower of our nineteenth century development; in Religion, a concentration of force, and union of organizations on similar creeds and better work.

The well known special features of The Tribune will be sedulously maintained. Its Agricultural Department will remain the fullest and best. The Household and the Young Folks' Departments, the literary, scientific and religious features, the standard market reports, will all be kept up, and, as opportunity offers, extended.

THE TRIBUNE PREMIUMS.

The Tribune has never been equalled in the substantial and permanent value of its premiums to agents and subscribers, and it adds to its list this year two of the most desirable it has ever offered. Note the following:

The Great Bible Concordance.

A full Concordance to the Bible, on an entirely new plan, embracing every word in alphabetical sequence, arranged under its Hebrew or Greek original, with the literal meaning of each and its pronunciation; including 311,000 references, 118,000 words, marking 30,000 various readings in the Old Testament; with the latest information in Biblical Geography and Antiquities, etc., etc. By Robert Young, LL.D., author of a Literal Translation of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures; Concise Critical Comments on the same; Grammatical Analysis of the Minor Prophets in Hebrew; Biblical Notes and Queries; Hebrew Grammar, etc., etc.

This great work was originally published in England in October, 1879, and was sold at $15. We can now offer it in connection with The Tribune at the following remarkably low rate:

For $6 the Concordance and one copy of The Weekly Tribune five years, or five copies one year.

For $11 the Concordance and one copy of The Semi-Weekly Tribune five years, or five copies one year, or ten copies of The Weekly Tribune one year.

The postage on the Concordance is 40 cents, which the subscriber will repay if wishing it sent by mail. Except for short distances the mail will be cheaper than the express.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE

Embracing Chambers's Encyclopædia complete, omitting only some of the cuts, with extensive additions by an able corps of American editors, treating about 15,000 additional topics, thoroughly Americanizing the entire book, adding to it over 25 per cent of the latest, freshest and most valuable matter, the whole making 15 Handsome Octavo Volumes of 6 by 9½ inches in size, printed in large type on good, strong, calendered paper, and neat and substantially bound in cloth.

We can offer this valuable work in connection with The Tribune as follows:

For $15 The Library of Universal Knowledge complete in 15 octavo volumes, substantially bound in cloth as above described, and The Weekly Tribune 5 years to one subscriber.

For $20 The Library of Universal Knowledge as above described, and The Semi-Weekly Tribune 5 years to one subscriber.

Five volumes of the work are now ready, the sixth is nearly through the press, and the rest will rapidly follow. It will be sent by mail or express at the subscriber's expense. The postage, if sent by mail, will be 21 cents per volume. In packages, by express, they can be had much cheaper.

PROMPT WORK.

To induce quick work for this great premium we make the following most extraordinary offer:—With the first 2,000 orders received for The Library of Universal Knowledge we will send free, as a present from The Tribune, Macaulay's History of England, in three handsome volumes, printed on large type and good paper, and neatly bound in cloth.

These books, like the others, will be sent at subscriber's expense by mail or express. The postage on the three volumes will be 21 cents.

A Magnificent Gift!

Worcester's Great Unabridged Dictionary Free!

The New York Tribune will send at subscriber's expense for freight, or deliver in New York City free, Worcester's Great Unabridged Quarto Illustrated Dictionary, bound in sheep, edition of 1879, the very latest and very best edition of that great work, to any one remitting

$16 for a single five years' subscription in advance, or five one year subscriptions to the Weekly, or,

$15 for a single five years' subscription in advance, or five one year subscriptions to The Semi-Weekly, or one year's subscription to The Daily, or,

$30 for a single three years' subscription in advance to The Daily Tribune.

For one dollar extra the Dictionary can be sent by mail to any part of the United States, while for short distances the express is much cheaper.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 20, 1881.

Representative Waring, of this district has introduced a bill for the inspection of wines and liquors.

The Senatorial agonies in the different States are rapidly drawing to a close. The miseries of the new Senators will now begin.

Ben Harrison has received the Senatorial nomination in Indiana. The Republicans of Indiana have honored themselves and their State by this selection.

The new clerk of the weather is settling down to business splendidly.—Mr. Vernor himself could not improve on the winter weather we are now enjoying.

Little Delaware does herself honor in retaining the services of Senator Bayard in the U. S. Senate. Some of the larger States might imitate her example with profit.

Another illustration of the beauties of advertising. Last week a friend of ours advertised a "Pipe Lost" in the HERALD, and the next morning he found the pi in his overcoat pocket.

Mr. Myers, the patentee of the Myers' Wind Mill, is talking of moving his factory from Salem, Ohio, to Adrian, Michigan. If he can organize a company with $8,000 capital he will make the change.

The Cameron machine in Pennsylvania has struck a stump. The Cameron candidate received the caucus nomination for U. S. Senator, but forty-five Republicans refused to enter the caucus, and they hold the balance of power. The situation is decidedly interesting.

A New Jersey Grand Jury makes a masterly plea for the re-establishment of the whipping post for the benefit of wife beaters, the argument being that fines and imprisonments compel suffering in the families of the criminals. The principal objections to the whipping post is that it destroys self-respect; but as wife beaters never have any self-respect, an exception might be made for their benefit.

The unanimous request by the Legislature for the appointment of Judge Cooley to the Supreme Bench must be very gratifying to that gentleman. In fact everybody seems to favor Judge Cooley's appointment except R. A. Beal, of Ann Arbor. That distinguished scholar probably considers Judge Cooley unfit for the position because his record is not exactly sound on the Douglas-Rose controversy.

The Senatorial contest has been settled in New York and Connecticut.—In the former State the caucus nomination, after a very hot contest, went to Thomas C. Platt, a trusted friend of Senator Conkling, which is considered a very weak selection. In the nutmeg State General Hawley was nominated by acclamation, which is a very strong selection. In this case the Republican masses chose their man, not the machine.

The year 1880 is likely to be a memorable one in the annals of immigration. It was in that year that the emigrant tide from Europe to these shores touched the highest mark ever known. In 1880 320,000 aliens were landed at Castle Garden. The greatest number reached in any preceding year was 319,200 in 1854. These figures are for New York alone, the great gate thro' which aliens enter the country. Including the arrivals at other ports the whole number of European emigrants added to the population of the United States in 1880 was well on to half a million.

The latest exhibition of advertising enterprise is given by Mr. Pears, the great London soap maker. A new census has just been ordered by the British government, and the printed forms to be distributed about the country will cost about one hundred thousand pounds. Mr. Pears, who has made his immense fortune by the free use of printers' ink, now proposes to assume the entire expense of the census blanks upon the sole condition that he be allowed to print his business card upon the back of each sheet. It is doubtful whether the government will adopt this method of soaping the people, but it shows Mr. Pears' faith in the utility of advertising.

THE POLITICAL PROHIBITION PARTY

"Fifteen million of these wise men who so far at least prove the saying true that

"We no doubt are the people, and wisdom shall die with us."

Though of wisdom like theirs there is no small supply with us.

—Owen Meredith.

We are often reminded of this as we look upon the wise sayings and futile performances of this constantly hopeful, yet constantly waning political prohibition party. Now we take and read the Lever, their especial organ in this State, not because we believe in it, but just to see, as the boy said when he set his banta hen on twenty-six eggs, how much the little thing can spread itself.

We notice that "J. H. O.," whoever that may be, as a correspondent of the Lever from Tecumseh, in a recent number, takes exception to a recent temperance union Sabbath school meeting of several Sabbath schools in this place, because it was not held in the interests of this one political party. Would it not be well to wait until these boys and girls are large enough to vote, before worrying too much about it, and even then, it is just possible that when they do come to vote, for we believe that the girls too will be voters by that time, they will be just foolish enough to vote as they shall think right and proper, instead of as "J. H. O." shall dictate and direct them to do. Now we have, say for short, six hundred and fifteen voters in the township and village of Tecumseh, (the actual number is somewhat more than this,) and did it ever occur to this political party of fifteen, that it was a little cheeky in them to say the least, to make quite so much fuss, because the other six hundred voters do not think and vote just as they do. Is not that a little too small a tail to wag so big a dog?

If there is any one thing which we Americans claim as our especial right, it is the right to think and vote politically just as we think best, and on the whole calculated to do the most good, and we vote by ballot in order that we may do so without dictation or criticism from any one.

If that little party of fifteen think they can do the most good by voting a separate ticket of their own, it is their privilege, and may be their duty to do so, but at the same time they must accord to the other six hundred the right and privilege of doing the very same thing.

Now very many of us, more than ten times their number, claim to be just as good temperance men as they are, and it is because we are temperance men, and because we believe that in our own way we can best promote the cause of temperance, that we vote some other ticket than that.

We have no doubt that they are honest, and perfectly sincere in their views and action upon this subject, at the same time we just as sincerely believe that by their captious and impracticable course, they are doing all the time far more injury to the cause of temperance, and to its best interests everywhere, than it is possible for all the liquor leagues in the State to do.

The nominal friend of a cause has it in his power to do far more injury to it than it is possible for its strongest avowed enemy to do, and so the cause of temperance has all along received, and will continue, we fear, to receive its severest wounds in the house of its friends.

It seems to be the especial mission of this little party to see, not how much good they can themselves do, but how much abuse and bitterness they can pour out upon every other party, and all other temperance men who cannot see and think and act and vote just as they do, or rather just as they prescribe.

Now, the Prohibition party has, we believe, in Tecumseh, counted as high as one hundred and fifty votes, and when in the course of its constant aggressions for the last fifteen years, it has run itself down to fifteen, is it not about time to conclude that the good people of Tecumseh, at least, have made up their minds that they have no use for any such party here?

ANTI-ZOPHAR.

Rumor says that R. A. Beal threatens to send to Washington a batch of his Rose-Douglas circulars to use as an antidote against the petitions in favor of Judge Cooley. Judge Cooley's name and fame have traveled much farther than Mr. Beal's. The Free Press relates an incident in point about Secretary Evarts. Rev. George Duffield was a class mate of Evarts, and a Michigan gentleman, while talking to Evarts one day, remarked that the Rev. Duffield had got himself into a bad scrape in the Rose-Douglas affair. "You don't say," said Mr. Evarts, "that Duffield is that kind of a minister. I never suspected he would get into any such trouble as that. Who is Rose-Douglas?"

The vote of Nevada on the Chinese question was rather one-sided. The total vote on the question was 17,442; for admission of the Chinese, 183; against admission, 17,259. Those 183 ought to have gone with the crowd and made it unanimous. This vote reveals more clearly than whole columns of newspaper talk the sentiment of the Pacific states on Chinese immigration.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

A Good Suggestion.

Atlanta Constitution, (Dem.)—Why doesn't the editor of Truth come out in a manly way and acknowledge that the publication of the Morey letter was due to the negligence of the compositor? Everything that gets into a newspaper can be explained in this way, and the compositor goes right ahead just as if nothing had happened.

Why Not?

Kalamazoo Gazette, (Dem.)—Michigan farmers can raise sweet potatoes with some success. The chief difficulty in the way of making the business profitable is the fact that the Jersey and Southern tubers can be sold here cheaper than the natural article can be raised. Why shouldn't Michigan put a tariff on sweet potatoes and thus encourage home production?

That's the Rub.

Detroit Evening News, (Ind.)—With Judge Cooley on the bench of the United States Supreme court, Gov. Bagley at the head of the interior department, Congressman Newberry as secretary of the navy, and Julius Cæsar Burrows as speaker of the house of representatives, Michigan will be pretty well provided for. But —— anybody can carry Michigan; that's the rub.

Up With the Times.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—China is feeling the spur of progress. Should she get into a fight with Russia it is her intention to lay torpedoes in all the treaty ports and blow up everything that comes along, Russian or otherwise. This comprehensive, not to say exhaustive, use of a Western invention shows that China is not set in her ways as much as some people suppose.

Give Us a Bill of Items.

New York Tribune, (Rep.)—There are dreadful intimations by disappointed Democrats in Washington, that a large percentage of the funds contributed for the election of Hancock never got further than Barnum's headquarters. They talk about demanding a bill of items of receipts and expenditures. If this sort of calumny goes much further Barnum is likely to become thoroughly disgusted with politics.

Should Strive for Purity.

Cincinnati Enquirer, (Dem.)—The present investigation into the abuses of the franking privilege is likely to interfere with the methods of those members who are sending their washing home under their respective franks. After all, is it not better to allow our Congressmen to send their washing home at the expense of the government than they should have no washing done? What this Republic should strive for is purity in one thing as well as another.

A Sensible Suggestion.

Detroit Evening News, (Ind.)—The selection of Gen. Grant as president of the New York world's fair commission will give that lethargic body life and a better hold upon public confidence than it has hitherto had. There will be this drawback: Gen. Grant, like Col. Sellers, is for "the flag and an appropriation." Whether it is a Nicauraguan canal, Mexican railroad or world's fair, his first care is to get a good boost from the government. The New York show ought to pay as a purely business enterprise.

The Problem of the Future.

New York Herald, (Ind.)—The Governors of two of the greatest railroad and commercial States in the Union have just called the attention of the legislatures of those States to what may be briefly called the railroad problem. When Governor Cornell declares that "aside from public taxation, perhaps, no question so seriously touches the interests of the people," he certainly does not over-estimate the magnitude or importance of the greatest problem that now confronts American statesmanship. But when he says that this problem "should receive a complete and successful solution" at the hands of the Legislature he expects altogether too much from a body whose power is feeble compared with that with which it would have to cope, and whose most effective measures can prove but a partial remedy for the growing evil to be dealt with.

This truth is recognized by Governor Hoyt, who remarks that there are some grave local abuses with which the State may and should deal, and reminds the Legislature of Pennsylvania that nothing has yet been done to give effect to the constitutional provision against freight discriminations, preferences, &c., although that provision was adopted as long ago as 1873, with an express mandate that the General Assembly should enforce it by appropriate legislation. But in directing attention to these things Governor Hoyt expressly concedes that the regulation of interstate traffic must be remitted to the national government. A somewhat different view is taken by the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners in their answer to the questions put by the New York Chamber of Commerce. They have much faith in the efficacy of State legislation on this subject, but express grave doubts as to the expediency of putting, as they express it, five billion dollars of corporate property under the control of the national government.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Fifty thousand colliers last week went on a strike in Lancashire, England.

R. H. STEPHENSON, Collector of Customs at Cincinnati, died on the 13th inst.

JAMES G. FAIR has been elected to the United States Senate from Nevada.

GEN. GRANT has been elected President of the World's Fair and Exposition at New York.

GEO. HAULLON was killed by the explosion of the boiler of a steam threshing machine at Lucas, Ont.

MRS. DR. CARTER, of Erie, Pa., a sister of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, died the past week of apoplexy.

THE third annual exhibition of the Western Poultry Club show opened at St. Louis with 1,000 coops of poultry.

AT Peterboro, N. H., Natch Welch killed his wife and then cut his own throat. No cause for the deed is assigned.

THE protracted wet weather has done great damage to the rice and cotton crops in the coast States of the South.

JOHN SKALA, a Bohemian, committed suicide at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, after expending the proceeds of a farm in drink.

A JOINT convention of the two houses of the California Legislature elected Gen. John F. Miller to the United States Senate.

THE wife murderer, Reinhardt, was executed last week in the yard of the Richmond County Jail, Staten Island. He deported himself in the most nonchalant manner.

THE Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution asking the Legislature to pass such laws as will enable the city to sell or lease the Cincinnati Southern Railway.

REV. EDWARD COWLEY, the clergyman who had charge of the Shepherd's Fold in New York, has served out his term in the Penitentiary and had his fine paid by sympathizing friends.

THE agitation against the Jews in the German Empire, has extended to Saxony, Bavaria, Leipzig, and Breslau. The anti-Semitic petition to Bismarck has already 40,000 signatures.

A CABIN in a mountain near Georgetown, Col., occupied by William M. and Knox Pinkard, of New Orleans, and a colored servant has been swept away by a snow slide. No trace of the occupants.

THE explosion of a celluloid factory at Newburyport, Mass., instantly killed one man and fatally injured two others. The works had been removed from New Jersey, where an explosion had previously occurred.

THE statement gained credence last week that the grave of the late Governor Williams of Indiana, near Vincennes, had been tampered with by robbers, who stripped the casket and the remains of their valuables.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT has been elected a member of the Finance Committee of the World's Fair Commission in place of ex-Mayor Cooper, of New York, resigned. Non-resident Commissioners are to be furnished with a full, clear, and comprehensive report of what has been done up to this time.

THOMAS A. HUTCHINS, Superintendent of the stamp department of the Boston Postoffice is evidently an honest man. He has resigned on account of a deficiency of $500 or $600 in his accounts, which he seems unable to explain. There are no charges of intentional dishonesty in the case.

THE boiler of the Union Flouring Mills, of Detroit, exploded on the 12th inst., with terrific force, completely wrecking the building and killing the engineer, fireman, and oiler. A fourth man standing near was seriously injured, but will probably recover. Three horses standing outside the building were killed.

A CONCURRENT resolution has been introduced in the Senate of the General Assembly of Kansas to suppress the irrepressible and unauthorized tramps who are begging for their own benefit in the East in the name of Kansas sufferers and to provide within the State for the needs of its citizens.

A FIVE thousand dollar prize, offered some time ago for the best essay on a railroad from North to South America, has been captured by Major F. F. Hilder, of St. Louis. His essay is said to be a remarkable one, and very exhaustive. Jay Gould will start for Mexico at once, accompanied by Mr. Hilder. This proposed road, after traversing the Isthmus of Darien, is to run east of the Andes and tap the Amazon and its tributaries.

THE Western Union, the American Union, and the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Companies have consolidated with a capital of $80,000,000, distributed as follows: Western Union, $58,000,000, the American Union, $15,000,000, and the Atlantic and Pacific, $7,000,000. The present capital of the Western Union is $41,000,000, of the American Union, $15,000,000, and of the Atlantic and Pacific, $14,000,000. The market price of the stock of each of the three companies has advanced in consequence of the consolidation.

ACCORDING to a New Albany, Ind., correspondent, the "leopard boy" in the possession of Prof. Fox, of New York City, is outdone by Isaac Simmons, aged sixty years, a resident of New Albany. The white splotches began to appear upon his body in 1861, when he was a Virginian slave, black as the ace of shades. In 1865 he escaped as a contraband, and went to New Albany, where he has ever since lived. His body is now nearly white, and the white is bleaching to a natural white color, the skin being of a remarkably delicate texture.

THE delegation of representative colored men from the South visited Garfield's Mentor home last week. They read an address, in which they complained of the methods taken to deprive their race of the rights of citizenship and to prevent their children from being properly educated, and appealed to the next President for his aid in removing the obstructions to the progress of the colored people.

G. J. K. EMMETT, actor, has unfortunately been on another drunk, this time in Brooklyn. In his effort to get drunk, he discovered that the bar-keeper was selling him colored bitters, and getting a razor, he ran him out of his saloon, and then went behind the bar and helped himself. Emmett has engagements that will net him $60,000 a year, if he will but fill them and let whisky alone. As a comedian he evidently has no equal on the stage.

GOV. PORTER, of Indiana, in his inaugural address, opposed the suggestion of his predecessor, who had advised the calling of a constitutional convention. He recommended the appointment of a Board of Visitors to oversee the State benevolent institutions, two of the members at least of which, in his opinion, should be women. He recommended also that measures be taken to reclaim the swamp lands, embracing 800,000 acres of the territory of the State, and enforces the usefulness of the Bureau of Statistics and Geology, but sees no necessity for the establishment of a Board of Pardons. The address paid a high tribute to the memory of the late Gov. Williams.

We have made arrangements to furnish The Ohio Farmer, one of the oldest, largest and most valuable weekly agricultural and family journals of America, with the HERALD, both one year, postage paid for only $2.90.

THE celebrated Litta Concert Company will appear at Adrian on Thursday evening, January 27. Miss Marie Litta is justly regarded as America's favorite prima donna, and our Adrian neighbors are very fortunate in obtaining this concert troupe. Miss Litta will be assisted by five other soloists and musicians. We are informed that the Jackson train will be held till the close of the entertainment, and if the present weather shall continue, it will be a fine opportunity for some of our young people to take a sleigh ride over to Adrian that evening. The concert is given under the auspices of the Ladies' Committee of Adrian college.

A JUST VERDICT.

The trial of W. T. Lawrence, which was concluded in the Circuit Court last week, resulted in his acquittal. The result surprised no one. In fact, any other decision would have been generally considered as a legal outrage. The grand stand disaster was an awful calamity; it was one of those mysterious dispensations of Providence which man cannot fathom, and after the excitement of the moment was over, no sensible person could see what good end could be reached by making this calamity an object of litigation. There is no earthly danger of a repetition of the accident. A law suit could not bring the poor victims back to life, nor restore the broken limbs which came from the wreck. The remaining cases will probably be discontinued, as they certainly ought to be. On Friday evening a large number of the citizens of Adrian assembled at the Lawrence House to tender their congratulations to Mr. Lawrence on his acquittal. After considerable hand-shaking, Prosecuting Attorney Watts remarked to Mr. L. that no doubt he had for the past few days listened to speeches till his ears were weary, and in a few words tendered to him the congratulations of his fellow-citizens, who had taken the liberty to assemble and express their gratification at his triumphant vindication from the charge preferred against him, and of which they all believed him innocent. Mr. Lawrence, with evident emotion, responded briefly, saying the catastrophe nearly crushed him, and that he had carried a great load ever since, and heartily thanking the company for their kind greeting and expressions of good will. Further hand-shaking and salutations followed, after which the guests departed.

The arm carrying the body is supported upon an upright solid column with joint allowing of inclination at any angle, from vertical to horizontal, the whole being perfectly steady in any position. The stage is of glass, ample in size, and rotating concentrically. Beneath is a tube carrying all sub-stage illuminating apparatus, and which is entirely removable to allow of oblique illumination. Concave and plane mirrors are hung upon a swinging bar with complete adjustments, allowing them to be placed in every possible position. Two object glasses, 1 inch and ¼ inch, magnifying from 55 to 450 diameters, two pairs of eye pieces, forceps, glass plate, condensing lenses, and all other accessories. The instrument is a very complete one, and the doctor will find it exceedingly useful in his profession.

IMPROVEMENTS.

A Description of the New Business Blocks of Tecumseh.

For several years past the steadily increasing currents of trade that have centered at Tecumseh have demanded each year that a number of new business blocks should be built to accommodate the increased business. Last year the business portion of the place was adorned by the addition of four new substantial brick blocks, and to-day stand completed and occupied.

The first to be finished was the block erected by the Arnold Brothers, the front measuring 25 feet and the length 55 feet. The first story is 12 feet high and the second 10 feet. The portion below being occupied by the boys for a saloon, and the upper floor is divided into six spacious rooms for a dwelling place. Salmon Crane did the wood work, and Henry Maurer, of Adrian, the brick work. The building is ornamented with galvanized cornices, so that it is one of the neatest buildings upon the street.

A little later in the season the building of John Sutfin was completed. It is the largest of the four, having a front of 24 feet and extending back 80 feet. The first story being 12 feet high and the second 10 feet. Frank Wilson superintended the brick work and P. J. Farley the wood work. It stands upon the site of one of the cellars of the old buildings that formerly graced that part of the town, and together with the adjacent blocks it presents a pleasant contrast to a person who can distinctly remember the old row of buildings.

Next comes the two contiguous stores of Messrs. Lee and Landgraf. These enterprising gentlemen are the first to cross Ottawa street and break the ground for the building of business places.

Harry Lee's is the corner store, its dimensions being 27 by 65 feet, the lower story 12 feet high, the second 10½ feet. There are two large apartments below and commodious rooms above for a dwelling place.

Fred Landgraf's building is 22 by 65 feet, the height of the stories being the same as Lee's. The lower part is fitted up for an office in front, and the rooms in the rear for a millinery shop or the like, accessible by a side door. The upper story is divided in a most convenient way into five rooms, where Mr. Landgraf and family will reside. No pains have been spared to add to its convenience. One of the time saving contrivances is the arrangement of the well and cistern. In the rear room he has placed an iron sink, upon one side is the cistern pump, upon the other the well pump, thus saving the usual running up and down stairways by persons dwelling in a second story. The brick work of both buildings was done by Frank Wilson, and the wood work by Miner and Miller. The Landgraf building is the first of the kind ever built in Tecumseh. It is a veneered building, that is, it has a studded frame of wood which is sheeted over with roofing material, then one layer of brick is put up leaving a space of five inches in width as an air chamber. This mode of building prevents any moisture gathering inside and renders the building warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Lee's block as well as Landgraf's is tastily adorned with galvanized cornices so that the block presents a pleasing appearance.

All four of the stores have double fronts, which are set off with plate glass windows, and are in every respect worthy testimony of the business enterprise and thrift of their builders. And all that we may ask is that those contemplating building may take as models the buildings erected in the season of 1880.

A CHINA SURPRISE.

Last Saturday was the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Rev. and Mrs. H. Shepard. Early in the week a few of the ladies connected with his parish and other religious and personal friends organized a committee and raised sufficient funds to buy an elegant china tea set for Mr. and Mrs. Shepard. The secret was well kept, and early Saturday evening in the midst of a driving snow storm, a party of about fifty ladies and gentlemen stormed the parsonage, carrying the tea set with them. After the company had laid aside their covering and shaken the snow from their feet, the china set was displayed on the table, and it was formally presented to Mr. and Mrs. Shepard by S. C. Stacy. Notwithstanding the minister was taken wholly by surprise he responded in a few exceedingly appropriate remarks, thanking the donors for their good will, and expressing gratitude that he had found a home among so many kind friends. The company spent the balance of the evening in social converse, and while the storm raged without, happiness and mirth reigned within. The affair was well planned and admirably carried out in all its details. We presume that a happier company never assembled on a similar occasion.—Such little episodes as this relieve the care-worn minister in his daily toil, and constitute green spots in life's pathway, which will always be cherished in remembrance.

ALTHOUGH we are aware that Tecumseh does not cover an enormous tract of ground, and that the residents are fully acquainted with all its streets, we are, perhaps, more strikingly aware that many strangers visiting the place and the farmers who market here are not acquainted with the streets, and in consequence provoke considerable trouble. Many mistakes have been made on account of the want of some mark by which a person could designate the streets. And all this could easily be remedied if the Common Council would extend their usual and fully appreciated liberality a little further and cause the names of the streets to be placed upon every corner. If this plan does not seem plausible to any member of the body, when the same misfortune befalls him that has befallen many citizens of the place, the paying for a good load of hickory wood, which the seller with excusable innocence unloads in another man's yard on account of the want of proper directions, then the advisability of an outlay of a small sum of money in the direction recommended will strike him with peculiar and sufficient force.

TECUMSEH was represented at the meeting of the Undertakers' Association at Grand Rapids, Jan. 12th, by George Tansley. He reports a fine time. After the business session the local manufacturers of Grand Rapids gave the visiting members of the association a reception in the evening at the parlors of Sweet's hotel, and on the succeeding day furnished conveyances in which the association visited the shops of the fourteen extensive furniture manufacturing companies of the city, much to the satisfaction of the undertakers.

PROF. A. WEDELES, of New York, is in town for a few days and will remain should he be able to get a good class for piano and organ instruction. He comes to Tecumseh well recommended, and is certainly an able musician. Any one wishing first-class instruction on piano, reed or pipe organ, should take pains to see Prof. Wedeles, as should he not be able to obtain a class he will leave town in a few days.

DIED.

HENDERSHOT—Nov. 21st, 1880, at his residence in Macon, Ralph Hendershot, aged 74 years, 3 months and 3 days.

The deceased was a native of Columbia county, Penn. He was born in March, 1807; came to Michigan in 1830, and was married in Nov., 1832, to Julia Miller. Mr. Hendershot has been long and favorably known in Macon. He came to Macon when a young man and spent 48 years in the neighborhood where he ceased his history, and where a large circle of friends and acquaintances, with the church (to which he had belonged for nearly 48 years) and his wife the partner of his youth and their children mourn the loss of a friend, a brother, husband and father. During Mr. H.'s life in Michigan he had seen this peninsula pass from a wilderness to a fruitful field, from a territory to a state. The carriage wagon has taken the place of the cart, the logy stage coach has given place to the iron horse and its palace cars. The cabin to the mansion, the hamlet to the village with its churches and union schools, and the village to the city. All honor to the pioneers that have passed away and soon must pass, what have they not wrought for their children? What a heritage they have left us. Though we shall not see the transition that our fathers saw, yet may we cherish their memories, inherit their virtues and leave the world a little better than we found it.

HENDERSHOT—On Monday, Jan. 3, 1881, Mrs. Nan Hendershot died very suddenly at her home in Macon. The cause of her death was heart disease. She was 41 years of age.

The deceased was born in the township of Saline, Washtenaw county. When she was ten years of age her parents removed to Wheatland township in Hillsdale county, whence they returned again after some time to the farm in Saline, one mile north of Pennington's Corners. About eighteen years ago she was married to Mr. Isaiah Hendershot, who, with an only daughter, Minnie, survives her to mourn her untimely departure. To the aged mother, now called upon to grieve anew, and to a wide circle of attached relatives, the loss is also heavy and sad. Neither are these stricken friends the only ones who mourn. The whole community deplores this sudden summoning of one from their midst, who was highly esteemed and whose usefulness was greatly appreciated by all. Always eager to further every good work; always ready to lend a helping hand; hopeful, jovial and kind—how can we ever forget her? How can our hearts be otherwise than sad at the sudden extinction of her light on earth? Her chief talent was that of song, a talent which she habitually devoted to the Master's use in helping to advance in this neighborhood the cause of christianity and the auxiliary cause of temperance. In the latter work she attained to a deserved prominence, both through earnest, active labors and through the responsibilities of office with which she was entrusted, being for some time President of the local W. C. T. U., and at the time of her death, Vice-President of the county temperance organization. But she rests from her labors. The call to that rest came indeed like "a thief in the night"—literally, as William Knox has sung:

From the blossom of health to the paleness of death."

As when amid the perfect stillness of the summer woods a branch falls to the earth in an instant, without warning—so fell our departed friend into the arms of that sleep which God giveth his beloved.

The funeral services were held on Thursday the 6th. They were attended by an immense concourse of people, and were conducted by Rev. G. H. Field, assisted by Rev. J. A. De Spelder. The pulpit was appropriately festooned with evergreens, symbolic of her memory among us,—evergreens among which the pure w[illegible] the of a calla lily extending h[illegible] and, spoke of the realm of beau[illegible] purity and perfection into [illegible] the flown spirit has entered t[illegible] the "Great New Song."

THE MICHIGAN PUBLISHERS.

LANSING, January 11.—The annual meeting of the Michigan Publishers' Association convened in the Senate Chamber of the State Legislature at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. About sixty publishers were present representing the principal papers of the State.

The President, R. A. Beal, called the association to order. Edwin S. Hoskins acted as Secretary. J. H. Dennis, of Hastings, was chosen Treasurer pro tem.

W. S. George reported for the Excursion Committee, favoring the idea of an excursion down the St. Lawrence to the sea-board some time in the month of August, as proposed by W. H. Brearley.

On motion of Mr. Scripps copies of the annual report were ordered sent to every member of the association and to newspapers in the State not represented at the meeting.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following list of officers of the association:

President—C. V. De Land, Saginaw.
Vice Presidents—Col. Geo. P. Sanford, Lansing; James M. Shepard, Cassopolis; Orno Strong, Nashville.
Secretary—Edwin S. Hoskins, Bellevue.
Treasurer—E. F. Grabill, Greenville.

Col. Shepard read the report of the committee on the preparation of a libel law, with a draft of the proposed bill. The bill was approved by vote of the association.

On motion of Mr. Scripps the President was directed to appoint a committee upon legislation. Col. DeLand suggested an amendment making the committee five, which was adopted.

The Chair named as the committee William Stocking, Joseph Greusel, G. R. Osmun, Col. George P. Sanford and W. S. George.

It was resolved to ask the repeal of act 192, session laws of 1879. This act, as was shown by Senator Shepard, was designed to fit a special case, and after several vicissitudes, narrowly passed the two houses and became a law.

The report of Treasurer Grabill was read and approved, showing a small balance in the treasury.

A discussion on advertising rates, etc., quite generally participated in, closed the meeting, which adjourned subject to the call of the President.

THE Turf, Field and Farm is now in its Thirty-Second Volume, and it has a very prosperous look. It has done more than any other journal to elevate the literature of sport in America. It has ever championed morality and right and has always set its face against debasing sports. It is conducted by gentlemen who are recognized as authorities in their specialties, and consequently its circulation is large and its influence great. It is eminently practical, its views on Breeding, the Turf, the Kennel, Shooting, Athletics, the Stage, &c., being formed from actual contact with the leading exponents of these pursuits and pastimes in all parts of the country and the world. No journal is more extensively quoted, and the reason of this is that its statements are forcible and reliable. It derives its chief support from the best people in America. It has grown better, more earnest with the years, and we gladly welcome it to our exchange table. It is published at 37 Park Row, New York.

How to Get Rich.

The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and as good old "Deacon Snyder," says, "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have "struck it rich." Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and all simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs fifty cents a bottle. Sold by C. PUT up your shot-guns! Shooting of wild turkey, duck, prairie chickens, woodcock and partridge is now prohibited, and persons engaged in that line of business lay themselves liable to the pains and penalties of the law.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

A PLEA FOR FALL PLOWING

There is hardly any work on the farm that gives more profitable returns than fall plowing. After the crops are harvested and the necessary preparations for winter have been completed, there remain generally a few weeks before the ground freezes up, during which teams stand idle, and the work that could be done, such as cutting wood, carting manure, etc., may without detriment be postponed until winter. This is the proper time for plowing, even if the ground is wet and turns rough and lumpy. It seems almost inexplicable why the majority of farmers should utterly disregard the benefits of fall plowing, even in view of the plainest demonstrations. During the fall of 1879, when about one-half of my garden had been plowed, the work had, for something which was then thought of more importance, to be interrupted, and was not resumed again. Next spring the entire ground was plowed and harrowed, and sown as usual. In due time row after row became visible, but, to my surprise, only on one side of the garden. The season was an unusually dry one, and the tardiness of the seeds on the other part of the ground was attributed to this cause, but when afterward they did come up so sparsely and spindling that they were not worth cultivating, it recurred to my mind that this was the part which had not been plowed in the fall. The ground was at once plowed again and planted. Seeds and plants, favored by seasonable showers, made a better growth than the previous ones, but none grew as vigorously and satisfactorily as those on the fall-plowed portion. Three hours work would have finished the plowing in the fall, while $50 would not pay for the loss and annoyance of being deprived of vegetables, caused by the neglect of fall plowing. As another experience: a few years ago frost stopped the plow in the middle of a field which was the following spring planted with potatoes. No measurement of the yields of the respective parts was made, but the yield from the fall plowed ground was far better than the other, and the more luxuriant and dark green appearance of the vines and leaves was so contrasted during the entire season, that the difference could be perceived from a considerable distance.

The advantages of fall plowing are so manifold that it is not always easy to ascertain the special beneficial agent in each case. If performed properly —plowed in narrow lands, with deep, open, dead furrows between the lands, running with the slope of the ground —fall plowing affords sufficient drainage to dry the land so much quicker that spring plowing can be commenced earlier than would otherwise be possible. By exposing a large surface to the action of frosts, the soil becomes mellowed to a greater depth than unplowed land, and thereby facilitates work in spring. A team can plow at least one-third more of fall plowed land, and with much less exertion. This is a most important point to be taken into account, when we consider how much care teams require in spring time, how easily their beasts not yet hardened to the constant pressure and friction of the collars, become galled, and how much work has to be done in a short time. The advantage of having the ground ready a week or more earlier for the plow in spring, of alleviating in no small degree the work for men and teams, and at the same time accomplish more, will in itself much more than compensate for the time and work given during fall. But more than this is gained by fall plowing; it actually enriches the land. The disintegration and dissolution of the inert plant food contained in the soil, loosened and mellowed by a deeply penetrating frost, go on more rapidly and completely, and the fertilizing matters contained in snow and rain and in the air are more readily absorbed by a deep, friable soil than by hard, unplowed land. The mechanical conditions of the ground are also materially improved by fall plowing, the alternate freezings and thawings reduce and comminute its mass into its smallest particles, and prepare a most favorable seed bed, better than any implement could effect in spring. —Dr. F. M. Hexamer, in New York Tribune.

To prevent the ravages of rabbits in the orchard Purdy's Fruit Recorder recommends tarred paper or felting, which it says when wound once round the body of the tree, is an effectual barries. Another plan is to wind the tree with heavy paper and daub over this paper with gas tar. Whitewash and carbolic acid—a gill of acid to a pailful of whitewash—is also good, and beneficial to the tree. Should be applied pretty thick.

LENAWEE COUNTY FARMERS' CLUB.

The Meeting Tuesday—Large Attendance and Interesting Discussion.

At the morning session the topic for discussion was chosen, to wit: "Resolved, That the construction and repairing of bridges of ten feet span or more, should become a county expense," secondly, "Resolved, That the system of township libraries should be changed to school district libraries."

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and adopted.

The club was of the opinion that the bridge question should be the main topic for discussion at the next meeting.

The election of officers was the next business before the club. Jay Hoag and M. T. Cole were appointed tellers, and the following choice was made:

President—B. I. Lang.
Secretary—N. J. Strong.
Treasurer—H. C. Bradish.
Vice-Presidents—M. T. Cole, Z. Cook, Jay Hoag, George Robertson, Daniel Ellenwood.
Assistant Secretary—M. Graves.
Executive Com.—Horace Sayles, C. Quick, Mrs. N. J. Strong.

Mr. Quick's ex-augural and Mr. B. I. Laing's inaugural were then delivered, and Mr. Laing took the chair.

Mr. Quick offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to inquire into the Farmers' Alliance, with a view of making this club auxiliary to it.

The club appointed only Mr. C. Quick, deeming him sufficient.

The regular topics were then read over; and some were passed.

"Condiments for the Table," by Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Steere, was introduced by a paper by Mrs. Steere. Webster defines "Condiments" as, in one opinion, a vast number of things which are absolutely useless as nourishing food. Mustard should be prepared by cooking it with the vinegar.

B. W. Steere—For breakfast condiment I suggest sweet pickles.

"Supply of Fruit," by J. W. Helme, was next presented. Every man who has two acres of land can have a full supply of fruit, pie plant, currants, strawberries, raspberries, cherries, blackberries, pears, apples, peaches, etc., etc. Mr. Helme gave the names of varieties useful. Grapes should be cultivated, and thirty varieties for every family.

C. Quick—How many grapes can one family consume?

Mr. Helme—500 pounds.

B. W. Steere—I am of the opinion that five vines are enough for one family. My vines yield 75 pounds each year.

J. W. Helme—I would set grapes 6x8 feet.

Mr. Steere—I have vines that need 20 feet each way.

Mr. Helme—For trellis, set posts 20 feet apart, and run two wires.

Mr. Quick—I cannot succeed in raising grapes. My soil is sandy. Almost everything else grows well, but grapes do not.

H. C. Bradish—Let the ex-president kill a sheep dog, and plant his vines over him, and his grapes will grow. My vines do well.

J. W. Helme—I can supply Concord grape plants at 5 cents each, or $2.50 per hundred.

Mrs. N. J. Strong—How can we keep the grapes best for eating through winter?

J. W. Helme—I saw them kept by packing in oak sawdust, and burying in the ground. Some varieties need canning to be good.

Mrs. Ellenwood—I have good luck with the Ionia.

Mr. B. W. Steere—The Clinton I regard as an excellent grape when fully ripe, and it will stand the winter. In fact, I think the frost improves them. The Clinton will hang on the vines until December. Ives' seedling is a good keeper. Rogers' No. 9 is also an excellent grape, so is No. 15.

Mrs. Steere—Grape jelly can be made without the acid taste, by preparation some time before putting up, and by standing over night, when the tartar will form on the sides of the vessel, so it can be poured off, and the jelly will be free from acid taste.

It was voted that at the next meeting Ex-President Quick be invited to give the club an address.

The bridge question will be discussed at the next meeting, when Jay Hoag and M. T. Cole will lead in discussion.

T. J. Ludlow talked about wheat a little. He has some wheat of the Douglas variety from 13-16th of an ounce of seed he raised eleven pounds. It is of an amber variety. Thin bran.

Adjourned for one month.

THE January number of the American Poultry Journal is on our table. It is an elegant number, both in matter and typographical make-up. It is as full of nutriment as a brahma egg and as handsome as a lady's illustrated magazine. Every poultry raiser should have a copy. Published by C. J. Ward, Chicago.

A cut in a St. Louis paper, which we took for the picture of a St. Louis girl's mitten, turns out, on a closer examination, to be the full-sized picture of a sugar-cured ham.

The Farmer's Garden.

The garden is of scarcely less importance to the farmer from the farm itself. It is really in advance of the farm when we consider the comforts of home. The farm supplies the substantials, such as meat and bread, and replenishes the purse, which, of course, is the main item, but it is the garden that the good housewife is indebted to for the many side dishes served up so regularly three times a day, which play such an important part in making the life of the farmer desirable above that of other men. If the garden is neglected, its influence must be felt three times a day throughout the entire year. And how uncomfortable it must be to the good husbandman to hear his faithful wife remark a thousand times during this period, "Well, I have nothing to cook." To provide the larder well is the farmer's first duty. This he owes to himself and his family. Then let him plant a good garden; not merely a patch of potatoes and a few rows of peas, but let him select a choice spot of ample size, manure it well, put it in good order, and from his seed catalogue select every variety of vegetable seed that will do well in our climate.

Plant your seed in the proper time, and tend them well, so that through the following year, instead of having nothing to cook, your wife will find it difficult to select from among the good things in her larder those necessary for a meal. The usual mode of gardening is little better than having no garden at all. Do not be content with the usual slip-shod way of doing things, but do them right. The time spent in the garden is not lost. It pays better comparatively than the labor in the fields; and above all things else, do not let it be put off until the other work is done, but prepare your garden spot and sow the seed as early as the season will admit, and continue to sow as the time arrives for the planting of different seed for vegetables for late use.

Cutting Glass with Scissors.

Many persons may not be aware that glass can be cut under water with great ease, to almost any shape, by simply using shears or strong scisssors. In order to insure success, two points must be attended to. First, and most important, the glass must be kept quite level in the water while the shears are being applied; and secondly, to avoid risk, it is better to begin the cutting by taking off small pieces at the corners and along the edges, and so reduce the shape gradually to that required; as, if any attempt is made to cut the glass all at once to the shape, as we would cut a piece of cardboard, it will most likely break just where it is not wanted to.

Some kinds of glass cut much better than others, the softer glasses being best for this purpose. The shears need not be at all sharp, as their action does not appear to depend on the states of the edges presented to the glass. When the operation goes on well, the glass breaks away from the scissors in small pieces, in a straight line with the blades.

This method of cutting glass has often been of service when a diamond was not at hand, for cutting ovals and segments, and although the edges are not so smooth as might be desired for some purposes, yet it will answer in a great many cases.

To Multiply Scarce Varieties of Potatoes.

Split the potatoes lengthwise, so as to expose the most of the eyes possible, then let the pieces dry for a week or two, so as to heal up the cut part, and place them on four inches of soil on the bench of the green house, as near the glass as possible, sometime about the fifteenth of March, not sooner. Within two weeks (if the temperature is not less than 60 degrees at night) they will have started shoots two or three inches long. These shoots, or cuttings, can then be taken off and propagated, like dahlias or any other flowering plants. One should be careful in taking off the cutting, to cut so as to leave a bud or eye to start again, for from a single potatoe 50 to 200 plants can be made before the middle of May, which is as soon as they can be planted outside. Every plant of these, if properly handled, is equal to a dry "set." Of course, the potatoe cuttings must be grown in small pots (three-inch pots are best) just like any plant, under a glass in a greenhouse or hot-bed, until the time of setting out.

CHARACTERISTICS OF ANIMALS.—All animals are neat by habit—even the hog, which has been unjustly esteemed the very type of filth. We can think of no animal that does not look neat when in its free, normal condition. Even the toad, that makes its house in the dirt, when he comes forth from his hiding-place, looks as slick as a new pin, and not a particle of dirt sticks to the eel, though he plows in the mud for his living. The woodchuck burrows in the sand-hill, and, though he has no wash-bowl, towel, comb or brush, who ever saw one dirty or with hair disheveled? The whole feathered creation are as careful of their personal appearance and as nice and tidy in their dress as a bride. It is only in their domestic, abnormal condition that the inferior animals look filthy and are filthy; and here it is not their fault, but their misfortune. They are under the dominion of man, subject to his mercy, which sometimes is cruelty, and too seldom is considerate kindness.

How to Judge the Weather.

The colors of the sky at different times are a wonderfully good guidance. Not only does a clear sunset presage fair weather, but there are other tints that speak with clearness and accuracy. A bright yellow in the evening indicates wind; a pale yellow, wet; a neutral gray color constitutes a favorable sign in the evening, and an unfavorable one in the morning. The clouds are full of meaning in themselves. If they are soft, undefined and feathery, the weather will be fine; if the edges are hard, sharp and definite, it will be foul. Generally speaking, any deep, unusual hues betoken wind and rain; while more quiet and delicate tints bespeak fair weather.

Simple as these maxims are, the British Board of Trade has thought fit to publish them for the use of seafaring men.

Orders have been issued in London to the police to summon any person seen dropping orange-peel on the sidewalk. A good example for this country to follow. And let the slippery banana skin also be included.

Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary that you should do so, and hold your tongue when it is better that you should be silent.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair
The Vigor is incomparible. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

IRELAND.

[illegible] Disturbances

The batteries of artillery stationed at Dublin, are prohibited from marching into the country without an escort.

The examination of the Tralee Land Leaguers was held in jail, to avoid a riot.

A land meeting to be held at Tralee was prohibited. Four hundred troops were on the ground, when the crowd, a large one, assembled, but quickly dispersed. Davitt spoke in Tralee afterward without disturbance.

A large land meeting has been held at Armagh.

The farmers are forcibly hunting over the landlords' property in County Galway. Threatening letters have been made for the attempt to murder a policeman near Headford last week.

Michael Davitt delivered a speech at Tralee, but was subsequently prevented from speaking at a prohibited meeting at Clogher, where a collision between the people and police was narrowly avoided.

A do[illegible] attempt to murder one Dearney, a [illegible] master of Dublin, has been made. Dearney was under the protection of the police, and he and two policemen maintained a regular fusilade with a large party of disguised men.

Five flying columns, including all arms of the services, are to be sent out on a two days' march.

The exhumation of the Land Leaguers is proceeding in the jail at Tralee, the police fearing to remove the prisoners to the court, owing to the excitement.

A meeting of the English and Irish Liberals to express their dissatisfaction at the incompleteness of the changes proposed in the land system is attracting much attention.

The London Times says: "A body of politicians [illegible] Irish are conveying menace, not in words, but quite intelligibly, that unless sweeping changes in the land system, going far beyond the lines of the act of 1870, are proposed, a stand will be made against coercion."

There is a rumor that Earl Cowper desires to resign the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, principally for private reasons.

At a meeting of the Land League in Dublin Davitt called attention to the immense services of the Land League in America.

Parnell advised a postponement of the National Convention until the Government had dealt with coercion.

A meeting of the Orange Emergency Committee resolved to send assistance to several "Boycotted" persons.

Mr. A. M. Sullivan, member of Parliament for Louth, who sued the Irish Times some time ago for defamation, has obtained a verdict against the paper for fifty pounds.

A dispatch from Dublin says it is understood that the object of the robbers of the Tralee and Listowel mail car was to get possession of some official documents which they believed were passing through the post.

The Tralee and Listowel mail car was again attacked near Long Hill. The car was smashed and the mail destroyed.

In the Court of Queen's Bench McDonough opened for the defense. He made a touching reference to the fact that he was almost sole survivor of counsel employed in the O'Connell case. He denounced the prosecution as the landlords' indictment against the tenants of Ireland. The court was crowded. Before the opening of court two hundred persons, of both sexes, understood to be rack rented and evicted tenants, marched from the offices of the Land League to the Four Courts.

McDonough's speech consisted of a vindication and assertion of the principles of the Land League, which organization, he said, was as loyal as a trades union. He declared that the Traversers profess the principles of John Stuart Mill, and said that but for the support of England, the landlords would be driven into the sea. The people, he said, pay the shopkeepers £40,000 for food, and were they, he asked, to deprive their wives and children of sustenance in order to pay the landlords? He had not concluded his speech when court adjourned.

Two companies of infantry have arrived at Longbreagh, where, with a large force of police, they will be principally employed in protecting process servers.

When McDonough concluded his speech in the Court of Queen's Bench, he was loudly cheered. He said he submitted with confidence to the jury that the Land League was a perfectly legal organization to cause, by agitation, certain alterations in the land laws, with the necessity of which, not only Ireland, but all England, was now ringing. He set before the jury the example of a jury who acquitted seven Bishops, and drew a moving picture of the evictions which followed the Irish famine. Samuel Walker followed on the same side with a powerful speech. He quoted the charter of the Land League, and contended that it was legal. He read extracts of the Parliamentary speeches of Gladstone, Law, and Bright in support of the compensation for the disturbance bill. He insisted that Traversers had said nothing and contributed to damage landlordism than was said in the speeches in Parliament referred to.

After a land meeting in one of the Arian Isles, twenty-one head of cattle were missing, which, it is said, were driven over the cliffs into the sea.

The examination of the officers of the Tralee branch of the Land League has been concluded. Brennan, proprietor of the Kerry Independent, and Jeremiah Leahy, President of the Firies branch of the Land League, were discharged.

An attempt has been made, it is believed by Fenians, to blow up the armory of the infantry barracks at Sligo, where the rifles of the [illegible] are deposited. A meal store near the barracks was blown up, but no other damage was done. An investigation is in progress. The explosion is believed to have been effected with dynamite, which was smuggled into the barracks by some one having business with the regiment.

MARY BEST, wife of David Best, of Kokomo, Ind., died of pleuro-pneumonia, brought on by the alleged brutal and inhuman treatment of her husband. For years they have been leading a miserable existence. New Years Eve he came home intoxicated, as usual, and abused her shamefully, and finally kicking her out of doors, forced her to remain out until nearly frozen. After a weeks' suffering, and uncared for, she died. At the Coroner's inquest, Mrs. Alice Blaser, her sister, testified that the room in which the sick woman lay was below the freezing point almost the entire winter. Best is under arrest and will probably be made to suffer for his crime. The history of the life of the dead woman is pathetic in the extreme. Ten years ago she was surpassingly beautiful. The father, at one time in excellent circumstances, educated her well. At that time Best was a young man who had the respect of all who knew him, but drink got hold of him and robbed him of good name, character, and everthing that makes the man.

GEN. TERRY telegraphs from St. Paul, January 5, to military headquarters the following from Maj. Ilgis, at camp, Popular River, January 3: "I moved the hostiles to-day to my camp and have them under guard. There are by actual count 195 of them, and 100 more to come over from the Yankton camp to-morrow. I proceeded against them this morning and was met by the Yankton chiefs, who requested I should not visit their camp, and promised to turn all the hostiles over to me to-morrow. When this is accomplished I will move at once to Buford. I burned and destroyed forty-two of their guns which were worthless, and will get more to-morrow. There will be about 300 horses. Reliable news just received is that Sitting Bull, with over 100 lodges, is at the crossing at Mills River, fifty-two miles from here. A train from Keough, on Red Water, will probably reach us to-morrow. The Crow surrendered his ponies and guns this morning."

A HORRIBLE tragedy occurred last week at a place four miles from Oshkosh, Wis., where a wealthy German named Viscow lived on his farm. The neighbors discovered that his barn was on fire, and on arriving on the ground, the barn, granary, and house were found to have been set on fire and looked. The daughter was discovered lying near the gate, bleeding, with two large gashes in her head, and her clothes partly burned. After the fire the remains of Mrs. Viscow were found. Enough remained to show that her throat had been cut from ear to ear. Suspicion fastened on Mr. Viscow, but his body has since been found in the ruins of the barn burned beyond recognition. The family relations had been unhappy, and it is thought that Viscow killed his wife and daughter and fired the premises, meeting his own death in the fire. The daughter is insensible, and will probably die. The family had lived unhappily. Some neighbors, however, lay the deed to tramps.

THE fact has before been mentioned that a Mrs. Hazzard, at Monticello, Ill., last September, gave birth to five children. In corroboration of the statement, we take the following from the columns of the Washington (D. C.) National Republican, which is written by the father of the "litter":

MONTICELLO, PRATT COUNTY, ILL., December 20, 1880.

Dear Sir—Excuse me for presenting you a picture of my five babies, born September 18, 1880. I am anxious to learn whether there is any other such case on record or not. From all authority I can gather, there is no man can claim a picture of five; and if I am the only man that can do so, I think I am entitled to a premium. I am a wounded soldier of the late war. Yours respectfully, MICHAEL HAZZARD.

P. S.—Their weight, when born, averaged from three to five pounds; total, 19½ pounds.

"Born September 18, 1880, of Mrs. Asenath Hazzard, wife of Michael Hazzard.

"The wife was born at Little York, Washington County, Indiana, May 2, 1841. Michael Hazzard was born at Vienna, Scott County, Indiana, December 7, 1841; married October 1, 1861.

"Michael Hazzard enlisted in Company C, Thirty-eighth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, August 20, 1861, and was shot through the right shoulder at Perryville, Ky., October 8, 1862. Discharged December 31, 1862, and moved to Monticello, Pratt County, in 1866. Both Americans."

The East Raisin Literary Society will hold a novelty social at the residence of D. P. Anthony, on Friday evening, February 4. Each lady is requested to bring a slip of paper with her name written thereon. Supper to be furnished by the ladies. Come all.

The musical talent of East Raisin will meet at the Kelley school house on Friday evening, January 28, for the purpose of organizing a singing class. All interested are requested to be present.

BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn is suffering from colds in the head, and an individual coldness of heart; resulting from the red hot determinination manifested by some to make others pay all the debts they owe.

The jail has been leased to lawyers who illuminate the text, "Pay me what thou owest," and whether the steward be just or unjust, a jar in social machinery is sure to follow.

The ladies have tabled all resolutions regarding their rights until the gentlemen exercise their own.

Another bachelor, newly imported, has succumbed to fate, and unless the disconsolate members of that club of professionals are willing to be sacrificed they had better branch out on the Butler road instead of lingering among the willows here.

The Sabbath school anniversary at the Baptist church was shadowed by a storm. The pieces were new and well rendered, the singing good, and in spite of all obstacles the affair netted a nice profit.

Sunday was unpleasant and the story that Mr. Blair had not arrived kept many away from the temperance lecture. It is said to have been interesting, and so convinced one of the venders that he dropped a half dollar on the plate. He heard that the women in New York were going to vote, and thought he would begin to lay up treasure in Heaven.

The Aid society, which has formerly worked to buy a rectory, reorganized under the leadership of Mrs. N.G. King, and will now assist the Home Mission cause. They have rented Green's hall and will fit it for a work, lecture or social rendezvous.

Neither scarlet fever or any other epidemic afflicts us yet, but another wedding is expected as soon as the eclipse is over. PEARLIE.

ADDISON.

Among the good attributes of the villa at present we quote health, sleighing, trade and general harmony of feeling. The bad ones we leave for some one else to notice.

Tuesday was the occasion of the funeral of Mrs. Annie Iveson, formerly of this place, and late of Raisin township. Services took place at the M.E. church here. Mrs. I. died in the 92d year of her age, and is the mother of a numerous family.

The Addison correspondent of the Adrian Times says: "A steaming locomotive on the proposed T. & M. R. R. running through this place is in the mind's eye of many of our citizens." We trust he may soon be able to chronicle a literal gazing on the so long desired object.

The somewhat complex Hewitt-Primmer feud of some months standing would be an excellent case for law practitioners to look up if the parties were only a little better stocked with wampum.

The flouring and grist mills managed by Mr. J. H. Underwood are performing excellent work, and yet the machinery has a capacity for doing more than double the amount of business.

A wide-awake produce and grain dealer, with capital, and a desire to do unto others as he would have others do unto him is just the sort of personage needed at this point. To such an one the position offers good inducements.

RIDGEWAY.

George Scollick, the St. John's photographer, was seen at church in this village on Sunday last.

The subscription for the D. & B. depot is about completed, and there is no doubt but that it will be built.

The Osgood School house was burned to the ground one night last week. There is a talk of dividing the District up instead of building a new house.

R. J. Miller, of Constantine, spent Sunday and Monday with his friends in and about the village.

Interest in the T. & M. R. R. was awakened last week by the report that the surveyors were at work, and would reach this point in a few days. The report seems to lack confirmation.

Nathan Dibble has taken to himself a wife. The bride was a Monroe county lass.

On Saturday evening, the 15th, about sixty of the old friends of Mr. & Mrs. John C. Palmer dropped in on them and gave them an old-fashioned house warming. Everything passed off pleasantly and a good time was the result.

On Sunday, 16th, Frank Davis and Della Long, a matrimonially inclined couple from Dundee, hied themselves away to this village and had the nuptial knot tied by the Rev. G. H. Field.

Chet Brownson lost a fine colt on Monday which he was breaking. The colt threw its head up, striking a girder, fractured the spinal column.

We are enjoying a fine run of sleighing, and farmers are making a business of hauling timber; stave bolts in large quantities going to Tecumseh every day, which ought to be bought and manufactured in this village.

FRANKLIN.

Considerable interest is manifested again this week in the railroad project, occasioned by a visit of several representatives of the road to our town; and a meeting of the committee and other subscribers was held last evening, at which a committee of five was appointed to confer with the company in relation to surrendering the bonus notes, &c.; and it is hoped the project will be pushed as soon as the weather will permit.

Prof. Lowrie's Friday evening lectures are being well attended, and are very instructive. He also delivered a stirring address on temperance last Sabbath evening to a full house, and others will follow.

As this will doubtless be our last communication to the HERALD, on account of being compelled to abandon our business here, in consequence of an injury received, we desire to express our thanks to this community for the encouragement and support we have received, and shall leave the many pleasant associations we have formed with many regrets. We have disposed of our business interest to Mr. Jackson Bouck, who will continue the business at the old stand, in connection with A. F. Peters. May success attend them.

Sim Whelan will go back to his old quarters in the employ of Mr. Deming, who by the way is gaining hosts of friends, and can hardly fail of success.

Decisive Battles of the World.

Creasy's extremely interesting volume narrating the history of the fifteen decisive battles of the world, those few battles of which a contrary event would have essentially varied the drama of the world in all its subsequent scenes, is highly esteemed by all readers of history. It has a long time been on Harper's list as one of their standard books, at the price of $1,50. Now it is issued in a very handsome cloth-bound volume, by the American Book Exchange, New York, at the nominal price of 35 cents. It forms one of their Acme Library of History. Catalogues of the standard low-priced books of the Literary Revolution will be sent on application to the American Book Exchange, Tribune Building, New York.

LENAWEE COUNTY ITEMS.

A new post office by the name of Woodstock, has been established recently in that township.

H. B. Matthias, the Addison cigar manufacturer recently arrested for refilling empty cigar boxes, has been fined $25 and sent to the house of correction for thirty days.

Hudson Gazette: A plucky robin red-breast has been trying to stick it out in Hudson this winter with the hardy, greedy English sparrows, and so far he has made it work. He has his headquarters in the vicinity of neighbor Ellsworth's, and we shall expect to hear his glad sweet notes, as soon as his throat thaws out.

Deerfield Record: Freight trains commenced running on the Detroit & Butler road, Wednesday. They run from Detroit to Milan on that road and then on the Toledo and Ann Arbor to Toledo. The freight carried is from the Wabash road. This arrangement will be a great injury to the Canada Southern, as the most of that road's freight from Toledo is from the Wabash line.

Adrian Press: Thursday morning freight No. 53, west bound, stopped at Clayton, where it was ordered to wait for two sections of freight 54, east bound. The two sections passed, and 53 not knowing the passenger train east was late, and, finding itself on the time of that train, began to back on the siding. Just then an unheralded section of freight 54 came tearing down, and crashed into the retreating 53; a smash ensued. The fireman of 54 named Petitt, of Elkhart, jumped to the ground, rebounding upon the track, and the wheels completely severed the upper part of the skull from the head. Eight cars were damaged, and both locomotives somewhat injured.

Blissfield Advance: About 8 o'clock Friday morning an alarm of fire was sounded from the East Side, caused by a chimney on the Drew House, burning out. Engine and hose cart was soon brought out but their services were not required. The excitement was beginning to subside when a second alarm was given. Upon examination by Messrs. N. Stoner, J. B. Carter and ye scribbler, fire was discovered in one of the sleeping apartments on the second floor. The bed was a mass of flames and the room full of smoke. The fire was soon squelched, however, and thus a disastrous fire averted. The fire in the bed room was caused by an open pipe-hole, which allowed the fire to drop onto the bed.

Blissfield Advance: By a recent decision of the Supreme Court in the case of a resident of Detroit against that city for damages, resulting from a defective sidewalk, the court holds that the city is not liable, that sidewalks are not expressly mentioned in the statute and that the act is also made applicable to townships, villages and corporations, and that only bridges, crosswalks and culverts are embraced within the terms. This decision will be greeted with satisfaction by the village council, who have had an elephant on their hands in the shape of a threatened suit for damages in the case of Dr. Cassiday, who was recently injured by a defective walk. The question now arises, sidewalks being considered merely a convenience for pedestrians, whether it can be enforced by law for private individuals to build them? Will somebody rise and explain?

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23, 1881.

The long debate on the funding bill has delayed other legislative business to such an extent that the talk of an extra session is now being revived. Prominent members of both parties who have heretofore believed that all necessary business could be disposed of before the 4th of March now express grave doubts of attaining that result. There remains but about 30 working days, a very short time in which to dispense of so much legislation as awaits action. As a rule the Representatives, of both parties, desire to avoid the extra session, but there are individuals who have reasons for wanting one, and whose influence, in a subtle manner, is being exerted in that direction. If the funding measure was entirely disposed of, it would be possible to predict the outcome with some certainty, but there is every reason to believe that the bill as it passed the House will be amended in the Senate so as to change the bond to a five-twenty, three and a half per cent. With this the House will probably refuse to concur, and the discussion will be opened afresh. Those opposed to funding at all will join the side most likely to kill the bill, and a lively fight over the question will be the result. These are the indications at this time. Considering all this in connection with the other work to be done, the outlook for clearing up at the close of the session is not very encouraging. The apportionment bill promises to bring on a long debate, and a greater struggle still is impending on the legislative, judicial, and sundry civil appropriation bills. The legislative bill especially, in which the clause relative to the army at the polls and the deputy marshals will arise, is expected to consume much time. Altogether the prospects for an extra session are favorable, to say the least.

The interest in the composition of the next Cabinet increases as the time for its appointment approaches. It is intensified by the activity of the various statesmen who expect or desire to be called into the councils of the new President, and by the many rumors concerning the expectations and demands of certain leaders, particularly Senator Conkling. Of course a great deal that passes current touching this point is speculation and exaggeration, if not downright invention. It is conceded that Mr. Blaine is to be Secretary of State, and this selection is received with satisfaction in all quarters. The general impression is that Blaine will be the ruling spirit of the Cabinet—the premier. His well known positive character and dashing policy, coupled with the more moderate and cautious spirit of General Garfield, gives promise of brilliant results—a strong foreign policy and a wise administration at home. Mr. Conkling, they say, demands a Grant man and a New Yorker for Secretary of the Treasury, while General Garfield is credited with a purpose to appoint a western man, tendering the War Office portfolio or the Postmaster Generalship to the man selected from New York. This is reported to be unsatisfactory to Mr. Conkling. Whether this is actually the situation I am unable to say with any degree of positiveness, for what the real views and purposes of the President-elect are, can be known only to the few he has consulted. The past unfrendliness between Mr. Conkling and Mr. Blaine is supposed by some to stand in the way of perfect accord in the arrangement of a new administration, the idea being that, if Mr. Blaine leads, Mr. Conkling will refuse to follow. But all the Republican leaders, including the New York senator, are anxious for a successful and harmonious administration, and I think the predictions of rupture will prove unfounded.

Visitors from all parts of the country who have explored the sights of Washington during the past ten years will remember the old gentleman who kept a picture-stand in the dome of the capitol. His venerable appearance and kindly manner, as well as his chatty talk about the interesting features of the building, often detained the visitors to that lofty height and repaid them for the wearisome climb. Samuel Douglass Wyeth was his name. But his pleasant face and quiet greeting will be missed from the great dome, for the tired old man has "gone up higher." Mr. Wyeth was an educated and polished gentleman, with a taste for old pictures, rare books, and articles of bric-a-brac which amounted to almost a passion. His rooms were a treasury of these art-gatherings, and here he lived a quiet, nearly secluded life, excepting only an occas-

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

A HOUSEKEEPER'S TRAGEDY.

One day as I wandered I heard a complaining,
And saw a poor woman, the picture of gloom.
She glared at the mud on the door-step ('twas raining)
And this was her wail as she wielded the broom:

"Oh! life is a toil and love is a trouble,
And beauty will fade and riches will flee.
And pleasures they dwindle and prices they double,
And nothing is what I could wish it to be."

"There's too much of worrisome goes to a bonnet,
There's too much of ironing goes to a shirt,
There's nothing that pays for the time wasted on it,
There's nothing that lasts but trouble and dirt."

"In March it is mud, it's slush in December,
And midsummer's breezes are laden with dust.
In fall the leaves litter, in muggy September
The wall-paper droops and the flies from rust."

"There are worms in the cherries, and slugs in the roses,
And ants in the sugar, and mice in the pies,
The rubbish of spiders, no mortal supposes,
And ravaging roaches and damaging flies."

"It's sweeping at six and dusting at seven,
It's victuals at eight and dishes at nine,
It's potting and panning from ten to eleven,
We scarce break our fast ere we plan how to dine."

"With grease and with litter from outside to center,
Forever at war and forever alert,
No rest for a day lest the enemy enter,
I spend my whole time in a struggle with dirt."

"Last night in my dreams, I was stationed forever
On a bare little isle in the midst of the sea,
My one chance of life was a ceaseless endeavor
To sweep off the waves, ere they swept over me."

"Alas! 'twas no dream—again I behold it,
I yield, I am helpless my fate to avert;"
She rolled down her sleeves, her apron she folded,
Then laid down and died, and was buried in dirt.

A LIVING HONEY-COMB.

Much as has been written about the marvels of instinct, there are still discoveries of great interest to be made in this prolific field. Particularly in the domain of those insect Yankees, the ants, with their wonderful ingenuity and human-like manners and customs, there is room for extended observations.

Some lately-discovered facts in relation to them are so curious and interesting that it may be advisable to give them greater publicity than they have yet obtained. Some of these facts have long been known to the world of science, but not to the public. Others are new discoveries. As a whole they form one of the most surprising chapters in the history of animal life and contrivance.

Varied as are the social habits of the ants, it is generally considered that social bees surpass them in one particular, namely, their mode of storing supplies of winter food, the store-houses of ant-food having no contrivance similar in ingenuity to the honey-comb, with its rich supply of the sweets of life.

But the truth is that certain tribes of ants are well aware of the value of nature's sweetmeats as articles of food, and have developed a mode of storing up their winter honey still more curious than that practiced by the bees.

They possess, in fact, what may be called living honey-combs; perambulatory cells filled with distilled sweetness. We refer to the honey-bearing ants of New Mexico, concerning which some very interesting facts have been brought to light.

The Rev. Dr. McCook, Philadelphia, a noted observer of ants ant-life, has been interviewing these honey-bearers, and his results differ so widely from the ordinary facts of insect instinct that they cannot but prove of general interest. These ants had been previously known only in New Mexico, but he discovered them in Colorado, inhabiting the locality known as the "Garden of the Gods," their nests being excavated in the stony crests of low ridges which run through this mountain-girt paradise.

The ridges are composed of a friable sandstone, into which our minute masons mine deeply, digging galleries which sometimes run for several feet into the rock. The nest, outwardly, is some ten inches in diameter by from two to three and a half inches in height, composed of sand and bits of stone carried from within, some of which seem large enough to defy a regiment of ants to move them.

Inside the nests successive chambers are excavated, connected by galleries, the floors of the chambers being comparatively smooth, while the ceilings are left in a rough state. But this roughness is no evidence of carelessness in the builder. It has, on the contrary, an important object: this is to furnish foothold for the clinging feet of certain extraordinary-looking creatures, which form the living honey-combs of which we have spoken.

Fancy an animal with the head and thorax of a small ant, but with all the posterior portion of the body converted into a round sac, of the size of a lage pea, and of a rich translucent amber hue—it being, in fact, distended into a reservoir of honey. This honey-bag is immense when compared with the size of the ant, the unchanged parts of which might pass for a black pin's head attached to the side of a marrow-fat pea. These odd-looking creatures cling to the roof of the chamber with their feet, the distended honey-bag hanging downward like an amber globe. On seeing them we instinctively imagine that their leg-muscles must be developed in a fashion to put to shame those of human athletes, since it is no light weight which they are thus forced to continuously support.

In each chamber of the nest about thirty-honey-bearers are found, making some three hundred to complete the nest. Besides these there are hundreds or thousands of others, workers and soldiers, lords and queens, to whom the honey-bearers serve as store-houses of winter food.

Dr. McCook succeeded in bringing some of these home with him alive, providing them with nest-building materials, and with sugar for nutriment. He has one very interesting nest in a glass bottle, with its interior chamber well displayed. The roof of this is covered with depending globules of honey, so large as to almost conceal the minute clinging insect of which they really form a part.

But the marvelous feature of the case remains to be described. Not only is the abdomen of the ant converted to a receptacle for honey, but the whole internal economy of the body is transformed for this purpose. All the organs of the abdomen have quite disappeared: viscera, nerves, veins, arteries, have alike vanished; and there remains only a thin transparent skin, which is capable of great distention. It is thus in reality a honey-cell, and much stranger than that of the bee, the waxen walls of the latter being replaced in this case by the tissues of a living animal. The creature can afford to dispense with the abdominal organs, since its life-duties are so metamorphosed that it has henceforth to act as an animated sweetmeat.

Dr. McCook's observations enabled him to discover that the working ants, returning from their out-door foraging, with their [illegible] with the honey they have somewhere harvested, enter the chambers of the nest and eject this swet fluid from their own mouths into the mouths of the honey-bearers, whose bodies become greatly distended with the delicious food. In other cases he perceived hungry ants seeking for a meal from the food thus generously stored up. The honey-bearer seemed to slightly contract the muscles of the abdominal skin, forcing from its mouth minute globules of honey; these clung to the hairs of the under lip, and were eagerly lapped up by the hungry ants waiting to be fed. It is probable, however, that these supplies are principally intended as winter stores for the workers, for the feeding of larvæ, and for the dinner-table of the queen, who is, as usual, too proud or too dignified to do her own foraging.

The working ants take great care of their helpless honey-bearers. When one, through some convulsion of nature—occasioned perhaps by the tap of a gigantic human finger—looses its hold and drops to the floor of its chamber, it is at once picked up by a worker and carried back to its old foothold on the roof of the apartment. How this minute creature can drag up a perpendicular wall a mass twenty times its own size and weight is only less surprising than it would be to see an adroit climber of the human race ascending the face of a precipice and pulling after him a ton weight.

With regard to the source of honey, these ants are not known to feast on flowers, like bees and some of our home ants, nor could any evidence be found of the Aphis, or ant-cow, which many of our ants milk for its honey.

The honey-gatherer is difficult to observe. It is a nocturnal ant, keeping out of sight of the sun during the day, and only venturing forth at nightfall in search of food. Dr. McCook observed them, in the summer twilight, marching outward from the nest in long columns, and pursuing night after night the same paths. He watched them for a considerable time before he succeeded in finding the goal of these nightly expeditions. At length discovering some ants on the twigs of a species of scrub-oak, which grew abundantly at the foot of the ridge, he observed that they showed a marked preference for certain small oak-galls which were ranged along the sides of the twigs.

The next thing to be done was to examine these galls. We are accustomed to associate galls with the idea of bitterness only, yet they proved to be the true honey-yielders. On the round, green masses, minute drops of a sweet juice were found; this the ants eagerly licked up, passing from gall to gall until fully laden, or returning to the original gall at a later hour when fresh sweetness had exuded from it.

The gall-nut, it is well known, is an excrescence upon the leaves of a species of oak; it is produced by the puncture of a small hymenopterous insect for the purpose of depositing its eggs. A minute grub lies in the center of the soft mass which composes the gall. Whether the sweet juice came from this grub, or from the sap of the tree, was not readily to be discovered, though it was most likely an exudation of the sap.

All night the busy gatherers of sweets were occupied in collecting honey from the galls. Toward morning they were seen in great numbers returning to the nest, their bodies swollen with the night's harvest of honey, which, as we have said, is given to the living honey-combs within, being forced from the bodies of the workers and into the mouths of the honey-bearers, until by the time the season is over, they present a remarkable distention.

This is about all that is known at present concerning the habits of these strange ants. They very likely have other sources of honey at other seasons; but the most interesting fact is the surprising mode of storage of this sweet food.

In New Mexico the inhabitants put these ants to a very peculiar use, supplementing their dinners with a plateful of honey-ants for desert. The overladen insects wait in enforced patience while the preceding courses of the dinner are being eaten. The mode of partaking of this strange dessert is to pick up an ant, nip the honey-bag with the teeth, forcing its sweet contents into the mouth, while the remainder is thrown away. We are told that this is not so disagreeable a habit as it might at first seem, the skin surrounding the honey being reduced to a thin, transparent membrane, with nothing necessarily unpleasant in its character. Nevertheless, most of us will prefer to continue indebted to the bee for our supply of honey, leaving the ants to enjoy the fruits of their own labors.—Journal of Science.

A Ragpicker's Lair.

After groping along some forty feet, writes a correspondent of the Hartford Times, I found myself in a small yard walled up on all sides by the backs of other houses, each trying to outdo the other in degrees of uncouth dilapidation and squalid poverty. The light of day scarcely got in here, because from every window looking into this yard ropes were stretched to some other window, and along them were hung rags of every color and description, in every stage of decay. The yard was occupied by a dozen Italian ragpickers, who started at my appearance and then went on sullenly with their work. Heaps of rags were everywhere, under foot and overhead. Rag picking and cleaning is the principal business of Mulberry street. The very atmosphere is impregnated with rags. A very little of it was enough, and I stumbled up some rickety stairs to see what the rooms were like; the only one I had strength of mind and of nose to venture into will have to serve as a specimen of all. I pushed open the first door I came to, and found a woman cooking something over a fire. The room looked out on the yard below. This woman did not seem to mind my intrusion; she went on with her work. I learned afterwards that the ragpickers are so used to the inspection visits of health officers looking for small-pox cases, and of policemen looking for criminals, that they never make any objection. The room that I got into cannot have been more than twenty feet square, and yet by means of rough wooden bunks built one over the other, like on shipboard, some twenty men made this their home. Every bunk was filled with rags, which constituted the main furniture; there was also a stove, a chair, some tubs and some tin pans. The smell, untenanted as the room was then, was atrocious. What it must be on a hot night with twenty occupants must be left to the reader's imagination. I got out again as soon as I could and made my way toward the front of the building, almost walking over the children who swarmed and played in the puddles on the ground. These poor little ones are the offspring of drunken, besotted parents. Dickens used to say that the poor children of London were not brought up, but dragged up. I might truthfully say that these children are not dragged up, but kicked up.

Sea-Dust.

People laughed at the man who said [illegible] such a dust in the water." Perhaps they will laugh at the heading to this article; but there will still be "sea-dust," nevertheless.

We have heard of water-spouts, of showers of fish, of salt rain, and many other curiosities which present themselves in the atmosphere, but to assert that there is such a thing as sea-dust is to transcend all reasonable bounds. The evidence, however, in favor of its existence is exceedingly powerful—indisputable, in fact—and this is the story told by eye-witnesses. They say that in certain parts of the world, notably about the Cape de Verde islands, there are constantly met at sea, several hundred miles away from land, thick, yellowish-red fogs, not unlike London fogs in November. These fogs obscure the atmosphere, and are very injurious to navigation, but they have not the baleful odor of their London prototypes, nor do they affect the breathing in the same way. Whilst sailing through them it is found that the ship, sails and rigging are covered with a fine, impalpable powder, which falls as dry rain, and covers the surface on which it falls sometimes to the depth of two inches. In color, it is of a brick-dust hue, sometimes of a light yellow, and it feels between the teeth like fine grit, such as might be blown into the mouth on a windy day in March. No place is free from its presence, its fineness giving it power to penetrate everywhere. The sea, while the dust is falling, looks as if it had been peppered, and is discolored for some distance down. Sometimes the dust comes in a shower, and passes off again. The fogs are nothing but vast quantities of the dust suspended in the air.

It is not only in the vicinity of the Cape de Verde that this wonderful dust is seen. In the Mediterranean, on the northern parts of Africa, in the middle of the Atlantic, it has been reported. It is invariably the same in kind and appearance, and examination under microscopes was proved the identity of said Cape de Verde sea-dust with Mediterranean sea-dust. All this is very remarkable; dust falling in clouds, no land within some hundred of miles, nothing visible which could possibly account for the curious phenomenon. Sand-spouts there are in sandy deserts, and showers of sand taken originally from spots whereon the carrier wind has left its mark; but here there is no desert from which the sand can be rapt, and the wind, so far from being boisterous, or disposed to play whirlwind pranks, is light and steady, blowing ships along at a calm five knots an hour.

In connection with these facts, hear what Humboldt says of the sight he saw in the dry river beds and sandy valleys of Central America: "When beneath the vertical rays of the bright and cloudless sun of the tropics, the parched sward crumbles into dust, then the indurated soil cracks and bursts, as if rent asunder by some mighty earthquake; and if at such a time two opposite currents of air by conflict moving in rapid gyrations, come in contact with the earth, a singular spectacle presents itself. Like funnel-shaped clouds, their apexes touching the earth, the sands rise in vapory form through the rarefied air in the electrically charged centre of the whirling current, sweeping on like the rushing water-spouts which strike such terror into the hearts of the mariner. A dim and sallow light gleams from the lowering sky over the dreary plain. The horizon suddenly contracts, and the heart of the traveler sinks with dismay as the wide steppe seems to close upon him on all sides. The hot and dusty earth forms a cloudy veil which shrouds the heavens from view, and increases the stifling oppression of the atmosphere."

It is believed by scientific men that these dust-clouds of Central America are in all probability, closely connected with the phenomenon of sea-dust.

Forfeits for Fun.

In evening games it often becomes necessary to punish some one or more of the company by imposing a "forfeit." The penance should be something that either is not easy to follow out to the letter—that is, has some catch in it—or puts the person in a conspicuous and amusing light. In all cases a forfeit should be designed to amuse the company as a whole, and never to offend the person called upon to pay it. In order to illustrate our idea of a good forfeit, and also to furnish suggestions to those who enjoy and take part in such pleasant amusements, we give a few of the forfeits that may be imposed: First, put a newspaper upon the floor in such a way that two persons can stand on it and not be able to touch each other with their hands. This forfeit has the honor of being old, but it was not our good fortune to meet it until a short time ago, and be forced to "give it up." By putting the paper in a doorway, one-half inside and the other half outside the room, and closing the door over it, the two persons can easily stand upon it and still be beyond each other's reach. Second, to go out of the room with two legs, and come in with six. Not difficult, if one thinks to bring a chair along on the return. Third, to act the dumb servant. The person who has the forfeits to pay must act out the answers to the questions put by the master of the ceremonies; as, How do you make bread? How do you eat soup? etc. This forfeit will cause much merriment if proper questions are put. Fourth, put one hand where the other one cannot touch it. One can get out of this difficulty by putting one hand on the elbow of the other arm. Fifth, place a pencil on the floor so that one cannot jump over it. May be done by putting it close to the wall of the room. Sixth, put a question that no can answer with a No! That is not hard if one thinks to ask, What does Y-e-s spell? Seventh, push a chair through a finger ring. This forfeit is made by putting the ring on the finger and pushing the chair—any other object will do as well—with the finger. This last much resembles the next. Eighth, put yourself through a key-hole. This was a great puzzle to us for a while; but when a piece of paper was taken with the word "yourself" written upon it, and pushed through the hole, it was all clear. There are many other of these amusing little tricks, but those given will suggest others, and help to make the social winter gatherings the enjoyable times they should be.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-nine produced no improvement in drawing teeth, no consolation for the man who has to have his hair cut; no better method for breaking in new boots; no new way of beating a landlord out of a month's board and lodging; no way of getting along on a street car except to stand up, and no way of getting back small loans. Considered as a whole she was not anything extra of a year, not even for bad weather.

How a Married Woman Goes to Sleep.

There is an article going the rounds en- [illegible] manner in which they go to sleep, according to the article, can't hold a candle to the way a married woman goes to sleep.

Instead of thinking what she should have attended to before going to bed, she thinks of it afterward. While she is revolving these matters in her mind, and while snugly tucked up in bed, the old man is scratching his legs in front of the fire, and wondering how he will pay the next month's rent. Suddenly she says:

"James, did you lock the door?"

"Which door?" says James.

"The cellar door," says she.

"No," says James.

"Well, you better go down and lock it, for I heard some person in the back yard last night."

Accordingly, James paddles down stairs and locks the door. About the time James returns and is going to get into bed, she remarks:

"Did you shut the stair door?"

"No," says James.

"Well, if it is not shut, the cat will get up into the bedroom."

"Let her come up, then," says James, illnaturedly.

Then James paddles down stairs again, and steps on a tack, and closes the stair door, and curses the cat, and returns to the bed-room. Just as he begins to climb into his couch his wife observes:

"I forgot to bring up some water. Suppose you bring some up in the big tin."

And so James, with a muttered curse, goes down into the dark kitchen and falls over a chair, and rasps all the tinware off the wall in search of the "big" tin, and then jerks the stair-door open and howls:

"Where the duce are the matches?"

She gives him minute directions where to find the matches, and adds that she would rather go and get the water herself than have the neighborhood raised about it. After which James finds the matches procures the water, comes up-stairs and plunges into bed.

Presently his wife says:

"James, let's have an understanding about money matters. Now, next week I've got to pay——"

"I don't know what you'll have to pay, and don't care," shouts James, as he lurches around and jams his face against the wall; "all I want is sleep."

"That's all very well for you," snaps his wife, as she pulls the covers viciously; "you never think of the worry and trouble I have. And there's Araminta, who I believe is taking the measles."

"Let her take 'em," says James.

Hereupon she begins to cry softly, but about the time James is falling into a gentle doze she punches him in the ribs with her elbow and says:

"Did you hear that scandal about Mrs. Jones?"

"What Jones?" says James sleepily.

"Why, Mrs. Jones."

"Where?" inquired James.

"I declare," says his wife, "you are getting more stupid every day. You know Mrs. Jones that lives at No. 21? Well, day before yesterday, Susan Smith told Mrs. Thompson that Sam Baker has said that Mrs. Jones had——"

Here she pauses and listens. James is snoring in profound slumber. With a snort of rage she pulls all the cover off him, wraps herself up in them and lays awake until 2 a. m., thinking how badly used she is.

An Indian Animal Charmer.

Strange stories reach us from India of the feats performed by a native mesmerizer named Buni, whose magnetic power would appear to be found quite irresistible by the lower animals, upon which he usually exerts it. He gives seances to which the public are invited to bring all manner of ferocious and untamable wild beasts, and, like the "Ancient Mariner," holds them with his glittering eye. In a few minutes they subside into a condition of cataleptic stiffness, from which they can only be revived by certain "passes" which he solemnly executes with his right hand. An account of one of these seances states that a snake in a state of violent irritation was brought to Buni by a menagerie proprietor, inclosed in a wooden cage. When deposited on the platform it was writhing and hissing fiercely. Buni bent over the cage and fixed his eye upon its occupant, gently waving his hand over the serpent's restless head. In less than a minute the serpent stretched itself out, stiffened, and lay apparently dead. Buni took it up and thrust several needles into its body, but it gave no signs of life. A few "passes" then restored it to its former activity. Subsequently a savage dog, held in a leash by its owner, was brought in, and, at Buni's command, let loose upon him. As it was rushing toward him, bristling with fury, he raised his hand and in a second the fierce brute dropped upon its belly, as though stricken by lightning. It seemed absolutely paralyzed by some unknown agency, and was unable to move a muscle until released from the magnetizer's spell by a majestic wave of the hand.—London Telegraph.

OUR CHIP BASKET.

—"When I was a child I spake as a child,"—and often got spanked for it.

The source of the Mississippi is 1,680 feet above tide water. That of the Sacramento about 7,500, and that of the Amazon 10,000 feet.

TWO HINTS WORTH TAKING.—1. Never attempt to do anything that is not right. Just so surely as you do, you will get into trouble. Sin always brings sorrows, sooner or later. If you even suspect anything wrong, do it not until you are assured that your suspicions are groundless.

2. When you do attempt anything that is all right, go through with it. Be not easily discouraged. Form habits of perseverance. Yield not to sloth and sleep and fickleness. To resist all these will not be easy; but you will feel that you have done right when you get through.

A PROVIDENTIAL ARRANGEMENT.—The reason a girl cannot throw a stone is discussed in an American weekly. The collar bone, some inches longer, is set some degrees lower down than in the masculine frame, which interferes with the action of the shoulder—the reason she cannot throw. The paper arrives at the conclusion that this is a providential arrangement; the temptations she has to throw—and the implements at hand—rolling-pins, pot-lids, stove hooks, plates, glass, etc. Let us be thankful.

TRUTHFUL WORDS.—The longer I live, says Sir Powell Buxton, the more I am certain that the great difference in men between the great and the insignificant, is energy, invincible determination, an honest purpose once formed, and then death or victory. This quality will do anything in the world, and no talents, no circumstances will make a two-legged creature a man without it. The very reputation of being strong-willed, plucky and indefatigable, is of priceless value. It often cows enemies, and dispels at the start opposition to one's undertakings which would otherwise be formidable.

HONOR THE SCISSORS.—Some people, ignorant of what good editing is, imagine the getting up of selected matter to be the easiest work in the world to do, whereas it is the nicest work that is done on a paper. If they find an editor with scissors in hand, they are sure to say, "That's the way you get up original matter, eh?" accompanying their new and witty question with a wink or smile. The facts are that the interest, the morality, the variety and usefulness of a paper depend, in no small degree, upon its selected matter, and the editor knows that one mind cannot make so good a paper as five or six.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Lincoln one day during war-time, to several western men who called upon him to criticise the Administration, "suppose all the property you were worth was in gold, and you had put it in the hands of Blondin to carry across the Niagara Falls on a tight-rope, would you shake the rope while he was passing over it, or keep shouting to him, 'Blondin, stoop a little more,' 'Go a little faster!' No, I am sure you would not. You would hold your breath as well as your tongue, and keep your hands off until he was safely over. Now, the Government is in the same situation, and is carrying across a stormy ocean an immense weight; untold treasures are in its hands. It is doing the best it can; don't badger it; keep silence and it will get you safely over."

TOO MUCH GOSSIP.—There is one social dishonor about which no one thinks it worth while to say much in reprobation, but which does more harm than any other known to us. We mean the dishonor of repeating conversation, opinions, circumstances, not made under promise of secrecy, but which a high sense of honor would treat as confidential, if haply a high sense of honor were the rule. It is odd that one of the best things a boy learns at school is to eschew tale-bearing and keep faith with his companions, while one of the most common practices of society is to betray the trust contained in talk, and repeat to all what has been told in implied confidence to one. This habit of repeating what we hear is as fatal to the best intercourse of minds as to the finer feelings of society.

WHAT DIOGONES WAS AFTER.—A striking instance of how easily epigrams lend themselves to misquotation is afforded by a famous anecdote of Diogones. Diogones Laertius relates, in his life of the cynic, that he took a lamp in broad daylight and began peering anxiously through the streets of Athens as though in search of something very valuable. When asked what he was seeking, the reply as ordinarily quoted, is, "I am looking for an honest man;" but the real answer, as given by the biographer, is simply, "I am looking for a man"—anthropon zato. The cynic had temporarily abandoned his tub "to see a man." He was not looking for an honest man, but for a man in whom honesty, along with other qualities, could be found. Honesty was not what Diogones was in search of. It was manhood.

The Compass.

Many people look upon the compass as an introduction of the fifteenth century, but it seems to have been well known in a primitive form in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. In one of the popular songs written in the time of King John, it is said that the sailors who go on long voyages to Friesland or to the East know their way by observing the Tramontane or Polar star; but, when the sky is covered with clouds, and they could no longer see the stars of heaven, they took a needle of iron and put it through a piece of cork, so that one end remained out, which they rubbed with a loadstone, and then they placed it in a vessel full of water, and, whichever way the end of the needle pointed, there, without any doubt, was the Polar star. This formed a primitive but fairly perfect mariner's compass.

Alum-Tanned Leather.

In Hungary and other countries in Europe, alum-tanned leather, said to be equal to bark-tanned, is used to a considerable extent for harness. The process, it is said, may be completed in 24 hours. Heavy ox or cow-hides, fresh from the slaughter-house, are first well washed in salt and water to remove the blood, and then laid on the beam, flesh side up, and well scraped. The hide is then placed on a small beam, the hair removed, after which it is placed in a tanning solution of salt and alum; the hide is well saturated with this, and then rolled up, and the liquid is heated and poured over the hide. This process is continued for twenty-four hours.

Evils Among Young Men.

Of all the evils prevalent among young men, we know of none more blighting in its moral effects than to speak lightly of the virtues of a woman. Nor is there anything in which young men are so thoroughly mistaken as in the low estimate they form of the integrity of women. Not of their own mothers and sisters, but of others, who, they forget, are somebody else's mothers and sisters. As a rule, no person who surrenders to this debasing habit is to be trusted with an enterprise requiring integrity of character. Plain words should be spoken on the subject, for the evil is a general one and deep rooted. If young men are sometimes thrown into the society of thoughtless and depraved women, they have no more right to measure all other women by what they see of these, than they have to estimate the character of honest and respectable citizens by the developments of crime in our police courts. Let our young men remember that their chief happiness in life depends on utter faith in women. No worldly wisdom, no misanthropic philosophy, no generalization can weaken truth. It stands like the record of itself—for it is nothing less than this—and should put an everlasting seal upon lips that are wont to speak lightly of women.

Hints to Farmers.

Don't let your horses be seen standing much at the tavern door; it don't look right. Don't be without Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment near at hand to apply in case of accident. Keep good fences—especially line fences; it promotes good feelings among neighbors. Keep Downs' Elixir always in the house, and use in cases of sudden coughs, &c., as a safeguard against consumption and other dangerous diseases. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, taken according to directions, saves large expense in doctor's bills.

Mysteries of a Lump of Coal.

For years no one had supposed that a lump of soft coal, dug from its mine or bed in the earth, possessed any other purpose than that of fuel. It was next found that it would afford a gas which was combustible. Chemical analysis proved it to be made of hydrogen. In process of time mechanical and chemical ingenuity devised a mode of manufacturing this gas, and applying it to the lighting of buildings and cities on a large scale. In doing this, other products of distillation were developed, until step by step the following ingredients are extracted from it: An excellent oil to supply lighthouses, equal to the best sperm oil, at lower cost. Benzole—a light sort of ethereal fluid, which evaporates easily, and, combined with vapor or moist air, is used for the purpose of portable gas lamps, so called. Naphtha—a heavy fluid, useful to dissolve gutta percha and India rubber; an excellent oil for lubricating purposes. Asphaltum—which is a black, solid substance, used in making varnishes, covering roofs, and covering over vaults. Paraffine—a white crystalline substance resembling white wax, which can be made into beautiful wax candles; it melts at a temperature of 110 degrees, and affords an excellent light. All these substances are now made from soft coal.

Cure for Small-Pox and Scarlet Fever.

The following small-pox remedy was given to the public by a correspondent of the Stockton (Cal.) Herald, who says: "I herewith append a recipe which has been used, to my knowledge, in hundreds of cases. It will prevent or cure small-pox, though the pittings are filling. It will also cure scarlet fever. Here is the recipe as I have used it to cure my children of scarlet fever; here it is as I have used it to cure small-pox. When learned physicians said the patient must die, it cured. Sulphate of zinc, one grain; foxglove, (digitalis), one grain; half a teaspoonful of sugar. Mix with two teaspoonfuls of water. When thoroughly mixed add four ounces of water. Take a teaspoonful every hour. Either disease will disappear in twelve hours. For a child, small doses according to their age. If countries would compel physicians to use this, there would be no need of pest-houses. If you value advice and experience, use this for that terrible disease."

THE RING AS A SYMBOL.—The ring was part of the insignia of royalty, like the scepter and crown in ancient times. When Pharaoh raised Joseph to the highest possible dignity in Egypt—only himself on the the throne being greater than his minister—he took the ring from his own hand and gave it to the young Hebrew in token of the authority bestowed upon him as a ruler over all the land of Egypt. When Haman, weary of seeing Mordecai sitting at the gate, obtained the permission of Ahasuerus to carry into execution his vile scheme for slaying all the Jews in the provinces, he received the king's ring as his warrant; and it was with the ring that he directed all official letters to be sealed. The present use of the ring as a keepsake and a marriage token are simply relics of of the significance, prestige and power that were associated with the ring.

English Fox Hunting.

There are in England and Scotland no less than 168 separate packs of fox hounds, numbering between them an aggregate of 6,000 couples of hounds. It is difficult to assess the cost of keeping these packs. A writer in Baily's Magazine, so far back as 1786, puts the total expense for the season of hunting a county three days a week at £1,348 14s. The Earl of Wilton, nearer the present time, increases the estimate to £1,625, with an additional £300 if a huntsman be kept. The Cotswold Hunt has of late been costing £2,500 per annum, and there is no doubt that the former figures must be largely raised to meet the enhanced cost of wages and horse-flesh. Let the average cost of each of the above packs be but £800 per annum, which is certainly below the truth, even then their annual cost is £134,400. But the money actually spent on the pack is as nothing compared to that which is put in circulation by those who join in the sport, in hotel and railway expenses, wages, and many subsidiary charges. Giving 150 horsemen to each chase, and reckoning that 140 packs in England alone hunt four days per week, and it is calculated that the sport of fox hunting costs the country [illegible] 00,000 a year, or five millions of [illegible]

A Secret for Housekeepers.

A sort of trade-secret among upholsters, it is said, is this recipe for ridding furniture of moths: A set of furniture that seemed to be alive with larvæ, and from which hundreds of these pests had been picked and brushed, was set into a room by itself. Three gallons of benzine were purchased, at 30 cents a gallon, retail. Using a small watering pot with a fine rose sprinkler, the whole upholstery was saturated through with benzine. Result: Every moth, larvæ and egg, was killed. The benzine dried out in a few hours, and its entire odor disappeared in three or four days. Not the slightest harm happened to the varnish, or wood, or fabric, or hair-stuffing. That was months ago, and not a sign of a moth has since appeared. The carpets were also well sprinkled all round the sides of the room, with equally good effect. For furs, flannels—indeed all woolen articles containing moths—benzine is most valuable. Put them in a box, sprinkle with benzine, close the box tightly, and in a day or two the pests will be exterminated, and the benzine will all evaporate on opening. In using benzine great care should be taken that no fire is near by, as the stuff, in fluid or vapor form, is very inflammable.

Fate of the Shenandoah.

Everybody has heard of the Shenandoah, the notorious privateer of the Southerners of the American civil war; but I do not suppose that many know what was the ultimate fate of the ship when the war ended. Of all places in the world, she now lies "fathomless" on the island of Socotra, in the Arabian gulf. Her story is a strange one. She was busy burning whalers in Behring Straits, when Waddell, her commander, the "mildest mannered man who ever scuttled ship or cut throat," heard of the collapse of the South. His occupation being gone, and being without hope or harbor to which he dare with safety return, he ran the Shenandoah to Liverpool, and immediately surrendered her to Her Majesty's ship Donegal, in the Mersey. She was handed over to the American consul, and afterwards bought at auction by Nicol, Fleming & Co.—a firm that has earned a notoriety in connection with the City of Glasgow Bank—for the sultan of Zanzibar. After remaining idle at Zanzibar for some years, she was sent to Bombay for repairs, but foundered off Socotra, all hands being lost except one Englishman and a few Lascars.

Nothing surpasses the purity and efficiency of American Ball-Blue in imparting to your washing an immaculate clearness. All grocers have it.

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and dullness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

Gen. Grant's chances for being placed on the retired list are not very flattering just at present.

Our Michigan legislators at Lansing are getting down to work in good earnest. New bills are pouring in every day.

The editorial work involved in knocking over imaginary cabinets is drawing to a close. It can last only five weeks longer

Jeff. Davis has finished his book, and it will soon be issued by the Appletons. We shall then have an official history of the "Lost Cause."

Under the new apportionment bill reported by S. S. Cox, Michigan will gain one member of Congress. Texas will gain four members and New York will lose two. The gains will all be in the Western and Southern states.

Nothing would seem to be easier than the formation of a new cabinet. But President Garfield is having a great deal of trouble in selecting his; or rather the newspapers are having a great deal of trouble in doing it for him.

Gen. Grant and Gen. Hancock are both bound to keep in the presidential race. The former has been elected President of the World's Fair Commission, and the latter has been chosen President of the National Rifle Association.

Japan has just completed a new railroad—rolling stock, buildings, &c., included—which cost only twenty thousand dollars per mile. The greenest stock-jobber in Wall street could give our Japanese neighbors a lesson in railroad building. Their railroads must cost more than that.

It is said that the newspapers of the country have selected over four hundred different individuals for Garfield's Cabinet, and we presume that the service in every case has been rendered gratuitously. Such an exhibition of disinterested zeal in promoting the public welfare is very rarely met with.

The Young Men's Christian association of Cleveland, in three months, raised $25,000, and has purchased a handsome building to be used for its purposes. It will be fitted up with a bowling alley, gymnasium and other adjuncts of muscular Christianity, besides rooms for social entertainments, study and prayer.

The great obelisk was swung into position in Central Park on Saturday last at exactly twelve o'clock. The preparations were complete and at two minutes before twelve, nautical time, Commander Gorringe gave the signal to his men, and the vast shaft, containing two hundred and nineteen and one quarter tons, began to rise.—The entire operation of swinging the obelisk from a horizontal to a perpendicular position, including a little delay for taking a photograph when half way up, consumed only five minutes.

He also threw a quantity in the faces of Mrs. Rever's brother, named Holmes, and Holmes' wife, who had come to her assistance. All were horribly burned.

Three passenger cars of the eastbound express train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad were thrown from the track by a broken rail, near Pond Creek, Ill. One of the cars was burned, and Mrs. Kirby, of Nevada, Ohio, was so badly burned that she died in a few hours. Several other persons were seriously if not fatally hurt.

A mob of masked men went to the residence of Noah Anderson, near Carlisle, Ky., and being refused admittance, broke the door down. As they entered, Anderson began firing on them. The mob returned the fire, and instantly killed Anderson. Sam. Anderson, Noah's son, rushed to his father's rescue and was fatally wounded in the region of the heart. It is said that Anderson mistreated his family, and the mob had gone to his house to whip him for it. The members of the mob are unknown.

Frederick Kester, for the murder of his wife in August, 1879, was hanged in the jail yard at Danville, Ill., last Friday. He died without a struggle. His crime was bloody and unprovoked. He had been married but a year, and had constantly maltreated his wife, so that her father threatened to take her from him. This threat enraged him, and taking a gun, he shot his wife. The shot failed to kill her, and he took an ax and beat her brains out. He then dragged her body to some tall weeds, mounted a horse and fled the country. He was captured in Iowa. He denied his guilt to the last moment.

The storm in the Eastern States, occurring on the 20th inst., is reported to have been one of the most disastrous known in the history of the telegraph companies. Communication by wire with New York was practically cut off. Messages had to be carried by trains, and by relays of horses to points from which they could be telegraphed. The wires lay on the ground in the streets of New York, or were thrown about in such a manner as to make walking dangerous. In case of a fire it would have been impossible to summon the fire companies. The City Hall Tower gave way under the weight of the ice, and the greatest damage has been done to property.

A dispatch from Buenos Aryes, dated January 20, says: "The Chilians attacked and completely defeated the Peruvian army at Miraflores. General Pierola, President of Peru, and Commander-in-chief of the Army, has fled. The Chilians occupied Lima, the capital, without resistance on the 17th inst. Later intelligence, however, states that General Pedera's brother and the Peruvian Minister of War were taken prisoners. The Peruvian loss in the battle at Charella, is said to have been 7,000 killed and 2,000 prisoners. Twenty-five thousand Peruvians were engaged in the battle at Miraflores. The Chilian loss in both battles is heavy. The diplomatic body at Lima have urged a conclusion of the armistice, and ask that the person of Senor Pierola be respected."

Whittaker and his lacerated ears have cost Uncle Sam a sorry sum. The Court of Inquiry which sat upon his case cost $4,[illegible]. The principal items of expense incurred during the inquiry were experts and counsels' fees, detectives' charges, reporting, and photographing. United States Di[illegible]t Attorney Townsend charged and receive[illegible] 164. The four experts charged from $25 to $100 each per day, and were paid altogether 1,250. The detectives' bills for services and expenses amounted to $525. The photographing cost $95, and the stenographer charged $1,056 for his verbatim report of the proceedings. As a court-martial has been ordered in the case, this festive youth will probably cost the tax-payers $10,000 additional; and still the colored problem will remain unsettled.

A Dayton (O.) correspondent reports a strange case. A young girl, thirteen years of age, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, was born in Montevideo, S. A., and at the age of two years, with her parents came to North America. When they crossed the equator, the child, who had been unusually healthy and bright, was thrown into a fit, which lasted three days. Since that event, on the same day of each recurring year, the child has lost at least the use of some faculty, or some faculty already impaired became further impaired. This year she lost the power of speech. To all appearances the girl is healthy and bright enough, but in fact is nearly senseless, helplessly weak, and at times can not swallow. Physicians of Dayton and Baltimore have been baffled in their attempt to diagnosticate the disease.

Commencing January 1, the Treasury Department has been paying 50 per cent. in notes, 40 per cent. in gold, and 10 per cent. in silver coin on all disbursements made from the cash room in the Treasury. This rule is only temporary in consequence of there being a scarcity of notes.

The plan adopted for the Congressional Library Building provides for a rectangular structure 450 by 300 feet, with a height, divided into two stories. The style of architecture is a modified form of the French Renaissance, and the building when completed will cost about $3,000,000.

Some time ago Mosby, our representative in China, applied to Secretary Evarts for leave to come home. Evarts refused. Mosby has written to a gentleman in Virginia that he is coming any way. He is reported as saying that he is all right with Garfield, but don't care a button for Hayes.

The messenger bringing the Electoral vote of Ohio received $121. The lowest paid to any messenger was $10.50, to Maryland. The Oregon messenger got $963. The New York messenger is entitled to $93.25, but John Jacob Astor delivered the vote of that State and has never called for his mileage.

The nomination of Colonel John W. Finnell to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the Sixth District of Kentucky, vice Winfield Holden, the present Collector, has occasioned considerable comment in revenue circles, where Mr. Holden is regarded as an efficient officer. The Woman's Suffrage Association have adopted resolutions in which they assert that both political parties are divided on finance, free trade and labor reform, and hence, from their view, the only party that may expect to triumph in the Presidential election of 1884 is the party that places Woman's Suffrage in the platform. They further resolve that they are opposed to exempting clergy and church property from taxation and making laboring men and women bear the added burden.

Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll does not look favorably upon the Refunding Act. He says a long 3 per cent. bond might float, but a short one will not. He says the bond ought to be made in such a shape that the poor people would find a safe and convenient channel through it for the investment of their savings. He wanted the poor to be encouraged in economy. "That country is blessed," says Ingersoll, "where the rich are extravagant and the poor economical. The economical rich man is a curse and a pest."

Delegates representing the various leading commercial organizations of the country met in convention last week with a view to taking steps looking to the passage of a bankrupt law by Congress. The Convention passed resolutions unanimously agreeing upon the necessity for the immediate passage by Congress of a uniform bankrupt law, and indorsed the bill drafted by Judge Lowell, of Boston, which is now pending before the Judiciary Committees of both houses of Congress. Some amendments to Judge Lowell's bill were proposed and referred to the Committee.

Speaker Randall has laid the following before the House, received from Secretary Evarts: "I have the honor to inform you that I have received a letter from Benj. F. Stevens, dispatch agent of the United States at London, stating he is authorized to sell to the State Department the Henry Stevens Franklin collection of manuscripts and books." The letter is accompanied by a detailed list of the manuscripts and books, and a descriptive letter from Mr. Stevens, in which he states the manuscripts are original papers relative chiefly to public affairs, bequeathed by Benj. Franklin to his grandson, Wm. Temple Franklin. The price asked is $25,000.

Damages by flood in the Thames River are estimated at £2,000,000. Dispatches from London say the aspect of that city is amazing. No one remembers any such scenes as are presented, and they are indeed almost indescribable. Vehicular traffic is entirely abandoned. Omnibuses and cabs have ceased attempting to run. The only method of transportation is by the Underground Railroad, and the elevated road on the Surrey side of the river. The scenes at the stations of the Underground Railroad are those of immense crowds endeavoring to force their way into the cars, which are packed, despite the regulations of the company, far beyond their safe capacity. The tide in the Thames is the highest ever known. The docks at Black Friar's Bridge, Lambeth, and in the southern districts of London, on the Surry side, are overflowing through the violence of the gales and the unprecedented rise in the river. Telegrams from all provincial towns along the sea cost report numerous disasters to shipping and the property along the shore. Numerous wrecks, attended with loss of life in several instances, are reported around the coast. On the east coast the storm is so violent that it is impossible to render help to the shipwrecked crews.

Several fine pianos have been recently purchased by Tecumseh parties. Miss Gussie Burlingame, Art Rice and John Fisher purchasing Steinway's and Henry Holdermann an upright from Gabler.

IRELAND.

A Record of Her Internal Disturbances

The Catholic Bishops of Donegal, Meath and Killala have taken seats beside the Traversers in the State trials.

The distress in County Clare is worse than last year and the Lord Lieutenant has ordered a presentment to the Court of Sessions for the organization of relief works.

A dispatch from Rome says the Pope has sent a request to Archbishop McCabe, of Dublin, to immediately publish throughout Ireland the recent papal letter concerning the agitation there. The Pope expresses regret that, contrary to his instructions, the publication of the letter has been delayed.

The British Government is said to be fully aware that there is existing dangerous conspiracies among Irishmen in several of the large towns of England.

County Clare and several baronies of Sligo have been declared in a state of disturbance.

At a meeting of the Land League in Dublin, Davitt said there was a magnificent representative organization in America, far beyond reach of flying columns or coertion acts.

In the Court of Queen's Bench, L. P. Dillon, of counsel for the Traversers, speaking on behalf of Gordon and Boyton, asked the jury to acquit them, and thus rejoice greater Ireland beyond the seas. Mr. Sullivan, M. P., also of the counsel for the defense, followed on behalf of P. Eagan. He drew a picture of the harsh laws passed since the Union, and of the sufferings by famine. Some of the audience wept. He called upon the jury to acquit the Traversers, and thereby condemn the so-called Liberal Ministers, who have been hounded on by the London press. The court-room was crowded with spectators.

Sullivan appealed to the jury not to incur the obloquy that Gladstone asked them to at the time when he was preparing measures of land reform to obtain for himself fresh glory and power.

At the close of his speech the audience cheered loudly, and a lady threw a boquet to Sullivan.

Heron, replying for the Crown, said the jury had to decide that Socialism should not obtain a footing in Western Europe, and asserted that the Traversers had preached sedition and murder.

It is stated that Mr. Condon, of Lisburn, has received several cases of rifles and ammunition for distribution among the Orangemen, who drill nightly in Orange Hall.

A Matrimonial Shylock.

A clerk in a leading business house of this city became so involved that he needed $500 to extricate himself from the difficulty. By some means he discovered that a table girl at one of the hotels had by hard work saved up a considerable sum of money and to her he applied for a loan. This was readily granted, and a note with interest and a day of payment, only some months in the future, was executed in acknowledgement of the same. The time came and with it the same chronic inability on the part of the maker to pay it. He pleaded for an extension of time, but this the waiter maiden refused utterly to grant, and informed him that he must either pay the sum at once or marry her. The woman was about forty years old, and much more than correspondingly ugly, so that the debtor demurred against the imposition of such hard terms. The woman, however, was non-relenting. With her it was either the money or a husband, and, on the whole, she seemed quite anxious to choose the latter. When the hero saw the gravity of the situation he perceived no way to escape it, and finally capitulated, and the marriage was performed. The man belongs to a good family, and is said to be greatly humiliated by the condition in which he so unwillingly finds himself, in being allied by force to a woman so inferior to himself in social position and intellect. The woman, however, was so well pleased that she rented and furnished a house and was ready for business before the wedding day.—Indianapolis News.

ALLIE WARREN has returned home from LaGrange, Indiana, where she has been for several months past.

QUITE a number of Tecumseh's young people will attend the grand masquerade at Dundee to-morrow evening.

THE Burlington Hawkeye man will positively lecture in Tecumseh on Friday evening, Feb. 4th. Subject—The Rise and Fall of the Mustache.

THE remains of Dr. Henry Stocking, a son of Charles Stocking, of this place, were brought to Tecumseh from his home in Illinois yesterday for interment.

THE landlords, Sink and Emery, at their respective hotels, last Monday night loaded their tables with eatables that did the dancing party's eyes good to look at.

WE receive notice just before going to press that Litta's concert, in Adrian which was appointed for this evening has been postponed on account of Litta's sickness.

THE old Clinton Exchange has been purchased by Frank Silvers, and he will hereafter act as "mine host" on the corner. Frank is just the man to keep a good hotel.

LAVERN WHEELER returned home from Chicago last Tuesday on account of the severe illness of his mother.—Lavern is busy at work in painting, and has a good birth.

DR. E. M. CONKLIN, having returned from Cincinnati where he has been attending medical lectures for several months, and having procured a number of new books and instruments, Dr. C. has reopened his office in Usborne's block, near the HERALD building, where he is now prepared to attend to professional calls as usual.

THE Ladies' Society of St. Peter's church will meet at Mrs. A. Rice's, Thursday evening, Feb. 3d. Sleighs will leave Mrs. Whedon's, on Ottawa street, at seven o'clock sharp, to convey all who wish to go. A general invitation is extended. Beside the usual entertainment afforded, doughnuts and coffee will be sold.

A NEW firm has been organized in Tecumseh under the name of Primrose & McKinney, for the purpose of manufacturing carriages. They occupy the shops of G. W. Griffith, on Pearl street. We are glad to learn of the enterprise, and as both members of the firm are experienced workmen in the trade, they have fair prospects.

THE last issue of the Morenci Observer comes to us very much improved in appearance. Bro. Allen has evidently discarded his Chicago patent outsides and thus substituted two or three columns of State and county news for the same amount of foreign advertising. This arrangement will not only improve the typographical appearance of the Observer but will also be very acceptable to its readers.

MONDAY evening a party of fifty or more couples from Adrian took advantage of the excellent sleighing and visited Tecumseh. The Opera House was opened where the party together with a number of the young people of this place passed a merry time in dancing. Hunt's orchestra was present in full force and contributed much to the enjoyment of the evening. We hope that the social relations between Tecumseh and Adrian may be enhanced by similar frequent visits.

DR. J. C. AYER & Co., of Lowell, Mass., have favored us with a complete edition of their Almanacs for 1881, neatly bound in one volume. Turning to its contents we find ourselves prepared to discuss the weather with our afternoon callers in English, German, Dutch, Norwegian, Swedish, French, Spanish, Portuguese, and Bohemian. We have as yet only perused the English version, and to it we are pleased to give our unqualified endorsement. Though Ayer's Almanac has long been recognized as a standard American work, yet it makes its advent each year with all the vigor and freshness of a first appearance, and is received with a hearty welcome by millions, from the rising to the setting sun. We commend it to our readers as a work replete with instructive and valuable information.

Prof. Wedeles Music Class.

Although but a short time in our midst, Prof. Wedeles has succeeded in procuring already quite a number of pupils, among whom are the names of our best talent, and is now fairly started. A thorough musician and a master pianist and organist, we do not doubt the Professor will make it a grand success. A good instructor is what Tecumseh wanted for a long while, and the Professor's arrival and permanent location among us, must be highly gratifying to our musical people. Prof. Wedeles will shortly introduce a series of parlor concerts, with his pupils, and a rare treat of fine entertainments is in store for those receiving invitations. Prof. Wedeles will also start a class in Clinton shortly, and our musical people ought not miss the rare occasion in taking instructions. All orders left at Sink's hotel office will be promptly attended too.

City and University Matters.

ANN ARBOR, Jan. 24, 1881.

EDITOR HERALD:

Everything at the University moves on in its accustomed round of life and vigor, imparting, as it ever has, strength and activity to the town itself. Ann Arbor is a place of seven or eight thousand inhabitants, well located, and possesses fine facilities for manufacturing and shipping; but notwithstanding this, it falls very far short of what is called a business town. The streets of Tecumseh present on an average an appearance of thrift and business activity that compares very favorably, to say the least, with what is seen here. The University is really the soul of the place, the real center of life.

The present college year thus far has passed away very quietly; there have been no disturbances of any kind on the part of the students against the citizens, as of previous years. The annual examination in the literary department will commence next week. The second semester will begin about February 14.

The roll of students now in the University, in all departments, foots up to 1,515; the largest number that was ever here before. Nothing can be more indicative of success in the management of the University and of the strength of its reputation, than to see its attendance constantly on the increase. The improvements made during last year also point toward the same way. A new museum building was erected at a cost of about $40,000. It is a fire proof building, constructed after the most approved style of workmanship; it is a beautiful structure, and it adds very much to the appearance of the grounds. The laobratory building was raised one story to meet the demands in that department.

Among the students the question of erecting a gymnasium is an important one, and it also engages the support of many of the professors.

At the late meeting of the Regents, the subject of a new library building was discussed; a paper setting forth the needs of such a building was read by Prof. Dunster. A committee also reported that it could not be put up for less than $100,000. STUDENT.

THE HAWKEYE MAN.

R. J. Burdette, the Burlington Hawkeye man, will appear before a Tecumseh audience at the Opera House on Friday evening of next week, Feb. 4th. Bob Burdette, as he is familiarly called, is without doubt, the best humorous lecturer now on the platform. He has the drollery of Josh Billings, the witticism of Artemus Ward, and the literary polish of Mark Twain. As he has never lectured in Tecumseh, he will have a full house. Subject: "The Rise and Fall of the Mustache." From a lot of favorable press notices we select the following:

Brooklyn, (N.Y.) Argus: It abounds in sparkling humor and domestic pictures, presented in refined language and constantly varying shades of expression and color, that show close observation of life and a marvelous faculty for reproducing its various phases for the enjoyment of others.

Steuben, (N. Y.) Courier: Robert J. Burdette, the Hawkeye man, delivered one of the finest lectures our people were ever favored with, on Friday evening last. As a humorist, he is justly entitled to the reputation he bears.

Elmira (N. Y.) Advertiser: From the beginning, Mr. Burdette takes possession of the listener, and holds him by his witty sayings, quaint remarks, dry suggestions, preposterous fancies, droll ideas, pathos and unassuming eloquence.

Elmira (N. Y.) Gazette: There were many earnest words, and now and then a touch of real pathos that sobered every one for the moment and brought tears to the eyes.

Fulton (N. Y.) Times: One of the most genial, good-natured, and sparkling humorists, and the most quoted paragrapher of this rapid age.

Boston Traveller: Mr. Burdette has a keen wit, a happy faculty for seizing upon the "attackable" side of things; but his best hold is the geniality of his humor. "The Rise and Fall of the Mustache" is a beautiful sketch, in which humor and pathos and sweet tender feelings are blended.

Chicago (Ill.) Tribune: There is no difficulty in telling where the laugh should come in. It finds its way at the proper places without any promptings of its owner. Indeed it is impossible to prevent it breaking out in uproarious cachinations when Mr. Burdette is at his funniest, and that is nearly all the time. There is a perpetual flow of drolleries from his imagination which amazes one of the extraordinary prolificness and exhaustibility of the fountain.

"The Lenawee county farmers' club is expected, under the administration of its new president, to get a Laing first rate for the next year."

Well, it ought to, as it has a Strong secretary, and there is plenty of Cole, and an excellent Cook among the vice presidents. Quick Sayles is the motto of the executive committee, and if the officers don't do their duty, the members can give 'em Helme most any time.

The "Uncle Tom" Christmas matinee at Powers' drew a good house, and the audience seemed to enjoy the performance thoroughly. At the closing presentation in the evening the house was packed from pit to dome, the standing room even being all occupied. The acting was better than at any previous performance, and the audience expressed its approbation with frequent and hearty applause.—Daily Democrat, Grand Rapids.

the Opera House last night before a large audience. The play was elaborately mounted, and was considerably longer than any previous representation; in fact, rather too long, becoming in parts tedious. Three hours and a half is a strain upon the good nature of any audience, and the piece should be extremely well done to send every one home well pleased. With this one exception, the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Stevens Combination was perhaps the best yet produced here. The characters were well acted, and numerous accessories of an unusual kind were introduced. The escape across the ice pursued by real blood hounds, was an exciting incident, the appearance of the fierce brutes, which were muzzled, however, sending a shudder through the audience. The jubilee singers appeared at appropriate intervals, and sang very well, being liberally encored. A novel feature was the appearance of "Marks," riding on a real donkey, which was trained to many amusing tricks. The cotton picking scene, to music by the jubilees, was another novelty not shown by any previous troupe. In the course of the evening an apology was tendered for their failure to introduce a steamboat on account of the limited stage accommodations. A train of cars has been before the footlights here, but they were telescopic. The performance, altogether, offered an almost infinite variety, and seemed to please the audience greatly. It will be repeated to-night.—Daily News, St. Catharines, Ont.

Nothing new was developed, unless it be that her husband and his partner Mr. Bennett say that they never intimated or thought that she was or is insane. They believe thoroughly in her innocence, and Mr. Barnard, being wealthy, will make a desperate fight for her acquittal of the terrible charge. A Mrs. Carnhart, living on the road between Mr. Curtiss' house and the Baptist church, says she saw a woman pass her house last Sunday evening in an excited condition and heard her exclaim, "I have fixed her! I have finished her!" Mr. Bennett has left for home.

A span is reckoned by three and five-eighths inches.

A shekel of silver was about sixty-two and one-half cents.

Great Pyramid of Egypt.

An English architect, Mr. Tite, has been figuring up the cost of the great pyramid near Gizeh. Its original dimensions at the base were 764 square feet, and it has a perpendicular height of 488 feet, covering four acres, one rod, twenty-two perches of ground. It consumed 78,028,000 cubic feet of stone; and Mr. Tite adds that it could not now be built for less than £30,000,000. The joints of the large casing blocks of granite were so fine as to be scarcely perceptible, not thicker than paper, and the mortar was so adhesive that the stones, in some cases, broke through their substance rather than give way at their jointing. The cost, therefore, of this structure, reduced to federal currency, was $145,200,000, a sum large enough to build and put in running order six good substantial railroads between New York and the Atlantic and San Francisco on the Pacific.

A farmer in Ohio was annoyed by his sheep getting into a field of grain; each time he drove them out he was unsuccessful in finding an opening through which they got in, the fence being too high, he thought, for them to jump over, so he concluded to watch them, and to his astonishment, he saw a large buck leave the flock and place himself by the side of the fence, then one after the other of his companions run up to him, leaped upon his back and over the fence into the field; the buck was the only one in the flock that could get over without the assistance of a "foot-stool." Is this more than instinct? Have not animals a language of their own?

Narcotism From Nutmegs.

The fact that nutmegs have strong narcotic properties has long been known, but they are in such common use as a favorite condiment used in small quantites that their dangerous nature when taken in large quantity is apt to be overlooked and forgotten, even by those aware of their tendency.

A physician reports, in one of our medical exchanges, a case where a lady patient during his absence was induced by her old woman nurse to take nutmeg tea. One and a half nutmegs were used in making the tea, and the patient drank the whole of the decoction during the day. About 10 o'clock at night she began to get drowsy, and 4 o'clock the next morning she was in a profound stupor. At 10 o'clock the next morning the narcotic effects of the nutmegs began to wear off, and by 4 p. m. she had pretty well recovered. The symptoms were about the same as those produced by opium, and the remedies given were the same.

Nutmegs in the quantity of two or three drachms have been known to produce both stupor and delirium; and dangerous and fatal consequences are said to have followed its free use in Inda. Mace, which is the outside covering of the nutmeg, possesses essentially the same properties.

The first American patent for an invention was issued to Samuel Hopkins, at New York, July 31st, 1790, for an improved process of making potash and pearlash. The present possessor is E. T. Hale, of Columbus, Ohio. It is written on a piece of parchment in a round, old-fashioned hand, signed by George Washington, and certified by Edmund Randolph, Attorney General, as being conformable to the act of congress to promote the useful arts, and its delivery to the grantee is certified by Thos. Jefferson, with the seal of the United States.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

DRY CORN FODDER vs. ENSILAGE.

It is but seldom we have a word against the system of preserving fodder in silos, but a correspondent of the Country Gentleman, writing from Long Branch, expresses a decidedly adverse opinion, and also gives his method of curing cornstalk fodder. He says: "I have no silo, nor do I want any. My cattle do well enough on my system of feeding. Corn fodder costs me very little comparatively. The land is plowed, harrowed and furrowed out in rows 3½ feet apart; manure is spread in the furrows, and three to four bushels of White Southern corn is sowed in the furrows on top of the manure, and then covered by a chain harrow dragged over the field. One pair of horses will cover an acre in an hour. When the corn is well up I run a plow between the rows and earth the corn up a little. This is all it costs until fit to cut. I commence cutting as soon as it begins to show tassels, as I think when younger it is not so profitable. I obtained 20 two-horse loads to the acre last fall. I cut it up, putting six rows in stacks, making them quite large. When their arms were filled the men took it direct to the stack; when large enough I tied the top of the stack as tight as I could bind it with a small hay band, first having a large rope made with a noose in it, which I drew around the stack and drew it together tight. The stacks remained in the field until November. Rains did not injure and when carted in it was quite green and bright, much better than any sour kraut ever put in a barrel or silo. I am only giving you my experience. My cattle, sheep and horses show its value for themselves, and my neighbors, who never before believed in corn fodder, will testify to its value.

The corn fodder leaves the land in a clean condition, and the fodder is clean, without weeds or any dirt to poison the manure heap. The mangel-wurzel is one of the best crops which can be grown on a farm, in my opinion and in my practice. I cut them with a pulper and mix with corn fodder cut fine, and a little bran and salt mixed through the whole. I would like to see a silo man show his fodder do as much good. Ensilage, in my opinion, is fancy farming, and of less value than any other new thing that has yet come out. We want, for food for ourselves, bread, meat and vegetables; we want food that has heat in it; we do not want sour kraut or green vegetables. Why should we feed hay in grass form in winter? Why should we feed our green corn fodder to our trotting or running horses? Would it not end in colic, or something worse?

I had a letter from a gentleman, a few days ago, who is building a large barn in a 10-acre lot. It is to be fitted up with the best of everything, and, above all, a silo! He asked me what I thought of it. The above is my opinion of it. If he will spend as much money on raising roots and dried corn fodder; get a good pulper and cornstalk cutter, he will save 50 per cent.; he will increase his butter yield fully 50 per cent., and I venture to say that his calves or foals will be 50 per cent. better. Who will dare say that swill is as good feed for cattle as dry food, with plenty of good clean drink? I would like to know in what way ensilage is better than swill. Let others try then; I will keep on, and for any one who wants to see the result of my practice, I always have an open door, and will be glad to see him. I will show him the proof—the churn product.—Michigan Farmer.

PROF. BEAL ON AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS.

At a recent meeting of the farmers of Connecticut, at New Britain, about two hundred farmers were present, and a number of farm products were exhibited, including 45 varieties of corn, 200 plates of apples, samples of Amber cane syrup, and ensilage. In connection with the subject of agricultural schools, Prof. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural College, made the following remarks: "The success of an agricultural college is more or less according to the extent and quality of the training given to its students. The future life work of the students will be according to the circumstances of their selection. According to the old view of agriculture in our country, a farmer needs no education, or but very little. It is true that we now find many ignorant men who make money and a good living on a farm, but they owe much of this ability to other educated men who use improved implements of all kinds, improved modes of cultivation and management of crops, and improved breeding of domestic animals. They are under great obligation, whether they are willing to admit it or not, to the men of culture and progress. And yet they are the very men who complain most about paying taxes to support education. Some of the most successful farmers are the learned men of other occupations who took up farming for recreation or as a business. Their previous business training has fitted them for farm work; and although the so-called fancy farmers do often fail, and are subject to the derision of practical farmers, yet they do much to advance agriculture by making many experiments for the benefit of those who will not make them themselves.

Agricultural papers, which are growing better every year, agricultural schools, the grange, farmers' clubs and institutes, are doing much to arouse zeal and enthusiasm in farming, and should be well sustained. If a greater proportion of the farmers were better educated, it would give more character to the business. Brain work pays the best for the time given to it, and there must be method to develop the intellect."

Cultivate More Turnips.

We all know the value of the turnip crop to England. It has been asserted that the interest of their immense debt is annually paid by the product of this crop. As to the United States, we do not make half the use of the turnip we might do, by increasing the consumption of the root and improvement in the manner of its cultivation. The great want of our winter feed for cattle is succulence. We somewhat obviate this want by using cut feed moistened, but as a general thing hay and oats and corn and water form the bulk of cattle food. Carrots, potatoes, rutabagas and turnips are used at times, but to a very limited extent to what they might be.

One reason for this limited use may be in our old enemy, dear labor. In the culture of the carrot, for instance, there is a great amount of hand-work. As soon as the seeds are up, the plants must be thinned; and after every hoe-harrowing between the rows, hands must go over again to keep the rank weeds from smothering out the carrot plants. Carrots are excellent horse-feed; but few of us have this hand-labor to spare. It is so much easier to hoe corn in the hills both ways; although we know how nice it is to have carrots with corn, corn alone has to do the work.

Here is the same trouble with the turnip, though in a less degree to be sure. Every single turnip has to be handled in pulling; and then, after pulling, every one has to be gone over again and handled to take the tops off. If we could manage to do this by machinery, as we do so many other things, so as to get rid of this hand-labor business, no doubt the production would soon be doubled, and use be found for an immense number more than is dreamed of. This may come in time, for Yankee genius is equal to achievment in this direction.

Extirpating the Wild Carrot.

D. M., writing from Jamesville, New York, to the Country Gentlemen, gives his experience with wild carrots as follows:

"Thistles, quack or couch grass and daises are not to be compared to it when once it gets possession of the ground. It kills out all grass, and the seeds are so light that they are wafted by the wind in every direction. About eight years ago a few plants made their appearance in front of my premises, and soon some appeared in adjoining fields. They spread so rapidly that made up my mind to commence war upon them immediately. After a heavy rain I pulled them up by the roots. In two or three weeks I had a new crop to pull, but as fast as any blossomed I pulled them. The second year they appeared about as thick as the first, but now, after six or eight years' labor, I can pull all on my farm in one hour. But the question may be asked why I have not extirpated them? It is because my neighbors allow some plants to ripen on adjoining land, and the wind brings the seed upon mine. It is very annoying for any one who has taken pains to rid his premises of weeds to find foul seeds or thistles, carrots and daises brought upon his premises by winds. I wish that the same law that compels farmers to take care of unruly animals could be enforced in regard to foul weeds. Large fields and fewer cross fences will save a good many hours' labor in cutting bushes and weeds. I think the time is coming in our Eastern States when the arable land will be in one field and the pasture land in another."

Tuberculosis.

Prof. Otto Bollinger, of Munich University, joins the ranks of those who believe that tuberculosis is imparted to human beings by milk from diseased cows. Repeated experiments convince him that the decided contagious influence of the milk cannot be removed, even by boiling; and that while the tuberculosis of man is not identical with that of the cow, it is similar. He urges the necessity for rigid measures to exclude distempered cattle from dairies. This has been done by the associated dairy recently established at Munich. All the cows are subject to the closest medical supervision; and at the slightest indication of disease they are removed. This position is, however, stoutly disputed by many veterinary authorities of wide repute; and it is singular, if this theory be true, that half of mankind ate not troubled with unsound lungs. The subject is one of the gravest importance; and, while the doctors are disputing, milk producers and milk consumers alike can hardly be too careful as to the quality of milk consumed.

HOW TO WATER HORSES.—In very cold weather give one pailful at a time three times a day. This is enough unless you are working them regularly; then give a little more, but not to exceed four pailfuls a day. In warm weather when they are brought in, first sponge out the mouth and nostrils well with cold water. After a few spongings they will wait for it to be done. Then give them not to exceed one pailful apiece, and another after feeding, before commencing work. Don't let them go without long enough to make them want more than this. If allowed, a thirsty horse will drink too much when warm. A common 12-quart pail is here referred to.

We would advise all our readers who think of making a vegetable or flower garden this spring to send to D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., and get their valuable and beautiful Seed Annual. The house is entirely reliable, and if you wish to get exactly what you order you cannot do better than entrust your order to them.

FIFTH CONGRESS—THIRD SESSION.

SENATE.

A resolution was introduced instructing the Committee on Mines and Mining into the advisability of a change in the organization of the Treasury and other departments.

A discussion was held on Mr. Logan's joint resolution extending the franking privilege to all official business sent through the mails by Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress, and in all other respects to be under the limitation of existing laws, in the course of which reference was made to the abuses of the franking system.

The army appropriation bill was taken up, and Mr. Withers stated that as compared with the bill of last year, it showed a net increase of $262,000 in appropriations. The clause appropriating $125,000 to pay land grant railroads 50 per cent. of what the Quartermaster Department finds justly due them for transportation, to which the Senate Committee added the provision "That such payment shall be accepted as in full of all demands for said services," was discussed at length, Mr. Edmunds remarking that the trouble in laying down any rule of 50 per cent. was that the rights of the United States with reference to these roads varied in different cases.

A bill was passed providing for the payment of damages which may be occasioned to Indians on the Minnesota Reservations by the construction of reservoirs at the head waters of the Mississippi under the act of last year, and also providing that the appropriation heretofore made for the construction of a dam at Lake Winnibigoshish shall be applied immediately.

The resolution on the franking privilege was referred to the Committee on Postoffices.

During the consideration of the army bill Mr. Edmunds offered an amendment, which was adopted, to the effect that the payment for army transportation lawfully due such land grant railroads as have not received aid in government bonds shall be adjusted by the proper accounting officers in accordance with decisions of the Supreme Court in such cases under the land grant acts, but in no case shall more than 50 per cent. of the full amount of the service be paid until a final judicial decision shall be had in respect to each case in dispute, $125,000. With this modification the original amendment offered by Mr. Allison was agreed to. The other amendments were agreed to as reported from the committee.

A concurrent resolution was adopted instructing the Committee on Naval Affairs to confer with the Secretary of the Navy in reference to the unveiling of the statue of Admiral Farragut.

The Army Appropriation bill was adopted, and the Military Academy bill, which provides for an appropriation of $322,131, which was $72,307 less than the estimates, but exceeded the appropriation for 1880 by $5,901, was taken up and adopted.

The District Tramp bill was passed.

A House joint resolution appropriating $2,500 to defray the expenses of the International Sanitary Conference, was, after some discussion on constitutional law, agreed to.

HOUSE.

Mr. Blackburn offered a resolution providing for a select committee of five members to examine into the charges of abuses in the franking privilege, which was adopted, and Messrs. Converse, House, Phillips, Browne, and Robinson were appointed.

An amendment to the Indian Bill, appropriating $10,000 to defray the expenses of a commission of ten citizens, provided for in the act of 1859, and striking out the clause repealing all laws creating or authorizing such commission, was adopted by a vote of 87 to 78 in the Committee of the Whole, and rejected in the House by a vote of 116 to 119.

It was agreed that the speeches in the Committee of the Whole, on the pending amendment to the Funding Bill, should be limited to thirty minutes.

The amendment (Mr. Wood's) to fix the rate of interest at 3 per cent. on both bonds and notes was agreed to.

Mr. Haskell said, in the course of the debate, that there was not a Western man who dared to say that a solitary Westean national bank could continue business on the basis of 3 per cent. bonds, to which Mr. Wood answered that he could furnish letters from the Presidents of national banks in the West in which they declare they would gladly receive 3 per cent. bonds.

The funding bill was discussed in the Committee of the Whole, the pending amendment being that of Mr. Randall, authorizing the issue of bonds in an amount not exceeding $650,000,000, which shall bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. redeemable after blank years. To this another amendment was offered by Mr. Townshend fixing the amount of bonds at $400,000,000, and of notes $300,000,000. Then Mr. Randall modified his amendment so as to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds or certificates in amount not exceeding $650,000,000 at 3 per cent. redeemable at the pleasure of the Government after two years. Mr. Mills offered to amend this by making the bonds and certificates redeemable in one year and payable in two. After a long discussion the committee rose without further action.

A number of private bills were considered.

Mr. Springer took occasion to emphasize the necessity of creating a court for the hearing of all private claims.

Mr. Anderson obtained leave to change his amendment to the funding bill, and Mr. Townshend was granted leave to have his amendment printed, relieving certain articles of duty beyond a certain pe cent.

The Committee of the Whole discussed the first section of the funding bill, the pending amendment being that of Mr. Anderson, which provided for the retirement of the national bank notes, and for the issue of currency notes. This amendment was rejected by a vote of 40 to 108. Mr. Frye gave notice of a substitute which he proposed to offer for the first section, providing for the issue of bonds and Treasury notes to the amount of $620,000,000, bearing 3½ per cent. interest, and redeemable after one year. A number of amendments offered were rejected. A motion to strike out the fourth section of the bill, and insert an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to use not exceeding $50,000,000 of standard gold and silver coin in the redemption of 5 and 6 per cent. bonds, authorized to be refunded by this act, and to apply the surplus money in the Treasury to the redemption of bonds to be canceled, was adopted.

A CORRESPONDENT at Marysville, Ohio, under date of Jan. 18, writes: "The most fiendish murder ever occuring in this section was perpetrated last night, four miles north of Plain City, in this county. Shortly after dark, Robert Garnes, who lives with a family by the name of Scott, consisting of an old lady aged about ninety years, a young lady aged twenty, and a boy aged sixteen, all colored, went home drunk, and from what can be learned, attempted to rape the girl, and being caught by the other members of the family, he made use of a heavy poker, and killed all three of them. When found late at night they were all cold in death, excepting one, but she died soon after. The murderer was arrested to-day, making no attempt to escape. The excitement in the community is intense, and he was hurried away as quickly as possible. Since dark this evening he was brought here and lodged in jail as quietly as possible. Threats of lynching are freely made, and if any one should head the movement there may be trouble. Sheriff Hobensack will stand by his prisoner to the last, and is doing all he can to prevent an outbreak.

ESTATE OF RICHARD B. GILLESPIE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—s.s.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 24th day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

On reading and filing the petition of Gustavus A. Gillespie and Richard B. Gillespie, Jr., executors of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging that they have paid the debts of deceased, the expenses of administration and all legacies bequeathed in and by said will, except residuary legacies, and praying for the allowance of their final account now on file in this court, for an assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate to and amongst the persons entitled thereto, and for their discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 21st day of February next, atten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN'S habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to use to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

For the Daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free. Address I. W. ENGLAND,

MACON CENTER.

Splendid yield of saw logs.

Wilbur Greenfield pitched out over the dashboard onto the whiffletrees, fracturing a wrist, so as to lay him up for several days, just because the bobs struck an obstruction.

Grandma Spaulding visited her daughter Nancy Gillett, living two and a half miles south of Dundee, last Wednesday, the 26th, returning the same day without inconvenience. Pretty good for 89 years old and a round trip of 28 miles. She claims to be smarter than any of her daughters.

The sleight of hand and spiritual exposition show at the hall Monday night brought out a full house and was well received.

Third and fourth degrees, installation of officers at the Grange Friday afternoon, February 4, commencing at 12 o'clock M., sharp. Speakers from abroad expected, and all grangers invited.

Our school house in district No. 8 burned down Friday morning, the 21st. Caused by a defective stove-pipe or coals falling through an open floor. The teacher has been in the habit of filling up the stove and closing the draft at night, so as to have a good start for a fire in the morning. Books and furniture were all consumed.

A school meeting held last Thursday afternoon resulted in purchasing a new site of M. Karcher, consisting of one acre of land just north of John Stewart's, and electing a building committee, who were ordered to build a brick house 22 by 32 and 12 feet high, with all the modern improvements as to seating, furniture, out buildings, wood house, well, play ground, &c., all to be completed by the first of August.

The open Grange Friday evening was just splendid. The debate on the question: "Resolved, That the present extravagant fashion is the cause of more evil than good," was participated in by Miss Josie Clarkson, Mrs. E. Howell and Mrs. James Clarkson, affirmative. Miss Jennie Lafler, Miss Grace Lonsbury and Mrs. D. Bailey, negative. The contest was brilliant, determined and eloquent, and no jury would have agreed on a verdict.

Program for next open Grange, Friday evening, February 11:

Song—Choir.
Address—S. C. Stacy.
Song—Miss Lonsbury.
Essay—Mrs. Jas. Clarkson.
Dec.—J. E. Hunter.
Inst. Solo—Miss Lafler.

Debate—"Resolved, That the best interests of the American people demand a protective tariff." Aff.—M. J. Martin. Neg.—J. C. Mills, with the privilege of three speakers each.

The Red Ribbon club Saturday evening was well attended and the exercises as good as could be expected after laying over four weeks. Program for next meeting, February 5:

Song—Choir.
Dec.—J. E. Hunter.
Rec.—Minnie Page.
Song—Josie Clarkson.
Dec.—John T. Boyce.
Rec.—Nelia Russell.

There will be a Universalist social at R. Westfall's, Friday evening, Feb. 4th.

A donation at Rev. Kershow's Friday afternoon and evening, Feb. 4th.

Mrs. J. Wilks died the 26th ult.

BROOKLYN.

By some freak of nature the eclipse was omitted, but Mr. Pitts, of New York, having lived away from his friends a year and got lonesome, persuaded Katy Nichols to forsake the Cambridge hills and become a substitute for those in the distance. The two were made of one name by Esquire Williamson Sunday evening, and I trust the fortunate gentleman may appreciate the peace and quietness he has linked with his life, for very few possess such qualifications for remaining silent under the pressure of difficulties as Katy.

I am afraid to let the statement regarding Carrie Hand remain uncorrected lest it damage the veracity of the printer. That young lady has been prowling among mush and milk socialists here instead of Hillsdale, and seems to be content with fate. She popped the corn for the Mission Society, and they are thirteen dollars happier since Thursday night.

PEARLIE.

MACON.

During the night between Tuesday and Wednesday of last week the house of Mr. Dan Kelly was completely destroyed by fire. Some of the furniture was saved. The loss is covered to some extent by insurance. With the burning of Mr. Burleson's barn, of Mr. Remington's house, and of the Osgood school house, together with this fire of last week, the township of Macon seems to have had its full share of fires during the last few months.

The horse and buggy which were stolen, from Joshua Kuder early in November, were found in Ohio a few days ago and brought back in safety to their rightful owner.

On Wednesday evening spiritualism is said to have been exposed in the Baptist church of this place—Dr. Martin's exposition.

Mrs. Wilks, an aged lady died suddenly last week while sitting in her chair. She had long been a sufferer from asthma. The funeral was held on Friday afternoon at the South Macon Reformed church, the services being conducted by Rev. G. H. Field of Ridgeway.

Our cemetery which has not lacked appropriate and costly monuments, has lately received an important addition—important especially because it marks a transition from marble to granite. As the latter is not stained or discolored by the weather as most marbles are, and as its smooth polished surface prevents the accumulation of moss, it is considered the most desirable monument material now in use. The Hardwick Granite Co. have just erected a large monument on the cemetery lot of Mr. John Penington, which is a worthy memorial of those many loved ones of the family who have passed the portals of death.

The regular temperance meeting was held on Friday evening of last week, the exercises consisting of select reading and recitations, a biographical sketch, songs, etc. The next meeting on Feb. 11.

A temperance lecture will be delivered in this place next Sunday evening the Hon. E. P. Allen of Ypsilanti.

On Thursday evening of this week a donation will be held at the house of Mr. Lyman Ames, for the benefit of Rev. J. Kilpatrick of Clinton.

On Friday evening of this week the people of the East Macon Reformed church and other friends will give their pastor, Rev. J. H. Kershow, a donation visit at his present place of abode, viz., the South Macon parsonage, one mile South of the Grange Hall.

RIDGEWAY.

If you want to freeze to death, pay for your wood in advance.

A pair of childs' calf shoes, No. 9, has been found and left at Clark's store, where the owner can get them.

The M. E. S. S. anticipate a fine sleigh ride on Saturday, and some neighboring town may expect a rush.

The numerous saw mills in this section are short of water, and some of them have been obliged to shut down.

An infant child of Frank Dibble Jr. died on Thursday, Jan. 27, and was buried on Friday.

On Monday night and Tuesday forenoon we experienced a regular blizzard, snow falling and drifting badly.

Why can't the train that carries the mail on this route manage to connect with the trains on the M. S. at Tecumseh? We have been greatly annoyed of late, by not getting our mail until the next day after it is due.

FOR fourteen weeks we have had a long, ceaseless, unbroken winter. Not once has the weather moderated so as to allow it to rain, and to-day the indications are that for fourteen more weeks we will have the same monotony of weather. It has been advantageous in point of trade, but to the poor it has been a winter of undue severity. The greater part of the household funds have been expended for wood and necessary clothing. With the same financial condition of this year and the same open winter of last year, the poor would have survived the season in a much better condition than they will.

THE Great West, published at Denver, Colorado, comes this week with thirty-two pages of reading matter concerning western enterprise.

DEATH OF CHARLES G. WILLIAMS.

The following notice is clipped from the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser of Jan. 22d. The father of the deceased, Daniel Williams, was at one time postmaster at Tecumseh. The old residents of this village will remember the family well:

We sincerely regret to announce the death this morning, at his residence on North Pearl Street, of Charles G. Williams, a well-known and popular young gentleman. He had been in ill health for a long time with an affection of the heart, we believe. We are told that he never seemed more cheerful or felt better than during last evening. His heavy breathing about three o'clock this morning awoke and alarmed his wife, but he was past medical assistance and expired in a short time. The deceased was a native of Tecumseh, Mich., where he was born in 1844. Ten years later he was brought to Buffalo and had always resided here. For seventeen years he was employed by Messrs. Jewett & Root, in the counting room, and there never was a more faithful servant. His close application, industrious habits, and failure to take sufficient exercise, probably broke down his health. He was an agreeable and domestic character as well, and those who knew him will long cherish his memory. He leaves a widow and child. The deceased was a brother of Mr. John L. Williams, of the W. T. Company.

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

THE Opera House association have made arrangements with Callender's Georgia Minstrels to put them on the boards for next Monday night. The Boston Transcript says:

"Callender's Georgia Minstrels have received the enthusiastic stamp of Boston's approval, and Boston knows good minstrels when it sees them. Again, last night, there were 1,600 people in the hall. Their humor is original, their fun spontaneous and infectious, and while being of the broadest and most uproarious character, it never exceeds the limits of refinement. Their most striking characteristic is their wholesome and hearty simplicity, dealing rather with the humor of real Negro Life, than with the slang of city streets. Their success here has been extraordinary."

LENAWEE COUNTY ITEMS.

Several Lenawee county people are sojourning in Florida.

Complaints of the scarcity of fodder are made in various parts of Lenawee county.

Prof. Tice, the weather prophet gave a lecture at Adrian, Wednesday night of last week.

A number of the employees in the Adrian car shops have quit work; cause, too low wages.

Two hundred and twenty-five logs were delivered at McComb's mill, Ogden, in one day recently.

THE hardware store of Mr. Burt, of Milan, was burned last Saturday evening. The contents were mostly saved.

A prohibitory amendment petition containing 2,300 names has been presented to the legislature from Lenawee county.

Adrian will be fourteen miles nearer Detroit by the new Butler road than by the Lake Shore, which makes the distance 70 miles.

LAST Wednesday Senator Upson gave notice in the State Senate that he would soon introduce a bill to allow Lenawee county to employ a clerk in the probate office.

George A. Williams, a resident of Deerfield for many years, is reported to have recently received a back pension amounting to $1,600. He has moved with his family to New York.

Adrian Press: J. F. Porter, the Ogden bee farmer, says the continued cold weather is very disastrous to bees, so don't be disappointed honey, if you bee obliged to go without the delicious results of a honey bee's industry next year.

John Staiger, a Clinton jeweler, exhibits a phenomenal pendulum made by himself. The contrivance consists of a large pendulum hanging by a small wire from the top of the window, the works being concealed inside the pendulum.

LAST week the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway company received twenty-five new engines, ten Grant and fifteen McQueen. The Grants will be put at work on the Norwalk division and the McQueens will be assigned to duty on the Michigan and Illinois division.

Adrian Times: The car company will soon commence the manufacture of stock cars. The company employs all the hands it can work conveniently. Every foot of room is used, and some of the men have been working extra a long time. The erection of additional buildings is talked of.

Adrian Press: Asa A. Kennedy, once of this city, has just been convicted on an old charge against him, by jury in Iowa City. Kennedy, with others, was charged with obtaining goods and then firing his store, on which there was an insurance, with the design of defrauding his creditors.

FROM the annual report of the Secretary of State relating to farms and farm land, we see that Lenawee county was one of the ten counties in the State that produced over one million bushels of wheat in 1879. Lenawee produced 1,087,467 bushels from 56,495 acres of wheat land. In the same year the county clipped from 91,063 sheep 492,947 pounds of wool.

Adrian Press: The real estate and remaining material of the brass company, have been sold and a large flouring mill will be erected in the spring. Parties who looked the property over some months ago with a view to purchasing were it is asserted discouraged by the representations of Rev. J. C. Hill, who seemed to have imbibed the belief that Adrian was both an inhospitable and an unhealthy city. Nothing could be more the reverse of real facts.

IT seems quite probable that Andrew Howell, of Adrian, will be chosen to take charge of the new compilation of the State laws. Certainly no better man could be found. The Lansing correspondent of the Free Press pays Mr. Howell this well merited compliment:

The joint judiciary committees of the two houses have agreed to report in favor of Andrew Howell's proposition for a new compilation of the laws. The action of the joint committees was unanimous. Some members say, after having seen Mr. Howell's specimen pages, that they would prefer, as individuals, to pay $40 for such a volume, rather than to obtain an inferior work for $5 a volume. Mr. Howell's proposition would make the cost $3 a volume of the usual size.

TO THE SPELLING CLASS.

Stand up, ye spellers, now and spell
Spell Phanakistoscope and Knell,
Or take some simple word as Chill
Or Ganger, or the Garden Lily.
To spell such words as syllogism,
And Lachrymose and synchronism
And Pentateuch and saccharine,
Apocrypha and Celandine,
Lactiferous and Cecity,
Jejune and Homœopathy,
Paralysis and Chloroform,
Rhinoceros and Pachyderm,
Metempsychosis, Gherkins, Basque,
Is certainly no easy task.
Kaleidoscope and Tennessee,
Kamtschatka and Dispensary,
Diphthong and Erysipelas,
And Etiquette and Sassafras,
Infallible and Ptyalism,
Allopathy and Rheumatism,
And Cataclysm and Beleaguer,
Twelfth, Eighteenth, Rendezvous Intriguer,
And hosts of other words are found
So English and so Classic ground.
Thus Behring Straits and Michselmas,
Thermopylæ, Cordilleras,
Suite, Hemorrhage, Julap, and Havana
Cinquefoil and Ipecacuanha,
And Rappahannock, Shenandoah
And Schuylkill, and a thousand more,
Are words some prime good spellers miss
In Dictionary lands like this:
Nor need one think himself a Scroyle
If some of these his efforts foil,
Nor deem himself undone forever
To miss the name of either river,
The Dnieper, Seine, or Guadalquiver.

DON'T SLAM THE GATE.

Now, Harry, pray, don't laugh at me.
But when you go so late
I wish you would be careful, dear,
To never slam the gate;

For Bessy listens every night,
And so does teasing Kate,
To tell me next day at what o'clock
They heard you slam the gate.

'Twas nearly ten last night, you know,
But now 'tis very late—
(We've talked about so many things:)
Oh, do not slam the gate!

For all the neighbors hearing it,
Will say our future fate;
We've been discussing; so I beg
You will not slam the gate!

For though it is all very true,
I wish that they would wait
To canvass our affairs—until—
Well—pray don't slam the gate!

At least not now. But by-and-by,
When in "our home" I wait
Your coming, I shall always like
To hear you slam the gate!

THE BEAUTIFUL GATE.

We speak, we write of the loved and lost
Who have gone to the land above
And the mists of the river of death are crossed
By the rainbow of their love.
Sad hearts are yearning in hall and cot,
To pillow some dreamless head,
But we know the beautiful changes not,
And our darlings are not dead.

The voice of their melody wanders free
Through the wall of our broken song,
And the gleam of their snowy robes we see
When the earth grows dark with wrong.
We feel the touch of a vanished hand,
That thrilled in the days of yore,
And leads us on to the summer land,
Where they live for evermore.

We speak when the work of day is done,
Of the dawning by-and-by,
And number our treasures, one by one,
In our Father's house on high.
And oft we think when our rest shall come,
Of the meeting there will be
Where the good and beautiful all go Home,
To the city beyond the sea.

MY SWIM TO THE TARGET.

Few, perhaps, among the civilian population of England have any very certain idea as to the whereabouts of Shoeburyness; fewer still, perhaps, have been there. To travel down from Fenchurch street to the extreme end of London, Tilbury and Southend Railway is of itself a journey not to be undertaken without some definite object in view; and when to this is added a tramp of some two miles along yielding sand and shingle, or, as an alternative, about four miles of uninteresting road, it is easy to understand that few tourists are to be found energetic enough to travel so far merely to see the place and return; for stay they cannot, there being no hotel of any description in the little place.

Shoeburyness then, for the benefit of the uninitiated, may be defined as "a little noisy place near Southend." As to its physical characteristics, it is a heterogeneous collection of barracks, batteries and sandbanks. To the stranger approaching it, it presents a most uninviting aspect, especially should the tide happen to be out. For then becomes apparent the interminable reaches of sand that stretch away out to sea for miles in their unvarying flatness, broken only here and there by the black form of a target or by pegs driven into the yielding soil to mark the ranges. Nevertheless it is this very dismal expanse that gives Shoeburyness its importance in military eyes, and that makes it what it is—the great experimental and practice station for the British artillery.

Everything is quiet enough there till 8 o'clock or thereabouts. Then the observer sees here and there a flag run upon the summit of a battery or casemate, and the roar of guns begins and lasts two or three hours, almost without intermission. Looking out to sea, one may perceive clouds of smoke rolling away, far up in the blue sky, like white balls, as the shells burst in the distance, and may hear the noise of the report floating lazily back after an apparently interminable lapse of time. When it is remembered that of the thousands of fuses of all kinds turned out of the Woolwich Arsenal, some 3 per cent. have to be proved by actual experiment, one may form some conception of the appearance of Shoeburyness on a busy day.

Enough, however, of description for the present. Even to this remote corner of England has enterprise penetrated, and when last I was there the foundation of a great hotel was being laid. Soon, no doubt, it will be as great a resort for the ubiquitous 'Arry as other portions of Her Majesty's dominions. I should not have ventured to intrude it upon my readers but for an adventure which happened to me there on one occasion, and which went very near to depriving the British public of this interesting recital, and the Royal Regiment of Artillery of the services of a "most promising young officer," as no doubt the Times would have recorded.

In the year 187— I was going through what is technically known as the "long course," a curriculum of instruction in gunnery, theoretical and practical; the former at Woolwich, and the latter at Shoeburyness—each part lasting six months. We had been enjoying ourselves at our seaside residence for three out of these six months exceedingly; for we had been fortunate enough to have gone there in the summer months; and between boating and bathing and playing lawn-tennis, in a modified form, known as "sticky," in courts constructed out of the boards of old targets past work, the time had passed very pleasantly. It was now August, and a very hot one; the sun burned in the heavens like a red coal, and scorched up the scanty water that the sandbeds contained, till we had to send miles away to fetch what was required for the use of the barracks. Work of any kind was an effort. One felt inclined to spend the day swimming lazily about, or sitting on a warm rock, after the fashion of Tennyson's mermaid. It was one of these aquatic excursions which got me into the greatest scrape I have ever been in, or that I ever shall be in, I hope, as the sensation was anything but pleasant.

I must premise that I was a very fair swimmer, having learned that art, amongst many other useful things, at the academy, and progressed favorably in it during a course of seaside fort residences. My great ambition had always been to swim round the 2,000 target some day when the tide was in, and at length I determined to make the attempt. The feat seems easy enough, no doubt, but I was no Captain Webb; and amongst my fellow-officers there were few who would have attempted it, so I felt rather inclined to be able to say that I had been there. Confiding my intention to no one, I started one day from the gun-pier just before slack water, counting on getting back before the tide turned again.

It was a hot day, as I have before said, and I swam very slowly; however, I arrived at my destination without much difficulty. The framework on which the target floated offered a pleasant resting place, and I lay down on it lazily, intending to take some five minutes' breathing time, and then strike out for home. But, alas for the feebleness of human resolutions! Between the warm sun and the long swim and the recumbent posture, I had not been there two minutes before I was fast asleep. I had a curious dream. I had been reading a rather wild book of speculative astronomy that morning, and had been somewhat struck by the writer's theory that the end of the world would come through the fiery vapors and lava of the interior of the earth breaking through the thin crust thereof. I dreamed now that such a catastrophe was imminent, and that I was calmly inspecting a pressure gauge to ascertain how long the globe would yet endure. Fearlessly, as happens in dreams, I felt the increasing heat beneath me. Tremors and indistinct distant rumblings came rising up from infinite depths, until the ground shook and quivered under my feet. Higher ran the warning dial hand upon the dial, and at length, with a mighty crash, the world exploded, and was hurled not into chaos, but splash into the waters of the estuary of the river Thames!

Throughly awakened, as the reader may suppose, I rose to the surface, gulping down a mouthful of water, swallowed in the surprise. As I clutched the framework beside me, I was conscious of a dazzling red flash like sheet-lightning, followed by a tremendous report and a rattling all about me, as though a shower of hail were falling. I had seen too much of artillery not to know what this astonishing meteor was—a shrapnel shell.

Perhaps there may be some of my readers ignorant of what such a missile is; for, indeed, it is of somewhat late invention. Let them imagine, then, a cylindrical shell of iron, ogival-headed, and containing a many bullets as it will conveniently hold, comfortably set in a bed of rosin. At the bottom thereof is a small charge of powder, ignited by a time-fuse bored to burn any required time. On this delightful machine exploding, out fly bullets, and by the inexorable laws of dynamics, partaking of the original motion of the shell, cover the ground before them for hundreds of yards with a feu d'enfer, as of a whole regiment firing volleys.

Such an implement of destruction is well enough to talk about; but when its violence is directed against oneself, there is less pleasure in the contemplation. Clearly I had slept so long that the ordinary afternoon practice had begun, and from two guns evidently, or the one shot could not have followed the other so rapidly. Only a few seconds had I for these thoughts ere I saw a red flash leap out from the flag crowned battery on shore. Instantly I dived as deep as I could, and heard, deadened by the water above me, the sharp report of the shell. As I rose to the surface again, I saw white splinters on the wood-work of the target, that showed how true the aim had been. Scarcely had I time to take breath when the red flash leaped again, and again I dived. They were good gun detachments—none better anywhere; and the guns were light ones—16-pounders. Often had I competed myself in a race with time, running the gun up again almost before the recoil had ceased, and ramming home shot and cartridge ere it had regained its former position again. Now, no doubt my comrades were hard at work, wondering, perhaps, what had become of me.

Eight separate times had I dived, and my strength was failing fast. Even now there was a ringing noise in my head which almost stupefied me, and was growing more painful every instant. If I stood up on the framework and tried to signal to the shore, I must stand at least one shot, and that was almost certain death.

Even in that desperate moment an absurd idea came into my head, as such things will come sometimes. I had read somewhere of an ingenious recipe for finding a safe place on board a ship in action by putting one's head out as a hole where a shot had come in, relying on the improbability of another coming in at the same orifice. There was one corner of the framework splintered by several bullets; to it I crept, and held on despairingly.

Another flash from the battery. This time I could see the shell coming like a black speck in the sky. Anxiously I watched for the burst to come; but this time it came not; and the shell plunged into the sea fifty yards short, throwing up a mighty pillar of water, and ricochetting away far over my head. Was the fuse blind? I asked myself. No; there was another flash and another rush through the air, and sullen plunge in the sea beyond the target. The shrapnel practice was over, and they were firing plugged shell.

Now or never was my time. I climbed on to the woodwork, sprang to my feet, and waved my hands. From the shore I must have looked very like a picture of Andromeda chained to her rock. I was too late, however, to escape a shot. Once more the red flash spouted forth, and I heard the ominous rush coming nearer and nearer, till with a rear as of an express train it rushed past my head, carrying away with it the left-hand top corner of the target, and hurling it far into the sea beyond. The concussion seemed to tear my feet from under me, and I fell, striking my head against the [illegible] to prevent myself from falling into the sea. My last glance at the shore showed the flag hoisted half-mast high; and then I must have fainted away, for I remember no more till I found myself lying in my bed, with the Surgeon Major applying strong ammonia to my nostrils with marvelous effect. I have little more to tell. Watching the effect of the shot from the battery, they had seen me standing there, just too late to stop the gun being fired; had ceased the practice, and got a boat out without delay, though with a very faint hope of finding me alive. Of course the story was made a standing joke against me ever after and I must own that I deserved it. Nevertheless, I have at least the satisfaction of considering that when we go forth again to fight the Russians or the Germans, or whatever other nation may elect to try with us a game of war on a large scale, I am never likely to be much nearer than I was that day on the sands of Shoeburyness.

"The straight and dreadful pass of death"

A Hunt After Bats.

One of the funniest stories I have heard for a very long time, says a writer for the London Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, is my friend Mr. Eccles' description of how he caught innumerable bats one night. It was many years ago, when he was young in his profession, and while on a tour with a provincial company, he had taken lodgings in a clean but rather dilapidated little house. Soon after going to bed he fell asleep, and soon after falling asleep he was awakened by a strange, fluttering noise as of a frightened bird, in the curtains of his bed. He sprang up, struck a light, and saw a dark-colored little creature with wings blundering about the room. Not being well acquainted with natural history, Mr. Eccles that was to be, did not recognize it as a bat, but determined to catch it, if possible, and examine it carefully in the morning. Taking up a soft felt hat, he began to hunt, and tried to capture the intruder for a long time in vain; but at last he pounced upon it, carefully took it from under the hat, shut it in a drawer, listened to its ineffectual attempts to escape—wanting to be sure he had really caught it—and went to bed to dream of flying dragons. But he was not destined to sleep long.

Hardly had he dozed off when another fluttering awakened him, and lighting another match he found another bat. After this one he had another hunt, caught it, put it in the drawer with its brother, and again went to bed. Again, however, he was awakened in a similar manner! bats came not in single spies, but—if the expression be pardonable—in battalions.

Mr. Eccles hunted diligently and enthusiastically, making quite a collection of specimens, and putting them all with great care in the drawer. Heated with the chase, he then opened the window, and, tired out, at last enjoyed a few minutes' sleep.

Waking with the morning light, he jumped out of bed and opened the drawer very cautiously, a fraction of an inch at a time, to look for his bats; but lo and behold there were no bats there! He opened the drawer wide, and then discovered that it had no back to it. He had, in fact, been passing all his night in catching the same bat, which had flown out of the back of the drawer as soon as he had put it in at the front, and when the window was opened had finally escaped

Alaska.

The word Alak-shak means "the great land," and correctly describes the country. It is great territorially. From the eastern boundary to the island of Atton, the extreme western limit, is 2,200 miles in an air-line. According to Prof. Guyott, this island is as far west of San Francisco as Maine is east. Consequently between the extreme east and west of the United States, San Francisco is a middle city.

The coast lines of Alaska, followed up and down the bays and inlets, are about 25,000 miles, or once around the globe. Its total area is about as large as all of the United States that lie east of the Mississippi river and north of the Carolinas and Alabama. Its great river, the Yukon, is over 2,000 miles long, and navigable for steamers from 1,500 to 1,800 miles, with a varying width from one to five miles, along the course. It is 70 miles across the delta of its five mouths.

Alaska has the greatest mountain peak on the continent—Mount St. Elias, 19,500 feet in height. It is the great island region of the United States, containing an aggregate area of over 31,000 square miles, equal to the size of some of our important states. It contains 64 volcanoes, ten of which send forth fire and melted rock.

The seal fisheries make Alaska a valuable possession; then the furs of the fox, martin, mink, beaver, otter and other animals make it worth having. Its fisheries alone are worth all it cost; the cod, salmon, halibut and herring being there in inexhaustible quantities. Its mineral resources will some day attract a large population and prove to the world that Alaska was no barren purchase.

The great surprise in connection with Alaska is the mild winter climate of the northern Pacific Coast. The great Japan current of the Pacific that gives Oregon and California their winter climate first strikes the shores of our North American continent at the western end of the Aleutian islands, and imparts its greater heat to the Alaska coast. Consequently, while in the northern latitude, it yet has a warmer climate than New York City.

Cure for felon: When a finger pricks as though there were a thorn in it, and throbs intolerably when held downward, and yet there is no external sign of mischief, the probabilities are that a felon is in prospect. Go at once to the butcher's and procure some of the spinal marrow of a beef creature. Take a piece, say about two inches in length, and, having cut it open lengthwise, wrap it around the affected finger, covering, of course, with cloth. In a few hours change the piece of marrow for a fresh one, and continue to keep the finger encased until all the pain has ceased and there is no discomfort when the marrow is removed. The finger will look strangely white and porous, but the cure is complete. This remedy ought to become professional. It is vastly better than the surgeon's knife, and more effectual.

Our Navy in 1812 and 1880.

Within a few years after the revolution we became the carriers of the sea. When France ventured to seize our ships, we were not ready to protect them. John Adams appealed to the country, built six frigates, and commenced six ships of the line. Had he been permitted to invest but $10,000,000 in a navy, he might have launched twenty frigates like the Constitution and twenty ships of the line, and thus averted the Berlin and Milan decrees, the orders in council, the embargo, and the war which followed. We might thus have avoided the confiscation of our merchantmen, the impressment of our seamen, and the loss and expenditure of a vast sum of money. England bows to power, and with such a fleet at our piers she would never have ventured to insult our flag, or forbid us to enter the ports of Europe. But Jefferson sold the frames of our ships of the line, and left nothing to intimidate France and England but a few frigates, which won immortal fame, demonstrating what such a navy as our commerce and revenue justified might have accomplished. We built a few large ships during our war with England. Under Jackson and his successors we extinguished our debt, and divided a surplus large enough to have built a navy; and when the late insurrection began, our commerce whitened every sea, but our nation had nothing to guard it but a few ancient steamers and sailing vessels scattered over the face of the globe, and no iron-clads, although their value had been tested by Stevens at home, and on the Black Sea in the Russian war against France, England and Turkey.

Had we gradually invested but $30,000,000 in a respectable navy, had we, like England and France, built a fleet of steam-ships by granting subsidies to lines of fast packets to Europe, Asia and South America, should we not have saved Norfolk, Wilmington, Savannah, Pensacola, New Orleans and Galveston, and finished the war in less than two years, saving oceans of blood and treasure?

Our country would not have been obliged to blockade its own ports by sinking its whale ships, or to cruise against the fast blockade runners of England with sailing craft, or, with war ships without speed and in the last stages of senility. Again we were obliged in the tumult of war, when gold had risen to a premium, and when the southern forests of live oak, pine and cedar were inaccessible, and before our furnaces and rolling mills were complete, to build again an inferior class of vessels, and to throw away a large part of the expenditure, and were we to-day to be involved in another war, are we prepared for the contingency?—Harper's Magazine.

Boys' Smoking.

ITS EFFECT UPON THEM — ASCERTAINED BY LEADING PHYSICIANS.

When boys are advised not to smoke on hygienic grounds they laugh at the advice, and speak of its givers as old fogies. But careful experiments lately made by a physician of repute, prove that the practice is very injurious. He took for his purpose thirty-eight boys, from 9 to 15, who had been in the habit of smoking, and examined them closely. In twenty-seven he found obvious hurtful effects; twenty-two having various disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and more or less craving for strong drink; twelve of the boys were frequently troubled with bleeding at the nose; ten had disturbed sleep; twelve had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth, which disappeared after discontinuation of tobacco for ten or twelve days. The physician treated them all for weakness and nervousness, though with little avail, until they had relinquished smoking, when health and strength were speedily restored. Even if it be granted that smoking is not harmful to adults, there is no doubt of its harmfulness to the young. Dr. Ranking, Dr. Richardson, and others, who have made a special study of the subject, all agree in declaring that, it causes in them impairment of growth, premature virility, and physical degradation. One of the worst effects is the provocation of an appetite for liquor, which, indeed, is not confined to the young, but which grown persons are better able to manage. Where boys drink to excess, they are almost invariably smokers, and it is very rare to find a man overfond of spirits who is not addicted to tobacco. Men who want to give up drinking usually have to give up smoking at the same time for they say that a cigar or a pipe generally excites a desire for liquor very hard to con-

An Afghan Woman's Shoes.

The slippers and shoes are of Cabulese make, and are very pretty. On a pale green background beautiful patters are worked with gold and silver thread and particolored silk, until the effect is more like that of a fairy's slipper than one for daily use. But a stout leather sole is put on, with high heels rudely bound with iron, and then the work of art is complete. The stalls in which their slippers and shoes are made are the gayest in the whole bazar. A Cabulese lady's foot is small, almost to deformity, and the baggy trousers by contrast make them appear exceedingly petite. From the few faces seen, and those chiefly of old or passee women, it is difficult to judge of the famed beauty Cabulese are said to boast of. The children are certainly, as a whole, the prettiest I have ever seen. Their complexions are red and white, with a tinge of olive pervading the skin, eyes black and lustrous, well-shaped features, teeth to make a western beauty envious, and bright, intelligent looks that sadly belie the race to which they belong. Their mothers must be beautiful, for their fathers are generally villainous-looking; the men losing all the pleasing traits which as boys they possessed. The lady I have described as seen in the zebanna for a moment was certainly handsome, and was far lighter in complexion than a Spaniard; her eyes were really worthy of the praises sung by Hafiz, but the sensuous lips were a little too full and pouting. It was just such a face as one imagines in a harem, and would be in keeping with the luxurious life of a voluptuary to whom sensuality is a guiding-star. Such faces always lack character, and would soon prove insipid in the eyes of the west. The Cabulese lady, when journeying, is either carried in an elaborate wicker-work cage covered with the inevitable flowing linen, or rides Amazon fashion.

In the lives of the saddest of us there are bright days, when we feel as if we could take the great world into our arms. Then comes the gloomy days, when the fire will neither burn on our hearths nor in our hearts, and all without and within is dismal, cold and dark. Believe me, every heart has its secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

A current event—The Gulf Stream.

Madam, never bang a door, if you do adore a bang.

Beer is said to be going up, but the general impression has been that it was going down.

There was a big bustle in the Custom House last week when fifty-seven yards of lace were found on the person of Mrs. B.

The son of a coffee and spice dealer was asked at school where coffee came from, and the reply was: "Father said I mustn't tell, and he'll lick me if I do."

Youth: "Yes, it is curious I have no beard; I can't think who I take after—my grandfather had a splendid one." Hair cutter: "Oh! perhaps you take after your grandmother."

An exchange refers to the language of the postage stamp. But we do not think the postage stamp has any language that expresses anything. If it had we believe it would holler "enough" when it is licked.

It was out in one of the western states that he started a paper and called it "The Barrel," because a barrel once set in motion is very easy to keep rolling. But the people decided they didn't want any barrel organ in those parts, and The Barrel succumbed to circumstances.

"Is the doctor in?" asked an anxious-looking young man. "No, sir," replied the person addressed, "but then you can leave an order on the slate. Is it a very urgent case?" "Well, yes," the young man said, "rather urgent, I think. Just as I started away from home my youngest brother was falling out of a second-story window."

"Is it becoming to me?" asked she, as she paraded, in the costume of one hundred years ago, before the man who is not her lord and master, but is her husband. "Yes, my dear," said he, meekly. "Don't you wish I could dress this way all the time?" she asked. "No, my dear," he answered; "but I wish you had lived when that was the style."

A St. Louis girl forwarded the following to her young man: "Deer Will.—Doant kum to see me eny more for a whial eny way. Fauther has got awfully skeered about burglars, and sits up every nite till late with a doubled-barrelled shotgun watching the back-yard. He put moren a pound of lead into Brown's newfoundland dog, which was cummin over the fens after a bone last nite."

Little Kate B., who is of an inquiring turn of mind, was watching her father cover the fire with ashes one night last winter. She looked at him intently a few minutes, and then asked why he did it; to which he jokingly replied: "To stop the rapid combustion." A short time after she ran to tell her mamma what she had seen, and ended by saying, "The fire was covered up to keep the rabbit from busting."

Recipes for the Cook.

Bread Cakes.—Take any bits of bread you may have left after meals, soak them in milk or milk and water, until perfectly soft; mash fine, add two eggs, pinch of soda, salt to taste, and enough flour to make them fry nicely; drop the spoonfuls into hot butter or lard. These are inexpensive and good, and a better way to use dry bread than in puddings.

To Boil Eggs.—To boil eggs properly, place them in a dish having a close cover; pour over boiling water; cover and set away from the fire for ten or fifteen minutes. Eggs cooked in this way are more delicious and digestible than when allowed to boil in the old way. The heat of the water cooks them slowly to a jelly-like consistency, leaving the yolk harder than the white.

A Cream for Fruit.—Boil half a pint of cream and half a pint of milk with a bit of lemon peel; add a few almonds beaten to a paste with a drop of water and a little sugar. Take a teaspoonful of dried flour, rub it smoothly down with a little cold milk and few drops of orange-flower water; mix all together and let it boil; let it remain till quite cool, and then add a little lemon juice.

Buttermilk Padding.—Although from its consistency this can scarcely be called a pudding, still it is a very nice dessert, and was eaten by our grandmothers when farina and corn starch were unheard of delicacies: Boil one quart of fresh buttermilk; beat one egg, a pinch of salt and a heaping teaspoonful of flour together, and pour into the boiling milk; stir briskly, and boil for two or three minutes, and serve while warm with sugar, or still better, maple syrup.

Sweetbreads Stewed.—Wash carefully, remove all bits of skin and fleshy matter, cover with cold water and heat to a boil; pour off the hot water and cover with cold until the sweetbreads are firm. If liked, rich lard as for frying before you put in the second water; stir in a very little water the second time. When they are tender add for each sweetbread a heaping teaspoonful of butter, a little chopped parsley, pepper, salt, and little cream. Let them simmer in this gravy for five minutes. Send to the table in a covered dish with gravy poured over them.

Good Crullers.—To one quart of flour rub two scant teaspoonfuls sea-foam, lump of butter half the size of an egg, good cupful white sugar, a pinch of salt, yolks of two eggs. Work these together thoroughly, but very lightly, using the tips of your fingers. Moisten with enough milk to make as soft a dough as possible to roll out, using as little flower as you can, rolling out into twists. It must be a sticky dough. Keep your fingers just dipped in flour. If the mixture be too stiff, your crullers will be tough. Too much working will toughen them too. Have your lard well boiling, and drop in quickly and watch carefully.

How to measure grain on the floor: Make the pile in the form of a pyramid or cone, and multiply the area of the base by one-third the height. To find the area of the base, multiply the square of its diameter by the decimal .7854. Example—A conical pile of grain is 8 feet in diameter and 4 feet high, how many bushels does it contain? Solution—The square of 8 is 64, and 64 times .7854 times 4-3 equals 83.776, the number of cubic feet. Therefore, 83.776 times 4-5 equals 67.02 bushels.

The Bow.

From Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms.

Acquaintances are usually entitled to a bow. It is poor policy to refuse recognition because of a trifling difference between parties.

The young lady should show a similar deference to an elderly lady, or to one in superior position, that a gentleman does to a lady.

A gentleman who may be smoking when he meets a lady, should in bowing remove the cigar from his mouth and from her presence.

When bowing to ladies, it is etiquette for the gentleman to raise his hat from his head, and slightly incline his body. The bow should not be a mere nod.

A bow or graceful inclination should be made by ladies when recognizing their acquaintances of the opposite sex. It is the privilege of the lady to bow first.

A gentleman on horseback should grasp whip and reins in his left hand, and raise his hat with his right, when saluting a lady. The lady salutes by bowing slightly.

To a casual acquaintance you may bow without speaking; but to those with whom you are well acquainted, greater cordiality is due. A bow should always be returned; even to an enemy it is courtesy to return the recognition.

When a gentleman, accompanied by a friend, meets a lady on the street, it is courtesy, in the salutation, for the gentleman's friend to bow slightly to the lady also, as a compliment to his companion, even though unacquainted with the lady.

On meeting a party, some of whom you are intimately acquainted with, and the others but little, the salutation should be made as nearly equal as possible. A slight recognition of some, and a great demonstration of pleasure toward others, is a violation of etiquette.

A gentleman should return a bow made him upon the street, even if the one making the same is not recognized. The person may possibly be a forgotten acquaintance; but even if a mistake has been made, there will be less embarrassment if the bow is returned.

A gentleman should not bow from a window to a lady on the street, though he may bow slightly from the street upon being recognized by a lady in a window. Such recognition should, however, generally be avoided, as gossip is likely to attach undue importance to it when seen by others.

A warm cordiality of manner, and a general recognition of acquaintances, without undue familiarity, is the means of diffusing much happiness, as well as genial and friendly feeling. In thinly settled localities, the habit of bowing to every one you meet is an excellent one, evincing as it does kindness of feeling toward all.

When meeting a lady who is a stranger, in a hallway, upon a staircase, or in close proximity elsewhere, courtesy demands a bow from the gentleman. In passing up a stairway, the lady will pause at the foot and allow the gentleman to go first; and at the head of the stairway he should bow, pause, and allow her to precede him in the descent.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Absinthe.

The French drink Absinthe is imported extensively in this country. A New York paper describes its effects in this way. "It is much more perilous, as well as deleterious, than any ordinary liquor. Its encroachments are scarcely perceptible. A regular absinthe drinker seldom perceives that he is dominated by its baleful influence until it is too late. All of a sudden he breaks down; his nervous system is destroyed; his brain is inoperative; his will is paralyzed; he is a mere wreck; there is no hope of his recovery. Victims of intemperance of the common sort frequently reform; but the absinthe drinker, after he has gone to a certain length, very rarely does or can throw off the fatal fascination. The more intellectual a man is the more readily the habit fastens itself upon him."

This beats sod corn whisky which is warranted to kill at eighty rods; but if men are going to destroy themselves by intemperance the quickest way is the best.

Here is an excellent recipe for staining wood dark mahogany, cherry or rosewood color: 1. Boil half a pound of logwood in three pints of water, and add half an ounce of salts of tartar. 2. Boil half a pound of madder and a quarter pound of fustic in one gallon of water. 3. Boil one pound of Brazil wood and one ounce of washing soda in one gallon of water; apply and then brush over it before dry a solution of two ounces of alum in one quart of water. With these wood, if dry, may be stained in the cold, but the dyeing will be accomplished far more quickly and satisfactorily if the liquids are applied hot.

Tea-Tasters in New York.

There are, says Dr. Dane, probably more than 100 firms engaged in tea-tasting in this city. In all of their offices there are large tables with round revolving tops. A circle of tea-cups is placed along the edge of these. The tea-taster sits down before the display of crockery and tastes one cup after another, moving the table top around. In the center of the table is a pair of scales with a silver half-dime in one of the balances. One or two large kettles are kept constantly with boiling water in them. When a sample of tea is to be tasted, as much is weighed out as will balance the half-dime. This is put in a tea-cup and boiling water poured on. The tea-taster then stirs up the leaves, lifts them on his spoon and inhales the aroma. At the same time he generally takes a sip of the infusion, holds it in his mouth for a short time, and then spits it out. Enormous brass cuspidores, holding two or three gallons, receive the tea thus tasted and the contents of the cups that have been examined. On some occasions, when a large amount of tea of a certain kind is to be bought, many samples of this are brought in from different houses. The buyer and sellers sit around the revolving tables with the samples made into infusions in the cups before them. These are "tasted" all around, the "body," "fineness," "toastiness," etc., are learnedly discussed, and the poorer specimens discarded. Then those that are left are tested again and the number further reduced. So it goes on until the article which unites the desired quality and price is obtained.

Performances with Mouth and Feet.

The following is extracted from the "Diary of John Rous" (Camden Society) p. 84: "Some years since I saw in Holborn, London, near the bridge, an Italian, who with his mouth did lay certain sheets of paper together, one upon another, lengthwise, between the right hand and the left; and then he took a needle and pricked it through the one end, and so then the other, so that the paper lay sure. Then he took a short text pen, and dipped it in a standish ink-horn of lead, and therewith wrote Laus Deo semper, in a very fair text hand (not written with his hand, but with his mouth;) then with another pen he flourished daintily about these letters in divers forms. He did, with his mouth, also take up a needle and thread, pricking the needle right down, out of which he pulled the thread, and took another by (fitter) and put it into the needle. Then, therewith he took three stitches in the cloth with a linen wheel (prepared with a turner's device for the foot.) He did spin with his mouth. He wrote fair with his left foot. He used a pencil and painted with his mouth. He took a pretty piece, or gun, with his toes, and poured in a paper of powder, pulled out the scouring-stick very nimbly, rammed in the powder, put up the stick, pulled up the cock with his toes; then another short piece, charged (that had a Swedish firelock,) being put in his mouth by another man, he held it forth and discharged it, and forthwith with his toes he discharged the other. He gathered up four or five dice with his foot, and threw them out neatly. His hands were both shrimped and lame."

A Test of Indian Courage.

An Indian inter-tribal fair was held, not long ago, in order to show some of the results of civilizing the savages. A number of tribes attended and displayed articles of home manufacture, such as needle-work, embroidery, lace work and blankets. Many of the Indians had their pictures taken, and showed a childish delight in looking at their faces. Others, however, could not be persuaded to go near the camera. Yellow Bear, of the Arapahoes, was the first to pass through the ordeal of a sitting. He suffered himself to be properly seated, and then the camera to be brought to bear upon him; but when the prepared plate was placed in the box, and the cloth lifted, he leaped to his feet at a bound, and attempted to leave the tent. All attempts to reason with him failed. At last a photograph of a Cheyenne, taken some years ago, was shown him. He looked at it a moment then went quietly back to his chair, and sat there like a statue while the negative was taken. He explained that no Cheyenne warrior was a greater brave than he. The gigantic Osages on the other hand, would not approach the tent. They say the camera robs them of their good spirits. The Kickapoos gave the very same reason, and the photographer was peremptorily ordered out of the country on that account. The Indian is a profound believer in the power of spirits for good or evil, and takes care never to offend them.

Maine's Liquor Law.

Maine has at length got a liquor law to evade which will require the utmost ingenuity of the wine sellers and the wine bibbers. Thus far a loophole of some sort has always been found in the statutes framed on the subject. The interested classes have jumped through them as easy as an accomplished circus rider takes a flying leap through a paper hoop. When the ordinary liquor saloon was compelled to put up its shutters, the private club came into existence, and when payment for liquor was prohibited, the dispenser of the beverage found a way of giving it away and at the same time reaping the usual profit. Under the new law, if the sober solons of the state are not very much mistaken, all these tricks and evasions will come to naught. Club houses and all other similar contrivances are to be declared nuisances and suppressed upon sight. Giving liquor away is to be remorselessly punished. A person found intoxicated, either on the streets or in his own house, shall be sent to jail for thirty days; if he undertakes to do the thing a second time he will be given a vacation and an opportunity to reform for a term three times as long. Maine seems to be in earnest this time.

In 1743 there was quite an anti-tea agitation in Scotland, where it was pronounced by the famous Duncan Forbes to be "in many respects an improper diet, expensive, wasteful of time, and calculated to render the people weakly effeminate." During that time there was a vigorous movement all over Scotland for abolishing the use of tea. Resolutions were passed by town councils and the inhabitants of villages condemning it and advocating beer. Sir William Fullerton's tenants in Ayrshire entered into the following bond: "We, being all farmers by profession, think it needless to restrain ourselves formally from indulging in that foreign and consumptive luxury called tea; for when we consider the slender constitutions of many of higher rank among whom it is used, we conclude that it would be but an improper diet to qualify us for the more robust and manly part of our business; and therefore we shall only give our testimony against it, and leave the enjoyment of it altogether to those who can afford to be weak, indolent and useless."

TRIBULATIONS OF A PRINTING OFFICE.

The last week of January, in the year of grace 1881, was quite an eventful one in the HERALD establishment. Not that we were particularly crowded with printing, although a fair share of legitimate business was turned out of the office, but one of those streaks of ill luck struck us which occasionally befall the best regulated families.

On Monday morning Jan. 24th, Peeler found, upon building a fire in the boiler arch that the water-works refused to act. Jack Frost, or some other enemy, had invaded the water-pipes in the cellar and not a drop of water could be got. The first supposition was that the pipes were frozen in our own cellar, and we set at work to thaw them out. After two hours work we found the pipes all clear, and then concluded that the large village reservoir had frozen up. Wallace Gray was found and the hydrants were tried both above and below our office and they worked all right. These experiments consumed the entire day.—Meanwhile we had carried water from John Usborne's well on the adjoining lot and had pumped his well dry.

Tuesday morning therefore we took a new tack. Lyman Thorpe and his sprinkling wagon were drafted into the service to supply water to fill the tank that feeds the boiler, and efforts were made to clear the connecting pipe between Chicago street main and our office. An iron rod was worked into the pipe from the cellar about thirty feet, when gravel was struck.—The pipe had frozen and burst. Well, here was a snag we had not counted on. Chicago street was frozen about five feet in depth. It would require ten men about ten days to dig a trench and put in a new pipe. And when a new pipe was put in, it would take a row of coal stoves the whole length of the trench to keep it thawed out. Another flank movement therefore was decided upon.

On Wednesday morning William Kyle and his drive-well machinery were enlisted for a short campaign. He began work upon a drive-well at 10 o'clock A.M., and at supper time we had water works of our own. A pump was attached and the boiler tank was filled by hand. Thorp's faithful sprinkler had furnished our water supply during Tuesday and Wednesday. We then flattered ourselves that the battle had been won.

Upon building a fire on Thursday morning, the inspirator, which feeds the boiler from the tank in the cellar, refused to work. The roily water from the new well probably offended the dear little thing. But whatever the cause might be, it utterly refused to force a drop of water into the boiler. Billy nursed it carefully all the forenoon, rubbed it with grease, took it apart and wiped the valves, swore at it valiantly, and tried many other experiments, but it was of no avail; one might as well try to draw water from an iron pump handle with the thermometer at zero. Four o'clock Thursday afternoon came with no water in the boiler and no way to put it there. The paper must be printed on Thursday evening, the regular publication time, if we had to "bust the biler" to do it. At this stage of the game the livery men were pressed into the service. Gilchrist's bob-sleighs and a good team were brought around in short order, the newspaper forms and the sheets printed on one side were loaded into the sleigh, and Billy, Mac and the boss started for Adrian. Reaching Adrian about seven o'clock in the evening, we immediately repaired to the Press office, while Billy and Mac laid in a good square supper at the Lawrence House. We fortunately found Messrs. Stearns and Smith in their editorial sanctum looking over the noon mail which was only six hours late on that day. Our errand was soon made known, and like the Good Samaritan, they gave us a drink and took us in. Their pressman and feed-boy were sent for and by nine o'clock steam was up and the HERALD sheets were running through the Potter press in the basement of the Masonic Temple. The edition was all off before twelve o'clock, the printed sheets and forms were again packed into the sleigh, and with the thermometer at zero, we silently stole away for home. It was a bitter cold ride, but the longest journey finally came to an end. At two o'clock the HERALD was safely deposited in the office, and the men who took the trip to Adrian had finished their day's work. We take this occasion to tender our thanks to the proprietors and workmen in the Press office for their kind assistance in our time of need. Friday morning a stove was put up in the composing room, and the boys had the entire edition folded, mailed and in the postoffice before noon. Under the circumstances we concluded to let the printing machine take a rest for one week.

But to get in working order another flank movement was necessary. New pumps had to be rigged to fill the boiler and pump water from the well. A force pump exactly suited to our use was found at Brewer's foundry, and the job was given over to "Hud" Conkling to put the HERALD water works in running order at the earliest possible moment. On Thursday afternoon George went to Toledo, arriving there at seven P.M., the train being only two hours late. He went at once to Shaw & Kendall's foundry and luckily found them at work in the evening, as they are now crowded with repairing. They had just one boiler pump in the shop suited to our use, and by midnight they had the pump and a counter shaft to run it put in readiness to ship. Friday morning George came home with these articles, reaching Tecumseh promptly at five P.M. on the noon train. Meanwhile Brewer's foundry was enlisted in our behalf. A counter shaft for the force pump and pulleys was started, and Mr. Conkling by Saturday night had the work nearly finished for the two pumps, had both pumps in position and the force pump at work. On Sunday we obeyed the injunction of Scripture and took a rest. We presume the HERALD boys never needed a Sunday's rest more since the paper was founded on the 25th day of May, 1850. On Saturday morning a stove was put up in the counting room, so we were prepared to wait on customers with but little inconvenience. In fact during the entire break up last week, we continued to take subscriptions with great willingness and regularity. No man who showed a desire to pay his subscription a year in advance was turned away. Some of them left empty handed perhaps, but they invariably had a receipt in full for a year's subscription salted down in their pocket book. This was about the only redeeming feature in the week's experience.

After a Sunday's rest we felt better, for we had reached a point in the woods where we could begin to see through. On Monday the counter shafts were placed in position, and water was pumped into the tank by hand, so the boiler could be filled at times and thus we could keep the temperature a little above the freezing point. On Tuesday afternoon the last connections with the pumps were made, and a full head of steam was put on, and everything ran like a top. We had finally struck smooth water, and it has been splendid sailing since. Tuesday and yesterday evenings our presses were running till late at night and we shall continue to work evenings until we catch up with our present orders. Perhaps the luckless freeze up will do no harm after all, in the long run. We are now entirely independent, having water works of our own, and what is better still, they are not likely to get out of kilter. Our facilities for doing work rapidly and well are better than ever, and the business atmosphere is clearer after the storm. The boys all unite in setting it down as an eventful week. The boss considers it about as long a seven days as ever walked through his calendar. George allows that it was worse than running a brass band; Spike declares that during forty years in the printing business he never saw "such times" before; Billy allows that it was worse than going to Clinton three times a week; Peeler mildly intimates that he had rather clean out boiler flues once a day; Burley insists that he had rather take a pied form every day for a week than seven more such days of regular diet; Mac vows that it beats setting up a lawyer's manuscript legal record or a minister's marriage notice "all holler;" Moir pathetically enquired, with a tear in his eye, when he took his pay last Saturday night, "if work always run this way in a printing office;" Doug was off on the road three days last week in the crisis of the trouble, but the foretaste and hindtaste of the uneasiness satisfy him perfectly. Everything however is lovely now and the goose hangs high. The HERALD establishment is in order from cellar to garret. Pass in your business orders, friends. Your work will be done promptly, in good style and at low rates.

THERE are only four men in the county jail now. But the recent decision of the Supreme Court, in accordance with which all tramps are confined in the county jails, will fill up the cells as soon as the winter breaks up and gives the tramp an opportunity to engage in his vocation.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23, 1881.

Socially and politically the Capitol is now in the height of the liveliest of lively seasons. Between the holidays and the beginning of Lent there is always a grand round of social entertainments, both in private and official circles, and this season equals in that respect any that has gone before. In things political, too, there is great activity. Interesting proceedings in Congress come along with every day, and over some mooted legislation there is not a little excitement, while the days of the session are rapidly passing away. Preparation for the electoral count have brought nearly every member here for the first time since the session began. All pairs have been broken and every effort made by both parties to muster all their strength for the contests in hand. Then comes the inauguration of a new President, for which the preparations already engross much attention. The city is full of strangers, and Vennor's disagreeable weather has passed away, leaving them to enjoy the gayeties with which they are surrounded.

This is pre-eminently the winter city of our land. St. Augustine and those semi-tropical cities will be the genuinely invalid, but an astonishing lot of people come here for their health, so they say, but seemingly to run the round of these social and political excitements. No other city has so much winter sunshine; no other city affords so many diversions; and in no other city do so many idiots congregate. A restless, rushing business man from Chicago came here to see the town lately. After one day's dawdling about the marble buildings and sunny streets he characterized it as a city of loafers, since every man carried a cane and walked leisurely along as if in no particular hurry to get there. It is a life that one easily falls into, and after a few winters here, it requires disciplining to be content in a quieter town and a colder climate. Congressmen who come here for a term or two are loath to leave, and many never do even after their terms are out and another has taken the coveted place in the marble halls of the Capitol. One who had occupied a seat in the lower house several years lately wrote to a friend here, "I don't know what to do with myself at home in the winter. I keep thinking it is time to go back." The same feeling comes to them all, I believe, and to those who have filled other official stations here.

There is a "let up" in the wild hunt for office that is very marked. The Departments are not overrun by office-seekers as is usual, nor do they retigerate their heels in the President's ante-room as they did a few months ago. It is not for a moment supposed that there are not as many people wanting office now as ever, but they are holding back to tackle the new administration, being evidently of the opinion that their tenure of office, if successful, will be longer and more solid. There is thus a reserve force in waiting for President Garfield and his Cabinet. The Navy Department is the only one where the place-hunter shows anything like his wonted activity. Most of those hang around its waiting-rooms and corridors are from West Virginia. They want to gather in the crop before the weather is bad Secretary Goff has not responded very readily though. He has made about three or four appointments in his Department since he took charge of it.

It is no disgrace to want an office, and in these days the man who gets one has need to seek it pretty lively. They don't go round hunting for somebody to fill them to any alarming extent. All these Senators and Congressmen and heads of Departments who complain so much about applications for positions, and turn up their noses at the applicants, were not long since office-seekers themselves. Yet it is a mistake for ambitious young men to come here. Washington is filled with young men who are living on salaries, and who, if these salaries were taken away, in many cases would have left no means of support. Most of them live, not on the interest, but on the principal of such estate. And yet they live up to it as if such salary were the natural increase of some safe investment. If Hancock had been elected, much distress to such would have ensued, and instantly. Such young men as I allude to have been taken away from the average pursuits of men; they have neither trades, nor professions, nor business associations. All their hope lies, therefore, in such economy as may accumulate enough to fall back on in the wet days; for, notwithstanding all that is said about civil-service it will never be put on the same footing as exists in the Army and Navy.

Quite an animated scene transpired in the Redemption Division of the Treasury Department the other day when the safes and boxes from the cars consumed in the late railway disaster near Elmira, N. Y., were received. The money packages were burned to gossamer-ashes, and the lady-clerks were expected to distinguish numbers so that they could be redeemed in new crisp notes. DOM PEDRO.

LAST week a certificate of death was received at the Health Office at Washington, D. C., of Sally Hunter, aged 115 years. Sally was born in Westmoreland County, Virginia, in 1766, and belonged to the Washington estate, being one of the servants manumitted by the General's will. It is stated that this is probably the very last of the servants of George Washington.

SAYS a St. Paul (Minn.) dispatch: The Pioneer-Press has just received from its Fort Buford special advices from a runner who reports that he learned at Woody Mountain that Sitting Bull has surrendered to the Canadian mounted police, and proposes to go to Buford under their escort, for fear of bodily harm. The report lacks official confirmation, but looks reasonable in the light of late official advices.

SIX miles north of Pana, Ill., Theodore Votrin, a small farmer, had a dispute with his wife, in the course of which his temper got the better of him, and gathering up a shot-gun close at hand, he shot his wife in the neck, severing the jugular vein, causing immediate death. He then made several attempts to take his own life with the same weapon, shattering his jaw considerably, and the account says he may die yet.

A BILL is before the Senate of the Dominion Parliament for the incorporation of the European, American and Canadian Cable Company. The Company proposes to lay an independent cable to Europe and make Montreal the center of news distribution, independent of New York. The capital stock of the Company is $7,500,000, in shares of $100. The promoters are composed of wealthy Canadian capitalists.

THE Legislative Committee investigating the management of the Female Reformatory at Indianapolis has brought to light the fact that considerable cruelty exists in that institution. Girls ten, twelve and fourteen years old are ducked in cold water, where they are kept twenty minutes, then spanked, or strapped, and put to bed. Lizzie Cash had her hearing permanently injured by being pounded on the head. Mrs. Cynthia A. Beals testified that all the children hvae the itch and syphilis in the hospital department.

ICE in the Ohio River has done considerable damage. At Wheeling the steamer Mallie Ragon was left high and dry, and will prove almost a total loss. At Louisville the towboat Etna was cut down, and may have to be wrecked, and the Silver Cloud had a hole cut in her, but she was so far repaired as to be able to proceed on her way. The steamer Eldorado, which was cut down at Portsville some days ago, is now nearly covered with water, and the Clifton, sunk at Carrollton, Ky., may have all her upper works carried away.

A NEW telegraph company is organizing in Chicago for the purpose of constructing a line between Chicago and New York City; and eventually, it may be, to other points in the United States, and by a new cable line to Europe. Articles of incorporation have been forwarded to the office of the Secretary of State at Springfield, and a certificate has been granted. The name of the new organization is the Chicago and International Telegraph Company, and its object is declared to be the construction and operation of a telegraph and telephone line between Chicago and New York. The capital stock is $1,000,000, with power to increase to as much larger an amount as may prove to be required. The incorporators and leading movers in this matter are some of Chicago's heaviest capitalists, including N. K. Fairbank, Marshall Field, Perry H. Smith, Geo. L. Dunlap, Henry W. King, George C. Walker, W. T. Crosby, John B. Lyon and others.

THE people of Tecumseh are under obligations to Prof. Fairfield for the coolness and presence of mind displayed by him when the fire broke out in the central school building last Tuesday. He quietly dismissed the pupils and prevented a panic among them, and then with the help of a few larger boys went into the basement and extinguished the flames. The janitor also rendered good service where it was most needed. The furnace was repaired Tuesday evening and school proceeded yesterday morning the same as usual.

A SMELL OF FIRE.

About half past three Tuesday afternoon the fire bell sounded the alarm and the word soon spread that the Central School building was on fire.—The word brought every one out to help draw the hose carts as if their own dwelling was on fire. The boys had the carts nearly to the school house, and the engine was close behind pouring forth volumes of smoke when a crowd returning announced that the fire was out. The announcement was received with general satisfaction, especially by the firemen, whose anticipations of handling wet hose in this weather, were not filled with much pleasure.

An attaché of the HERALD, who had nearly reached the school house before he heard that the fire was out, was not to be baffled thus but kept on plodding through the snow drifts until the school house was reached.—Here he found the janitor, Thomas Wyrill, bustling around in a high state of excitement, not so much on account of the fire as a smashed toe which resulted from his foot coming in too close contact with a falling board in his hurry to extinguish the fire. Mr. Wyrill, with considerable disgust at the indiscretion of the persons who constructed the furnace, pointed out the cause of the fire.

When the school house was built, the furnaces were supplied with air by wooden conductors, one end being on the outside of the building the other being enclosed in the furnace by brick work, in close contact with the brick which covered the arch of the furnace. In course of time all but one attached to the furnace on the east side were taken down from the furnaces and tin ones substituted. But this one remained in its place until last Tuesday, when the wood becoming heated to such a high degree that a fire broke forth. The smoke was carried up through the register into the room occupied by Miss Wimple. Noticing the unusual amount of smoke coming from the register she sent a scholar down to see what was the cause. He immediately returned with the news that the air conductor was on fire.

Professor Fairfield was notified and he quickly dismissed the different rooms without any confusion. Mr. Wyrill and a number of the scholars soon had water enough down the conductor to extinguish the fire and place the building beyond danger. This was the fate of the last wooden air conductor, which will now undoubtedly be replaced with a tin one.

R. J. BURDETTE.

Bob Burdette, of the Burlington Hawkeye, stands at the head of the humorous lecturers now on the platform. The people of Tecumseh and vicinity will have an opportunity of hearing this celebrated humorist tomorrow evening at the Opera House. Read what the newspapers say about him:

Chicago (Ill.) Times: In "The Rise and Fall of the Mustache" there is an intermingling of food for both tears and smiles. The tracing of the growth and decline of man in this sketch is a work of art, and embodies a comprehension and sympathy that have fallen to the lot of but few humorists.

Erie (Pa.) Despatch: He was amusing, never grossly so, but with a keen wit that prolonged the first ripple of laughter into hearty applause and mirth. He was original in everything; nothing was repeated from books or other humorists, but the humor was fresh and racy.

Cleveland (Ohio) Leader: But like the shadow of a cloud athwart the summer's sunshine, the sadness of exquisite pathos touched the wit and glee of the lecture. Tears filled the eyes, even while the lips of the audience were wreathed in smiles, and many a heart throbbed with the memories the tender beauty his descriptions of home evoked.

Toledo (Ohio) Blade: The lecture was delivered without notes, but it was as uninterrupted as though impromptu. Mr. Burdette talks to his audience, and holds them in unbroken interest.

Lafayette (Ind.) Courier: Of the lecture, it is enough to say that as an exquisite specimen of word painting, it is worthy of Dickens. In original and genuine humor, it was pure, fresh and sparkling as a mountain brook, and in its little touches of pathos, and in deeper waters where he touched the sad and serious problems of life, it flowed as calm and majestic as a river.

Indianapolis (Ind.) Sentinel: The lecturer was thoroughly en rapport with his hearers, and kept them interested and amused from the first sentence until, in a storm of applause, he bowed himself from the stage.

Indianapolis (Ind.) Journal: The lecture gave infinite satisfaction. It was full of side-splitting fun, and was greeted with an almost continual round of laughter and applause.

Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel: A very noticeable feature in his lecture was the wide range of his humor, and the entire absence of coarseness and buffoonery.

WE are under special obligations to the proprietor and editor of the Adrian Press, and also to their men for substantial favors and assistance given us last week Thursday in running off our edition. It was a favor rendered just in the nick of time and it will not be forgotten. We do not wish Bro. Stearns the same luck we had, but we shall be happy to reciprocate the favor in some way.

THE POLITICAL PROHIBITION PARTY.

While tarrying for a day in a neighboring State, my attention was called by a gentleman and his wife to an article in the HERALD of Jan. 20, under the above caption, in this way; the lady says: "You got quite a slur in the HERALD this week." "No," says the husband, "I guess some of those liquor dealers took offence at something you said and thought to give you a whirl through the HERALD." If the writer has been as successful in the impressions he has made regarding his temperance sentiments upon all the readers of the HERALD as upon those, it is unfortunate for the cause of temperance, to say the least.

I do not see how any more errors could easily be contained in an article of the length of this. 1st, he brands the Lever as the special organ of the Prohibition party. I am very sorry to have to inform the gentleman that this "constantly hopeful yet constantly waning party" has at present no organ in this State. The Lever has never been its organ, though some of its friends have tried hard to induce its editor to make it such, and I tremble for Anti-Zophar if Bro. Van Fleet gets hold of this slander, he will surely find himself in a hornets nest. 2d, the Prohibition party never polled in this town 150 votes, 101 being the most ever cast at any one time, and in this instance only 47 straight votes, the balance being more or less badly split. 3d, Anti-Zophar accuses me of taking exceptions to a Sabbath school temperance meeting because it was not held in the interest of the Prohibition party. Those who read my article in the Lever will, I think, decide this accusation as "far fetched" and treat it as I do, without any reply further than to say that "a hit bird will flutter."

Now let me imagine Anti-Zophar standing with the Prophet Elijah at the foot of Mount Carmel, and if he should follow up his course of reasoning, I should hear him advise about thus: Now Elijah, you had better stop and think what you are about; you have been troubling all Israel for a long time, and here you are all alone—only you, a prophet of the Lord, while here arrayed before you are four hundred and fifty of the prophets of Bael and four hundred of the prophets of the Groves, do you suppose you are wise above all these men. Hadn't you better wait till the children of those men grow up and then see if you can't induce them to abandon their Idolatry, though I more than suspect that when that time comes they will be just foolish enough to do as they please. Don't you think it a little cheeky in you, to say the least, to attempt to wag so big a dog with so small a tail.

The scene changes and Darius, the King of the Chaldeans, sits in council surrounded by his Governors and princes, his counsellors and captains, the wise men of Chaldea are here, and the edict goes forth that no one shall offer a petition to any lord or monarch for thirty days, save only to Darius, the King, upon penalty of being thrown into a den of lions. There is a lawless Daniel in these parts; a man loyal to principle, and I suspect with all a good Prohibitionist, as I find him refusing to drink the wine from the King's table. Now here comes Anti-Zophar with his counsel to this fellow: Now Daniel, just look at those princes and captains, counsellors and governors, and even King Darius, of the Chaldeans. Do you know more than all these men? They say you sha'nt do this thing. Now don't you think it wonderful cheeky in you to set yourself up as a wiseacre in the face of this array of wisdom. Away with you Daniel. "Of wisdom like yours there is no small supply with us." Don't you see they are all against you. You are attempting to wag a very big dog with a very small tail.

Now seriously, if Anti-Zophar means anything, I take it that he means to say that because the Prohibition party cast less votes in 1880, during the Presidential contest, than they cast in 1878, during the State election, the people have branded the cause that the Prohibition party seek to advance, as worthless, and have decided to give it a severe letting alone. If the first were true, the second might follow; but according to Merritt Moore, chairman of the State central committee, there were more votes cast for President in 1880 than in 1876. I question whether the masses of thinking people will be quick to judge of any great moral or political question by the number of its friends. If this were true, the great ruling party of to-day would never have been, and we should still have been resting under the curse of American slavery. I confess to being hopeful, and indulging this hope, I am confident that the time is not far away when it will be said of this Prohibition party, "a little one has become a thousand," and that the time will be when those now calling themselves temperance men will arise above all party affiliations and predjudices and acquit themselves like men who dare to do right. There are thousands of men to-day who ten years ago stood just where these men stand, unable to see that any good could come to the temperance cause outside of their party, but who to-day have freed themselves from these shackles, and who act and talk and pray and vote all to the same end. Unlike many who call themselves Prohibitionists and are not, they are in no sense party; and there is not one true Prohibitionist on the earth who would not bury his party so deep that it would not have a resurrection, if by this the terrible wrong of drinking and selling rum could be abated. Will Anti-Zophar say as much of the members of his party.

I do not say that the Prohibition party as it present organized will be successful; nor do I care whether it is or not, but I believe and hope that, history repeating itself, as in the case of the old anti-slavery party, a party will be organized that will take on all the elements of temperance, perhaps absorbing the present Prohibition party, and that will, in the face of all these cute sayings and this friendly opposition, march on to victory.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

WHEREAS it has pleased Almighty God in his infinite wisdom to remove from our midst by death, our beloved pastor and teacher, Elder N. L. Swank who during his residence among us had endeared himself to us by his most excellent qualities, and by his earnest devotion to his duties in the church and sabbath school, and who in the midst of his life of usefulness has been called to his eternal reward.

WHEREAS, Our pastor by his daily walk and conversation as a christian minister has left a noble example worthy of imitation.

Resolved, That while we deeply deplore his loss, we humbly bow with submission to the divine will of Him who is too wise to err, too good to be unkind.

Resolved, That during his ministration we have ever found him a true worker, a cheerful and willing helper and a ready sympathiser with those who mourned the loss of loved ones.

Resolved, That we as a school will hold his memory in grateful remembrance and will cherish his many deeds of love and kindness.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved companion, children and friends our heartfelt sympathy in their great affliction and pray to Him who alone can give consolation to heal the sorrowing hearts made desolate, feeling assured that their loss is his eternal gain, and that through the mercy of God, this bereavment so sad to his family, to ourselves, and to the community has proved to the departed an entrance into that rest that remains for the people of God. Truly he rests from his labors and his works do follow him.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect, the officers, teachers and scholars wear a badge of mourning for the space of sixty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD and the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and that a copy of the same be inserted in our church record and Sunday School minutes, and that a copy of the same be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

A Serious Fall.

Last Sunday evening Miss Ann Hewitt met with a most serious accident. She was going after a pail of coal and started to descend the stairs in the rear of the house. Her feet slipped from under her, throwing her body so that she fell between the stairs and railing to the ground. The distance of the fall was twelve feet. Miss Hewitt was found a short time afterwards in a senseless condition by Mrs. Prof. Fairfield. She was taken into the house and medical assistance dispatched for. Upon examination Miss Hewitt was found to have received serious internal injuries, the spinal column being injured. It was some time before she was in a conscious condition; but is slowly recovering.

GEORGE E. STEVENS' troupe played Uncle Tom's Cabin at the Opera House last Saturday night to a good house. The play, although having been upon the boards for a long time, for a play of its nature, was rendered quite interesting by the acting and the novelties connected with the play. The donkey was a clever beast and produced considerable mirth. Four large blood hounds gave a high sense of reality to the chase of escaping slaves. The play, if tedious, became so on account of its extreme length, it being nearly twelve before the drop curtain fell for the last time.

DIED.

IVESON—At the residence of Mr. Alvah Raymond in Raisin, January 23d, 1881, Annie Iveson, aged 91 yrs., 6 months, and 16 days.

Mrs. Iveson was born and educated in England, being in a well bred family by the name of Beardwood who resided in Blackbourn. At the age of 22 yrs. she was married to Mr. John Iveson of Islington, England, with whom she came to America in 1817. They resided at North Hempstead, Long Island, N. Y. until the autumn of 1838 when removing with their family to Michigan, they settled in the southwestern part of Woodstock, where they resided until Mr. Iveson's death which took place in May 1864. The bereft widow made her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. Raymond of Raisin during the last few years of her life. The infirmities of age and long years of toil made her a fit subject of most watchful care, and great credit is due Mrs. Raymond for her vigilant and tender manner of treatment.

The ceremony of respect was performed by Rev. Daniel Binns in the village of Addison on the Tuesday following her death, remains being deposited in Chapman burial place on the Chicago turnpike by the side of those of her husband. While the two inanimate forms await patiently the dawning of the resurrection morn, those with whom their affections were identified in life will turn again to the busy world and plod on as before. Thus doing, may some kind spirit cause them to strive earnestly for a reunion in the great beyond where associations will be perpetual and indissoluble, filled with glory that fadeth not away.

Rev. In a travel of over 100,000 miles by public conveyances I never met with an accident, or was a moment too late when it depended upon my own exertion. I never sang a song or played a game of checkers, billiards or croquet, or any game of cards. I never skated, a rod, or struck a man a blow with my fist. I can repeat more of the bible than any man living of whom I have any knowledge. I have given away more real estate to Coldwater than all its other inhabitants. EPIDEMICS.—Just now coughs, colds, lung and bronchial complaints seem to be epidemic. In these cases of sudden colds the best thing to do is to get a bottle of N. H. American Ball-Blue is a favorite article in American laundries. Try it; you will never use any other. It is just what you want.

Household Hints.

Neuralgia Remedy.—Prepare horse radish by grating and mixing in vinegar the same as for table purposes, and apply to the temple when the face or head is affected, or the wrist, when the pain is in the arm or shoulder.

Fruit Stains in Linen.—To remove them rub the part on each side with yellow soap, then tie up a piece of pearl ash in the cloth, and soak well in hot water, or boil; afterwards expose the stained part to the sun and air until removed.

To Remove Freckles.—It is said the following wash will remove freckles: Muriatic acid, two drachms; spring water, one pint; lavender water, two drachms. Mix for a lotion, to be applied on a piece of linen or sponge two or three times a day.

Mustard Plaster.—By using syrup or molasses for mustard plasters, they will keep soft and flexible, and not dry up and become hard, as when mixed with water. A thin paper or fine cloth should come between the plaster and the skin. The strength of the plaster may be varied by the addition of more or less flour.

To Remove Grease Spots.—Take a lump of magnesia, and rub it, wet, over the spot; let it dry; then brush the powder off, and the spot will disappear. Or, take a visiting or other card; separate it, and rub the spot with the soft internal part, and it will disappear without taking the gloss off the silk.

To Bronze Plaster Statues.—In bronzing plaster statues, the powder is dusted over the statue while it is yet sticky from a coat of turpentine varnish. The best way is first to give a few coats of alcholic shellac varnish, and then the coating of turpentine varnish, as otherwise the latter is too quickly absorbed. Let it stand till half dry and sticky, and then dust over any color of bronze-powder to suit the case.

Rats.—A correspondent of the Gardener's Monthly says: "I tried the effect of introducing into the entrance of their numerous holes, runs, or hiding places, small portions of chloride of lime, or bleaching powder, wrapped in calico and stuffed into the entrance holes, and thrown loose by spoonfuls into the drain from the house. This drove the rats away for a year, when they returned to it. They were again treated in the same manner with like effect. The cure was most complete. I presume it was the chlorine gas which did not agree with their olfactories."

Hard words never daught wisdom, nor does truth require them.

Apple Cake.—Three-fourths cup mother, better one and one-half cups super white of eight eggs, one-half cup sweet milk, two cups flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder. The yolks of the eggs and the same other ingredients make gold cake.

Sunshine Cake.—Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, one cup of milk, four cups of flour, the whites of four eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one pound of raisins, a pinch of salt.

Gold Cake.—Two cups fine top of sugar, one cup of flour, one teaspoonful cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful soda, pinch of salt. Bake two hours, spend this in long time. Answer, as other respect an pike, but put in three yolks. The will not break in rolling unless they is too much flour in it.

Major Pound Cake.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, one-half pound of butter, four eggs and one cup of warm water. Use unsifted flour, or rub into the flour before adding two teaspoonfuls of any good baking powder. The cup of water must be quite warm, but not actually hot. Beat eggs separately.

Farina Pudding.—Five ounces of farina stirred gradually, and boiled in one quart of milk; then set it aside; separate the yolks and whites of five eggs; beat the whites to a stiff froth, and stir the yolks and sugar together, then mix all into the cool boiled farina; flavor and bake.

Cottage Pudding.—Work two cups flour into thoroughly two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one egg, one teaspoonful butter, three quarters of a cup of sugar, one-half cup of sweet milk; flavor with lemon. To be baked quickly and eaten warm hot, with suitable sauce.

Sauce for Puddings.—Three quarters of a cup of butter, one and one-half cups sugar, one egg, juice and grated rind of a lemon; beat well together. Just before serving, pour on the beaten mixture one pint of boiling water and stir till cooked.

Stewed Figs.—Wash one pound of dried figs and put in an enameled stew-pan, with water sufficient to cover them well. Let them come to a boil, and then simmer gently for an hour; squeeze in the juice of two or three limes and eat hot or cold. No sugar is required, as the syrup from the figs is very rich and sweet.

Bread and Meat Unlaid.—Chop your cold meat very fine, then soak your bread in cold water till it is very soft; take it in the hands and squeeze as much of the water out as you can, having two-thirds as much bread as meat; mix the bread and meat thoroughly together; beat three eggs well and mix in; add salt to taste; make in balls the size of a biscuit, and fry slowly in butter or cooking fat till brown on both sides.

To Fry Beef's Liver.—Cut the liver in slices about two-thirds of an inch thick; soak in cold water about quarter of an hour; have ready some butter in the spider, when hot, put in liver; season with salt, pepper, and an onion chopped fine. Dust a little flour over the top; cover tight to keep steam in as much as possible; add a little water while cooking to keep it from getting dry; do not let it burn; when brown, turn on the other side; put on a little more salt, pepper and flour; when done take the liver out on a platter, put in about a teacup of sweet milk; if not thick enough, add a little more flour, wet in milk, until you get it about the thickness of beef gravy; pour over the liver, and serve. This is the Swedish way of cooking it.

Boiled Custard.—Put two quarts of fresh milk on the fire, and let it come nearly to a boil; while it is on the fire beat well together the yolks of twelve eggs and a half pound of sugar; pour it into the milk while on the fire, and stir it to a point; remove it, stirring occasionally, and as soon as it has lost the raw taste of the egg, it is done, and must be taken off immediately, but do not stop stirring, and even after you have set it on the table, where you must be it set a few minutes before pouring it out, always stir one way, or your milk will curdle.

In the first terrible winter spent by the Pilgrims at Plymouth, in Massachusetts, the seeds of pulmonary diseases were planted, and took deep root in families which became the progenitors of thousands of the American people. The prevalence of consumption, thus early developed, directed the attention of the most eminent physicians and scientific men to an investigation of its cause and the means of prevention and cure. The best results of professional studies on this subject are combined in Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is now recognized as the world's remedy for coughs, colds, consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. We believe it to be absolutely certain in its remedial effect. It is a safe, pleasant and reliable remedy, and if kept on hand in every household, will prove, in many cases of colds, coughs, &c., a means of preventing more serious results.—Richmond, Va., Religious Herald.

Slavery of Farmer's Wives.

No single newspaper article of the present decade created a profounder sensation than the Chicago Times' editorial on the slavery of farmer's wives. It enforced thought and inquiry, and thus awakened the public mind to an enormity that hitherto has excited but little attention. It is not urged that all farmers's wives are drudges. Many of them perform no more work than is essential to vigorous health. But thousands and tens or thousands of them are worked into their graves. These are the women who build the fires, cook meals three times a day for a force of men, feed and milk the cows, do the washing and ironing for a dozen persons, make the butter and cheese, do marketing, put up the fruits, cultivate the kitchen garden—the women who commence their round of toil by starlight in the morning, an hour or more before the stronger men are out of bed—and end it near midnight, hours after the same strong men go to bed and sleep. The farmer, working hard himself, and hearing but few complaints from his toiling wife—doing his work and seeing that hers is done, asks no questions; and no doubt feels that while his wife can get through with her work, it would be needless expenditure of means to hire a servant to help her. When at the age of 40, from hard work and child-bearing, she takes on the appearance of a woman of 60, he concludes that she "didn't have a strong constitution," and that she would have fared better had she been the wife of a carpenter or shoemaker. We repeat, that the slavery to which we allude, is not the lot of all farmers' wives. Many farmers are as considerate for the health of their wives as they are for their own health, but the fact is undeniable, nevertheless, that, as a class, the wives of farmers are over-worked. The insane asylums tell this story; the worn and exhausted appearance of many of the women themselves tell it, and the average of their lives tells it in a shape that cannot be misinterpeted.

Cultivate One Talent.

One talent, well cultivated, deepened and enlarged, is worth a hundred shallow faculties. The first law of success at this day, when so many matters are clamoring for attention, is concentration; to bend all the energies to one point, looking neither to the right nor to the left. It has been justly said that a great deal of the wisdom of a man in this century is shown in leaving things unknown; and a great deal of his practical sense in leaving things undone. The day of universal scholars is past. "Life is short, and art is long." The range of human knowledge has increased so enormously, that no brain can grapple with it; and the man who would know one thing well must have the courage to be ignorant of a thousand things, however attractive or inviting. As with knowledge, so with work. The man who would get along must single out his specialty, and into that must pour the whole stream of his activity—all the energies of his hand, eye, tongue, heart and brain. Broad culture, many sidedness, are beautiful things to contemplate; but it is the narrow-edge men, the men of single and intense purpose, who steel their souls against all things else, who accomplish the hard work of the world, and who are everywhere in demand when hard work is to be done.

Tonic for Fowls.

Some kind of tonic in the drinking water of poultry should at certain periods of the year be used, for their benefit, and to aid their digestion.

During the moulting process, and while the new coating of plumage is growing—though not actually diseased, as some persons suppose is the case, from their languid and changing appearance—they are "out of condition" decidedly.

Common tincture of iron, a few drops daily, mixed with fresh water, given them is excellent. Where this cannot be readily had, half a dozen rusty nails in the bottom of the drinking vessel, will serve this purpose well.

A bit of asafœtida within the fountain or bucket they drink from, is very good. And in colder weather—when the moulting season is passed—a pinch of Cayenne pepper in the water is desirable and beneficial.

Whatever is used for this purpose, it should be placed in their drink afresh, when the water is changed every day. Otherwise it will make their drink offensive to them—especially in hot weather.

About Colds.

The late Charles Sumner was a member of a consumptive family; all of his brothers and sisters but one were attacked by it as they reached manhood and womanhood. The disease began to develop itself in Mr. Sumner early in his public career. He was advised by his physician in Boston to dress warmly, protect his feet and body, and live in the open air, sawing wood and engaging, as far as possible, in manual labor, leading, in short, the life a laboring man would out of doors, and supplementing this regimen by sanitary precautions in temperature, diet and personal habits in the open air. In conclusion, we will add for the benefit of that class of the community who, as it would seem, delight in remedies and despise precautions, the recipe for a cold given by General George Washington to an old lady in Newport when a very young girl in 1781. He was lodged in her father's house—the old Vernon mansion—and as she was sent early to bed with a bad cold, he remarked to Mrs. Vernon: "My own remedy, my dear madame, is always to eat, just before I step into bed, a hot roasted onion, if I have a cold."

About Nutmegs.

Nutmegs grow on little trees which look some like pear trees, and are generally over twenty feet high. The flowers are very much like the lily of the valley. They are pale yellow and very fragrant. The nutmeg is the seed of the fruit, and mace is the thin covering over this seed. The fruit is about as large as a peach. When ripe it breaks open and shows the little nut inside. The trees grow on the island of Asia and in tropical America. They bear fruit for seventy or eighty years, having ripe fruit upon them at all seasons. A fine tree in Jamaica has over 4,000 nutmegs on it yearly.

When a boy walks with a girl as if he were ashamed, and afraid some one would see him, the girl is his sister. If he walks so close to her as to nearly crowd her against the fence, she is the sister of some one else.

Treatment of the Insane.

In the International Review, Dr. William A. Hammond has an important paper on "The Treatment of Insane." He says we need not look to the last century for instances in which the insane were believed to be possessed of devils. Coercion—in the forms of starvation, flagellation or confinement—was thought to be the only means of exorcising these devils and of restoring the mind to its normal condition. But should all these means of coercion fail, it was held that the evil spirit would let go its grip immediately upon the arrival of a lunatic in another world. So the death of a lunatic was supposed to be preferable to his recovery.

This antiquated system of coercion, Dr. Hammond declares, is still in existence. He gives a number of instances connected with the Longview Asylum in Ohio and the Kalamazoo Asylum in Michigan. The Onondago Asylum is also criticized for its damp dungeons and for its inhuman punishments. Blackwell's Island and the "Utica crib" also claim their share of attention.

Dr. Hammond advises that all such means of mechanical restraint should be abolished. In retaining them, he avers that we are behind the rest of the world. He contrasts the liberty allowed in the Belgian colony for the insane at Ghoel, and the French establishment of St. James, as evidence that release from restraint is not only parcticable but judicious. Dr. Hammond pleads that the insane should be allowed to write to their friends, and all the mysteries which surround the modern asylum should be cleared away by the management being placed in the hands of visiting and consulting physicians and surgeons who keep posted in the new science of neurology, and are not entirely engrossed in wire pulling to retain their places.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers, now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Why He Groaned.

In this county, no matter where, reside two lawyers, no matter whom. Suffice it to say these lawyers are young, genial, and deep in legal lore, and as such are occasionally sought after in criminal cases of small import. A very short time ago, no matter when, professional duties called them before a certain justice of the peace in the county. One was to prosecute and the other defend. The case was conducted with skill and ability, and the court, unaccustomed to such, beamed with deep admiration upon the young lawyers, and was happy. The time arrived for the prosecuting attorney to deliver his speech, and he waxed eloquent on the subject of carrying concealed weapons, and made a moving appeal in the name of the law that visibly affected the court muchly, who mentally vowed vengence against the culprit. All at once, however, and for some unacconntable cause his eloquence suddenly ceased. His left leg seemed to be troubling him beyond measure, and he affectionately grasped it with both hands and groaned dismally as he cast an appealing look towards the door, as if he desired above all earthly things to be on the outside. All at once the mystery was cleared up. An innocent revolver glided out of the pants onto the floor. The young attorney was incontinently floored, and the court, who had been revolving in his mind the propriety of sending for all the doctors in the neighborhood, was astonished—wiped his eyes and ahem'd ominously. The young attorney was unable to offer any excuse, and the court promptly fined him $25 and costs, and hereafter he will be more careful.—Fremont (Iowa) Democrat.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing.—Wherever once introduced and becomes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents). The only object, we are taught in Scripture, of such a being as Christ being born into the world was to be the Saviour to all men. To do this He must come in that condition which is most universal. If we think a moment we shall see that the great mass of humanity begin life at the foot of the hill, because of lowly circumstances. To be a Saviour there must not be anything in His relation to men, or in His position among them, to hinder the poorest in freely approaching Him. It would have been fatal to his influence in winning the hearts of men for them to think He condescended from wealth or station to minister unto them. And so to be a Saviour to the world Christ was born into it as one of the common children, and lived their experience. No grandeur of circumstances, no earthly dignity, cut Him off from personal contact and sympathy with the lowly. Everything in His speech and manner of life was suited to this object. Every condition to meet men on their own footing was completed by the birth of Christ.—Golden Rule.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

THE patrons of the telephone exchange at Washington, are making an energetic fight

A GREAT number of petitions are being received, being signed largely by merchants and bankers, asking for the repeal of the tax on bank deposits and circulation.

THE Committee on Elections in the House decided by a strict party vote to report in favor of unseating Representative Martin (Rep.), the sitting member, and seating Yeates (Dem.) the contestant.

MR. HILL, of Ohio, has been designated as the member of the sub-committee on Foreign Affairs to write a report on the Crapo resolution on the Monroe doctrine. He is indeed on this doctrine than Mr. Monroe ever pretended to be.

THIRTY-NINE clerks in the Navy Department have been discharged. These clerks have been on a temporary roll, and paid out of the appropriation for contingent expenses. Their removal is caused by the exhaustion of that appropriation.

THE President has approved the sentence of the General Court-martial in the case of Paymaster T. H. Nelson, of the army, which, it is that he shall be dismissed from the service, confined two years at hard labor in a Penitentiary (probably Albany), and fined $2,500.

THE President has sent to the Senate the name of ex-Senator Stanley Matthews, of Cincinnati, for Justice of the United States Supreme Court, vice Justice Swayne, resigned. Of course, Matthews is a Republican Ohio man, but, then, Justice Swayne was an Ohio man also.

THE Sunday Chronicle wants the President to recall Minister Christiancy and appoint Senator Bruce (colored) of Mississippi, as a substitute. It holds that Mr. Christiancy's representations of his "hideous young wife" unfits him for the position, which should at least be filled by a man of decency."

THE President has directed the following officers to be placed on the retired list: Brigadier General Wm. Dunn, Judge Advocate General; General Stewart Van Vliet, Assistant Quartermaster General, Lieutenant Colonel Samuel Woods, Deputy Paymaster General, and Major Joseph H. Eaton, Paymaster.

H. B. KELLY, of the Allen County Democrat, published at Lima, Ohio, died at the Imperial on the 22d inst., of apoplexy. He was with the Ohio Editorial excursion party, who were visiting Washington and other points east. Mr. Keller was aged about sixty years. The event cast a gloom over the entire party.

THE Senate proposes to find out who stole the report of the Chinese Treaties, and to do this, they propose to investigate with closed doors. Of course the stealing was done by correspondents, which will necessitate placing correspondents on the witness stand to testify. Just how they will manage to do this and keep the proceedings a secret from the press it seems has never occurred to them.

A BILL has been introduced in the House, authorizing the Public Printer to furnish an edition of 50,000 copies of each of the four volumes heretofore published of the Medical and Surgical History of the War. Should this bill become a law, it will enable every member and Senator to furnish free forever a physician in his district a complete set of this valuable information.

THE House Committee on the Inter-oceanic Canal referred back to the sub-committee the bill and report favoring the incorporation of Eads's Ship Railway across the Isthmus of Panama, with instructions to strike out that portion which provided for a guarantee by the Government of the stock to the amount of $60,000,000. It is thought that this failure to guarantee on the part of the Government will have the effect to kill the scheme.

A CORRESPONDENT writing under date of the 2d inst., says: "The Executive, Judicial and Legislative Appropriation Bill will be ready for the full Appropriation Committee early next week. The Post-Office Appropriation is reported to the House approximately $4,900,000 and is based upon estimates aggregating $44,475,000. The estimated receipts for 1882 is $36,400,000, leaving a deficiency larger than required to make the Postoffice Department self-sustaining. The amount appropriated for the Star Route service is $7,975,000, an increase of $873,000 over last year's Appropriation."

MR. SPRINGER's resolution instructing the Postoffice Committee "to inquire into the expediency of establishing by law a postal telegraph system under the Government of the United States," has been presented to the House with the recommendation that it pass for the following reason: "That it is evident that there is a general demand by the public for protection in telegraph communications from the extortion of a great telegraph monopoly that already its competitors are here practically eliminated, and this company, a tariff which pays dividends on stock believed to be largely watered, and therefore extortionate, should be made into the facts and legislation proposed is accordingly therewith."

THE Christiancy scandal—divorce case—is getting things in the State Department in bad odor. A correspondent under date of January 30, says: "Minister's business is in confusion at the Hague. He has not complied with its order for the payment of alimony, and until he purges himself from this contempt, no further testimony will be taken in his behalf. It is should come here now he would be at once arrested for contempt, and he called upon to show cause why he should not be punished for it. This is a sorry, sad, awkward position for the State Department and the President, and is to be added to the growing dimensions of this scandal. The diplomatic service is not securing glory from the situation.

DURING the discussion of the bill to alot lands to Indians in severalty, the intelligence and veracity of Miss Bright Eyes came up, which (neither is her) are decided by many, especially those who have been mainly purporting her. Senator Morgan, of Alabama, read an able letter on the subject of the bill and finishing, announced that "it was an Indian girl who wrote it—Miss Bright Eyes," whereupon Senator Hoar said: "The young Indian girl of whom he speaks addressed an audience in my city at a meeting at which I was present a few weeks ago and her address was eloquent, sensible, and one of the most moving that I ever heard from human lips. She is well educated and is a worthy equal to many ladies whom I know well, and she is a person whose acquaintance is and character are in my opinion, distinguished any of her own sex by their position in life. That was a handsome compliment for Miss Bright Eyes.

A TRAIN leaving Elmira on the Erie Road, at seven o'clock at night met with a terrible accident near Tioga Center. The driving wheel axel of the locomotive broke while the train was running at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour, and instantly the cars were hurled from the track, some of them turning over two and three times. The people as immediately took fire and four postal cars in the car received in the flames. In the confusion at was a passenger, Henry L. Brown, of Elmira. Efforts were made to rescue him. A hole was cut in a side door of the car, so that he got his head out, but his legs were fastened by a twisted up mass of express matter. The train men tried to pull him out, but the flames drove them away. They saw his hair and whiskers burned off, and then he put his hands on his eyes and fell back into the flames. Five men in all were burned, but no passengers were injured.

In the lives of the saddest of us there are bright days, when we feel as if we could take the great world into our arms. Then comes the gloomy days, when the fire will neither burn on our hearths nor in our hearts, and all without and within is dismal, cold and dark. Believe me, every heart has its secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad.

Honest and courageous people have very little to say about either their courage or their honesty. The sun has no need to boast of his brightness nor the moon of her effulgence.

XLVIth CONGRESS—THIRD SESSION.

SENATE.

turers of Philadelphia and Cincinnati in favor of the Reagan Inter-State Commerce Bill.

Senator Logan moved to lay aside all prior orders and take up the bill to place General Grant on the retired list of the army. The motion was opposed by Mr. Vest (of Mo.) and Mr. Butler, and after a lengthy discussion, was lost by a vote of 25 to 28.

The Indian Land in Severalty Bill was discussed at length.

Mr. Logan renewed his motion to postpone the pending order, and take up the bill to place Gen. Grant on the retired list of the army. After some debate the motion was rejected by a vote of 25 to 28, Lamar, of Mississippi, and Davis, of Illinois, voting with the Republicans.

The bill to pay the additional expenses of the South remains was passed, and the consideration of the Indian Land in Severalty Bill was resumed.

Mr. Harris reported favorably the bill relating to the Quartermaster's Actions (recorded) to the forces of Gen. Lew Wallace during the Morgan raid through Indiana.

The Postoffice Appropriation Bill, received from the House was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The consideration of the Indian Land in Severalty Bill was resumed, the question being upon Morgan's amendment adding a proviso, amendment of Mr. Hoar, conferring citizenship upon the Indians taking lands in severalty under the provisions of the bill. Mr. Morgan withdrew his amendment. A long discussion ensued, which ended in an executive session.

Mr. Dawes presented a petition signed by more than 50,000 citizens urging the speedy passage of the Indian treaties.

Bills to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy, and appropriating $75,000 for the improvement of the Wabash River, were referred.

Mr. Beck spoke for an hour, advocating the resolution for the repeal of all laws prohibiting American citizens from purchasing ships to engage in the foreign carrying trade, or which prevent registration of those as American ships, when owned, commanded, and officered by United States citizens. He was followed by Mr. Blaine.

A number of small bills were passed.

HOUSE.

Mr. Gillette introduced a bill for a double-track railway from New York to Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Mr. Acklen introduced a bill to regulate the collection of the customs duties on sugars.

Mr. Cox presented the majority report of the Committee on the Census, fixing the representation in the next Congress. It gives the total number of Congressmen at 311, and gives the sixteen slave-holding States a gain of twelve, and the States of the North, but six, a loss. The Republicans majority presented a bill which gives the number of Representatives at 325, and distributes the same from population, equally among the different sections.

The bill providing for the determination of claims, and the payment of interest on the Soldiers' Home of the District of Columbia, and the bill appropriating $100,000 for the monument commemorative of the battle of Saratoga were passed.

The Postoffice Appropriation bill was then taken up, a committee of the Whole.

The resolution directing the Postoffice Committee to inquire into the expediency of establishing a telegraph system under the Government of the United States was placed on the calendar.

The Republicans, under the lead of Mr. Hoar, obstructed by parliamentary tactics the passing of a resolution proposing a joint rule for counting the Electoral votes.

Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported back adversely the bill authorizing the President to negotiate for lands for the colonization of colored persons and it was laid on the table.

Mr. Speer called up the contested election case of Yeates vs. Martin, which produced protracted discussion. Business was brought to a standstill by a motion of Mr. Springer for the previous question, upon which the Republicans refused to vote, leaving the House without a quorum.

By virtue of the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the old Rose-Douglass case, Dr. Rose will undoubtedly be removed from the incumbency of his present professorship. His retirement may be the retiring of an able chemist, but at the same time according to the opinion of the Supreme Court and the majority of the students and professors of the University, it is the retiring of a defaulter as deft and clever as he is able in his profession.

Dated, Adrian, February 2, 1881.

WILLIAM H. WIGGINS,

ESTATE OF JAMES EAST.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Thursday, the 31st day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

East, praying that the instrument in writing now on file in the probate office, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and the letters testamentary thereon, be granted to petitioner, executor named in said instrument.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Lenawee HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. (A true copy.)

THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and is deservedly the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered which, as they contain no curative qualities can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

I. All the world's news as presented that the readers may get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the modern mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends for its importance upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN'S habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy, or to rebuke what is blameable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Constant disregard of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

With the dawn of another week our people are plodding about in the snow as usual, but rejoicing in the prospect of warmer weather in the "sweet by-and-by.

Jack Frost has secured possession of all the potatoes and apples which were buried out in this section, and many of those deposited in cellars.

The extreme cold weather of the past nineteen weeks occasion people in the village no little trouble to secure sufficient fuel and provender.

Mr. D. Weavers controlls the cooper trade here. His work is second to none in the county.

O. B. Bowen's well established harness trade receives a goodly patronage as in past time.

Frequent mention has been made in different papers through the county of Mr. H. S. Van Etten's prompt and elaborate manner of blacksmithing, yet we think the matter has not been overdrawn.

The Band of Hope society will give a public entertainment at the M. E. church Saturday evening. Exercises have been prepared with care for the occasion, and a full house is expected.

The Misses Kempton are now devoting their entire attention to dressmaking and hairdressing. Orders for work, in either line, will receive prompt attention and be finished in the most approved style.

Rev. Wm. Charles, of Tecumseh, is booked to preach at the M. E. church, at 3 o clock on Sabbath afternoons during the present month.

Parties desiring to purchase a pure article of drugs, at a moderate price, may be accommodated at Brown's new drug store in this place.

All classes of citizens unite in a grand jubilee over the now almost certain prospect of the new railroad, and laboring men are expecting good wages during the coming season.

Treasurer—Libbie Bennett.

The young people about here tho't that Mr. Arnold Pope's was just the place for a surprise party, so about twenty couple met there last Friday evening. The band was there and was kept busy until the "wee sma hours," only stopping long enough to partake of the bountiful repast that had been prepared for all.

William Cassell, of Palmyra, who was breaking on the D. & M. R. R, met with a fatal accident last Thursday morning. He fell between the cars, and one car run over him, crushing his leg. He then caught by the next car and dragged half a mile, when he was thrown from beneath the cars. When discovered he was conscious and remained so until his death on Sunday.

Mrs. Wittemeyer, of Philadelphia, lectured at the Presbyterian church in Palmyra, on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

DISTANCES ON THE D. B. & ST. L.

Charles H. Ellis, chief engineer of the Detroit, Butler & St. Louis road, has completed a fine map of the road with distances between stations. The latter are given from Grand Trunk Junction and are as follows, which we quote from the Free Press:

Hand—10¼ miles. Named in honor of Hon. Geo. E. Hand, of Detroit.

Romulus Junction—17 miles. Crossing of the Flint & Pere Marquette railway, and a point which will probably do a large business.

Belleville—21½ miles.

Willis—26½ miles. This is the first station in Washtenaw county, is in Augusta township, and is named in honor of Willis L. Potter. As there is a "Potter" on the Wabash line the given name of Mr. Potter was selected.

Milan—35¼ miles. This is the crossing of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad, and is the point where the Butler road receives all cars running over their line between Detroit and Toledo.

Holloway—50½ miles.

Jackson Branch crossing—52½ miles.

Adrian—56¼ miles.

Thurber's—63½ miles. The location of this station is not absolutely determined upon, and under certain possible circumstances it will be changed.

Griffith's—71 miles. This place, which is two miles north of Fayette, O., is contiguous to the State Line.

Mill Creek—84½ miles. The name of this place, which is the first stopping point in Ohio, will probably be changed to "Alverdon."

Montpelier—95 miles. Situated at the geographical center of Williams county, Ohio, and on the abandoned line of the Canada Southern railway. Montpelier has ineffectually attempted to become the county seat, that distinction now belonging to Bryan, which is in the southern range of townships. The advent of the Butler road has given this place a wonderful growth and the residents expect to carry their point next year.

Blakesley—102¼ miles.

Butler—102¼ miles. This is the terminus of the road under construction, the crossing of the Lake Shore and Michigan railroad, and the junction of the Eel River railroad, which is the connecting link with the Wabash.

The road as built is three and a half miles longer than an absolute "air line." The only deflexions are at the River Rouge, when, after passing through the yards at the Grand Trunk Junction, the road first strikes its course; at Belleville; at Adrian, where a curve is necessary on each side of the city, and at the St. Joseph river, where an offset is made to take the grade of the abandoned Canada Southern line through Montpelier, the original line being resumed near Butler.

LENAWEE COUNTY ITEMS.

The Adrian Press says that Superintendent Curtis has discharged the train men of both freights that collided at Clayton.

The Hudson Post says the cheeks of a good many of its townspeople look like two beer kegs, painted red. It is caused by the mumps, which are quite prevalent thereabouts.

Hudson Post: R. H. Armstrong has purchased a steam yacht of a Detroit man. It is a side-wheeler, and about 30 feet long. He intends to run it on Sand Lake the coming summer.

Adrian Times: A number of township treasurers have made final settlement with County Treasurer Cochrane. The rolls sent in show a much less amount unpaid than for many years.

Adrian Times: Several young ladies in this city have become expert billiardists, the club rooms affording them opportunities for practice; stimulated by the natural cue-riosity of their sex.

Hudson Post: At the grand lodge held in Detroit last week, the Warren and Maxson lodges of this place were consolidated, and the title of Hudson Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M. given the new order.

Hudson Post: Mrs. L. Holtenhouse of this village, has a quilt made from six thousand one huudred and twenty pieces. The patience required to piece such a quilt can only be found now with a few.

Adrian Press: Engineer Carroll, has been fourteen years in the employ of the Lake Shore road and has been many times at the depot here; yet he never saw an opportunity to come down into the city until Tuesday last.

Adrian Press: Adrian has a Board of Trade in full blast. The members expect it will flourish when the trade winds strike them. At present they are engaged in "calls" and puts.—They call for drinks, and put for home.

Hudson Gazette: The long agony is over. C. C. Pease has been appointed deputy sheriff for Hudson. There are other hearts that will ache, but we believe the action of sheriff Bidwell meets the general approval of the zealous, working element of the Republican party in this locality.

Clinton News: On Tuesday evening of last week, as Miss Lottie Monroe was returning home from meeting at the Congregational church, she slipped and fell, seriously injuring her spine. She has since been confined to her bed, but with good nursing her friends hope she will speedily recover from her injuries.

Clinton News: The boys of the Clinton Union Schools have formed themselves into three companies for the purpose of preserving order to and from school and at recess, each company having elected officers, and being fully distinguished by each member wearing a ribbon on his coat of the company's chosen color.

Deerfield Record: The iron pipe through which water is pumped from the river to Blinn & Weidmann's stave mill, froze up last Saturday. The mill hands have been busy during the week, in digging down to and thawing out the pipe, which they succeeded in doing Friday morning, when the mill commenced running.

Adrian Times: The board of trade is in correspondence with several large manufacturing enterprises which desire to locate elsewhere. Adrian's advantages have been properly set forth, and a number of favorable responses have been received. In a few days representatives of an extensive wagon manufactory will visit the city and look over the ground.

Hudson Post: Dick's water flour mill has been closed a short time for repairs. They came very near having a cave-in there last Saturday night, caused by the water washing out the foundation, and had a force of carpenters working all day Sunday repairing it up. Ames' saw mill, north of town is also closed on account of the insufficient supply of water, and several other mills throughout the country report the same difficulty.

Hudson Gazette: Here's a good one: One of the Hudson mail-weighers was accosted by an old route agent on one of the trains as follows: "Where are you from?" "Hudson," was the prompt reply. "How large a town is Hudson?" next inquired the agent, with an air of perplexity. "About 3,000," replied the candid young man. "Great guns, that's a whopper!" came back quick as a shot, "I know more than 3,000 mail-weighers from that town!"

THE LILY.

A maiden said to a lily,
"I go to the dance to-night;
[illegible]
O lily, so pure and white"
But the lily answered: "O, maiden,
I should droop in the heat and glare,
And die in thy shining ringlets;
Place the glowing carnation there."

A bride saw the lily blooming:
"I go to the altar to-day;
In my bridal garland, sweet lily,
I will twine thy pale, beautiful spray."
Why sadden thy bridal, lady,
By wearing my cold, white flowers?
Sweet roses and orange-blossoms
Should gladden thy joyous hours."

A mother wept o'er the lily:
"In thy pallid beauty rare,
Thou shalt lay on my dead child's bosom
For surely thy place is there."
Oh, mourning, sorrowful mother
Thou hast seen the blossom fade,
On the shroud, on thy broken lily,
Be a wreath of immortelles laid."

A young girl whispered: "O lily,
Let me place thee on my breast;
For the sweet Lord Jesus cometh
To-day in my heart to rest."
And the lily answered: "Yes, maiden,
On thy heart let my blossoms be,
That my pure white petals may wither
Near the Lord of purity."

ANSON GREY.

Anson Grey was a still, stern man at thirty, shut up within himself and by himself, in his great stone mansion on the hill, and people knew no more about him than they knew about the dead. His early years had been passed abroad, where, or how, nobody knew and most had ceased to care, for that matter; the last two had been passed in Burlingame.

A brilliant light at night, shining from great east windows, and occasional gaps through the town, by day, were the only tokens of his presence. However a change was coming and that without warning. Anson Grey fell sick, suddenly and dangerously so. The village docter was summoned, who in turn telegraphed for another from the neighboring city in hot haste, and together, they said in whispers, that their patient would probably die. There was no woman in the great house to act as nurse, and the head servant, obeying doubtless his master's orders, refused to allow one there as yet.

How it came about was a mystery, but one morning, when the master had laid a week half senseless, an unusual cloud of dust was observed whirling up the hill, and emerging therefrom was a carriage, splashed and weather-stained, headed by two straining, panting horses, who came up to the entrance as if driven by the evil one. A lady, tall and fair as sunlight, pushed open the carriage door impatiently and sprang out. With a hasty glance around she hurried up the steps, entered the drawing-room and stood before the two astonished gentlemen who were seated there.

"Is Anson Grey alive?"

"Yes, but he grows worse."

Before they divined her intention, she had passed them, and was in the next room bending over the sick man.

"The devil will be to pay if she excites him now," the elder one said, "If some good nurse had come, it might have been of some use; but this dainty thing—bah!"

She came out in a moment, her face white but determined.

"Will you be kind enough to send for a minister and remain until he comes?" she asked, as she began to remove her things.

There was something in her manner that forbade questioning, and they obeyed her like so many dumb men, as they said afterward.

The minister did come; William Skinner, the head servant was called, and after the three held a private conference, which seemed to be satisfactory, they come out and, to the amazement of all, the lady stood beside Anson Grey and the marriage vows were taken.

The wise doctors were mistaken in their estimate of their unknown. She was something besides a fair young lady, as her actions soon proved. A new order of things was instituted in the sick man's room, and his wife installed herself as nurse, a change which told for the better. In a month he was riding through the village, with his wife at his side, all eyes, of course, agog to catch a glimpse of her handsome face.

All agreed that she was just an angel, when they came to church the next Sunday, and sat down in one of the pews like other people, they were more than ever confirmed in their opinion. What they never knew was this:

Three years before, Anson Grey, haughty and indolent, was killing time at one of the fashionaqle watering places where Edith Willoughby also lingered, though sorely against her will.

A sweet and wondrously fair face, much admired and sought after, Anson Grey had half a mind to enter the lists with the others, but something kept him back, and he only exchanged a few words with her now and then.

There happened to come a heavy, two days' flood, and the first night of it Edith sent a servant asking Mr. Grey to come to a private parlor for a moment. He obeyed the summons with alacrity, wondering much what could be coming now.

Edith was waiting for him, cloaked and hooded, and evidently in haste to be off somewhere.

"I hope you will pardon me," she said, as she closed the door behind him, "but really I did not know whom to ask and mamma will not allow me to go by myself. A poor woman down on the beach is sick, perhaps dying, and I must go to see her. Her little boy just came after me. I was there yesterday and they are in great distress. Could I trouble you to go with me?"

"I will do your errand. It is too stormy for you to venture out."

"Oh, it is no errand. I am sorry to trouble anybody."

Mr. Grey saw what was wanted, and saying he would be back directly, vanished for his rubber suit.

The rain drove into their faces, and the wind howled through the dark night like the minister of a thousand storms—not for a poor fisherwoman, perhaps, but for one as good as fair Edith Willoughby, he should not have hesitated a moment. When they came upon the beach the waves fairly leaped into their faces, and Edith shivered and clung half terrified to her companion in spite of herself.

"I believe you had better return now, and leave it to me," he said.

"No, we are almost there. I should never forgive myself if I did," she answered, catching her breath as she spoke. "It is only you I am worried about." "I am glad to be able to help you" he said. And I think he spoke the truth.

Inside the cottage poor Grace Pooley lay on her hard bed trying to breathe on a little longer, if so the good God might send some good friends before she died, to care for her orphan boy.

When the door opened her eyes brightened, and she raised up a little.

"The Lord bless ye for coming. I know He will," she said as Edith threw off her wet covering and went toward her.

"This is only one of the boarders who came with me," she said in reply to the woman's questioning look. "I should have come to-day had I known that you were worse."

She sat down beside the bed, and Anson Grey watched her as she spoke in a low, tender voice to the grateful woman. Among the words which he could distinguish was a promise to see to Jamie; and when the old woman who seemed to be nurse came up to administer something, and in a half whisper asked Edith to pray with them, he began to think he was in another world. And it was another to him truly. Surely she would never do that. But she did. Kneeling upon the bare floor, clasping her white hands, she sent up such a prayer for help and strength as Anson Grey had never dreamed of hearing before.

After that night Anson Grey knew where his heart was, but for his life he dared not approach Edith. She seemed an immeasurable distance from such as he, but he cherished the memory of her prayers as the one glimpse into heaven for which he should thank God all his life.

Edith's mother was a gay woman, and such she meant her daughter to be, though for her life she could not keep her from ferreting out and helping also, an innumerable number of forlorn, poverty stricken people who had no earthly claim upon her, as they went, their fashionable rounds. It was mortifying, even exasperating, but she was powerless to prevent it. They were to be off again soon, Anson Grey heard; but he would have missed seeing her had he not accidently met her as she was hurrying up the beach toward their boarding house on the very day they left. He could not let her go without telling her what was in his heart.

"May I speak to you a moment?" he said abruptly stopping her.

"Certainly."

As the words left her lips she saw what his speaking was going to be.

"Oh, not that, Mr. Grey!"

"Yes that I love you and want you for my wife."

"I am to be married Christmas."

He turned and was leaving her, when something made her speak.

"Mr. Grey."

He faced her again and she saw how white and stern he looked.

"Had I been free you would not have asked in vain."

For days and weeks afterward, Anson Grey hugged the memory of her look, as she said those blessed words, to his heart, caring more for that than for the love and caresses of any other.

Christmas came, but death came with it, and Edith's lover went his long journey, leaving his affianced bride and her scheming mother to console themselves as best they might.

In a way mysterious to all save William Skinner, Edith heard of Anson Grey's illness, and, as we have seen, went to him and had the courage to become his wife.

The people of Burlingame learned to love the gentle mistress of the old stone mansion on the hill, and never a suffering one called for help in vain, as long as "my lady," as they called her, was mistress there.

Japanese Customs.

The first act of a young Japanese bride after being conducted to her husband's home is to sacrifice her beauty by shaving her eyebrows, and painting her teeth black. By this strange custom she symbolizes to her husband and to strangers in the street that she has renounced completely every desire to please or coquet. Though sacredly observed while continuing, the marriage-tie of the Japanese is easily broken, the mutual consent of the contracting parties sufficing. Once in possession of the bit of paper by which the husband restores to the wife her liberty, she readily regains her lost beauty; two days enabling her to transform her teeth to their pristine pearly whiteness, and two months of nature giving back to her her beautiful dark eyebrows.

In Japan the respect shown by the lower to the higher classes is extreme. And even between equals the forms of civility are excessive. When two officers or merchants meet in the street they stop still, and before passing exchange grave and profound bows. Even two friends who meet every day are careful never to neglect this ceremony. Among women these forms are still more emphasized. When a friend calls and is once seated on the mat, all bow their foreheads several times to the floor. The first words are thanks for some past service which they really or feignedly call to mind. Then the hostess fills, lights, wipes, and passes to the new-comer her little pipe, and along with it the inevitable cup of tea. It is taken without either milk or sugar. A delicate drink is made from an infusion of peach blossoms, which is offered to favored guests.

There is a pretty tradition at Venice, handed down among the inhabitants of the Lagoons, which says that a sailor brought home to his betrothed a branch of the delicate coralline known as "mermaid's lace." The girl, a worker in points, attracted by the grace of the coral, imitated it with her needle, and after much toil, produced the exquisite fabric which as "Venice Point," soon became the mode in all Europe. Lace-making in Italy formed the occupation of many women of the higher classes who wished to add to their incomes. Each lady had a number af workers, to whom she supplied patterns, pricked by herself, paying her workwomen at the end of every week, each day being notched on a tally. In the convent of Jesu Bambino, at Rome, curious specimens of old conventual work—parchment patterns with lace in progress—have been found. They belonged to Spanish nuns, who long ago taught the art of lace-making to novices. Like all point lace, this appears to be executed in separate pieces, given out by the nuns, and then joined together by a skillful hand. We see the pattern traced, the work partly finished, and the very thread left, as when "Sister Felice Vittoria" laid down her work centuries ago.

A Popular Delusion.

A great many persons have an idea that it is unlawful to touch or attempt to aid a man found dead or dying, and that the first duty is to notify some official. Lives have been sacrificed under this delusion. The first duty is to render every possible aid, and then promptly to make the facts known to the authorities. The contrary idea has been obtained from the laws of other nations, which are as absurd as they are inhuman. Referring to the law of Russia in this matter, an eastern exchange says:

"Among the most extraordinary of the tyrannical regulations of the Russian police is one which strictly forbids any one to touch a dead or dying man without the direct sanction of the police. In consequence of this arbitrary law, for such it is, no uncommon thing to see a man lying bleeding and helpless covered with severe fall in the streets of Moscow or St. Petersburg, without anybody daring to assist him.

"To what an extent this curious tyranny is carried, may be judged from a single instance. An English [illegible] man residing at Peterhof [illegible] an about sixteen miles [illegible] consisting, one morning found his Russian groom hanging by the neck in the stable, and cut him down at once, just in time to save his life. The next day he received a visit from the head Inspector of Police, who, far from commending his prompt humanity, vehemently abused him for daring to transgress the law.

"The Englishman heard him to the end without a word, and then said, quietly:

"Well, Mr. Inspector, I'm extremely sorry to have done anything, but I will make all the amends in my power. If I find [illegible] hanging anywhere, I pledge you my honor I won't cut you down."

Registered Ahead of Time.

Last Tuesday afternoon, a young man escorted a good-looking young girl into the Ætna House office. He was greenly fair, and she had a sensible, wholesome German face.

"Can I—can we—get a room here—for all night?" he enquired of the clerk, casting a glance full of solicitude and anxiety towards the young lady, who crimsoned slightly and looked towards the window.

The clerk turned the register on the counter, and replied: "Certainly; register your name and I will show you to a room."

"Please write it yourself," said the stranger, pushing the book toward the clerk.

"What name?" asked the clerk, placing the blotter under his right hand.

The girl with the crimson cheeks cast a look of divine reprimand towards her partner. The clerk said "This way," and escorted them to room No. 6, where he left the pair, returning to the office with a cynical look about the left eye.

Presently the troubled young man returned to the office, button-holed a boy, who went hurriedly down the street. A few minutes thereafter, Justice Wilber entered the office and enquired for Mr. Johnson. He was shown to room No. 6, and as soon as the brief statutory questions and answers could be made, the crimson young lady was really made Mrs. Johnson. The cynical look departed from the clerk's eye—there was no longer a doubt about the integrity of the hotel register.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left the city yesterday, taking the train for Chicago.

How to Bud Trees and Shrubs.

This is a simple process by which amateur cultivators often increase their stock. A sharp penknife can do duty for a budding knife, and the handle of a tooth-brush, if ground down smooth, will answer for a spud to aid in lifting the bark. From the last of June to the last of August is the best time for this process, as the bark can then be more easily raised from the wood. Take a smooth stalk and make a horizontal cut across the bark through to the wood, but not into it. From the center of this cross-cut make another cut straight down the stem an inch or more in length. These two cuts should resemble a T. Slice off the bud you desire to propagate with one cut of the knife, cutting it close to the main stalk. Now, with the edge of the spud turn back the bark on each side of the straight cut and insert the bud on the wood of the branch to be budded, fitting it tightly to the crossed cut. With a bit of soft yarn bind down the bark, leaving the point of the bud exposed. A handful of dampened moss must then be bound around the stem, taking care to leave a tiny point of the bud exposed to the air. In six weeks the wrappings can be removed, but all other shoots must be kept from growing on the budded branch. By this means a rosebush can be made to bear half a dozen different colored roses.

—A stout English gentleman, a visitor at a fashionable watering place on the west coast of Scotland, was in the habit of conversing familiarly with a character of the place who took a delight in talking boastingly of his great relations. One day, as the gentleman was seated at the door of his lodging, Donald came up driving a fat boar. "That is one of your great relations, I suppose, you have got with you, Donald?" said the gentleman. "No," quietly retorted Donald, as he surveyed the proportions of his interlocutor, "no relation whatever, but just an acquaintance like yourself."

Deaths of Kings and Queens of England.

William Rufus died the death of the poor stags which he hunted.

Henry I. died of gluttony.

Henry II. died of a broken heart, occasioned by bad conduct of his children.

Richard Coeur de Lion, like the animal from which his heart was named, died by an arrow from an archer.

John died, nobody knows how, but it is said from chagrin, which we suppose is another name for hellebore.

Henry III, is said to have died a "natural death."

Edward I. is said to have died of a "natural sickness"—a sickness which would puzzle all the college physicians to denominate.

Edward II. was barbarously and indecently murdered by ruffians employed by his own wife and her paramour.

Edward III. died of dotage, and Richard II., of starvation—the very reverse of George IV.

Henry IV. is said to have died of fits caused by uneasiness, a complaint in palaces in those times as much a very common complaint.

Henry V. is said to have died of a painful affliction, prematurely. This is a courtly term for getting rid of a King.

Henry VI. died in prison, by means known then only to his jailer, and now only in heaven.

Edward V. was strangled by his uncle, Richard III.

Richard III. was killed in battle.

Henry VII. wasted away, as a miser ought to.

Henry VIII. died of carbuncles and fury.

Edward VI. died of a decline.

Queen Mary is said to have died of a broken heart.

Old Queen Bess is said to have died of melancholy, from having sacrificed Essex to his enemies.

James I. died from drinking and the effects of vice.

Charles I. died on the scaffold.

Charles II. died suddenly—it is said of apoplexy.

Wilham III. died of consumptive habits of body and from the stumbling of his horse.

Queen Anne died from dropsy.

George II. died of a rupture of the heart, which the periodicals of that day termed a visitation of God.

George III. died as he had lived—a madman. Throughout life, he was at least a consistent monarch.

George IV. died of gluttony and drunkenness.

The Wonders of Mechanism.

The conditions of what may be called perfect mechanical work have been realized in the mammoth testing-machine erected at the Watertown Arsenal. Among the astonishing experiments reported of this machine is one where a forged link of hard wrought-iron five inches in diameter was slowly strained and finally broken at a tension of 722,800 pounds, while, to show that the weighing parts of the machine were not disturbed by the recoil, a horse-hair was tested immediately afterward. It stretched 30 per cent., and broke at one pound. Such a machine is an engine of power and precision in which lies the possibilities of a revolution in the manufacture of iron and steel and bronze, and in the proportioning and adaptation of structures.

Perhaps the only equal to this wonderful invention is Sir Joseph Whitworth's millionth measuring-machine. Now, it is absolutely impossible for the naked eye to judge the millionth part of an inch, and such minute divisions are wholly beyond the resolving power of the most elaborate of modern microscopic appliances. Nor can the mind grasp a quantity so minute. The thickness of a page of ordinary French writing paper is about equal to 4,000 of these particles of measurement, or the two hundred and fiftieth part of an inch But what the eye cannot see the nerves can feel, and that quite readily. One can take a cylinder and pass it through a space left vacant in one of these Whitworth machines. It passes easily, but reduce the aperature by the millionth of an inch, and one feels that it sticks slightly. If the space be reduced another millionth, the cylinder sticks fast thus proving perfect accuracy of workmanship.—New York Times.

Farming Under the Sea.

The fact is not generally known that within three hours' ride of Boston a large and profitable business has been carried on since 1848 along the seashore, and which is nothing more nor less than "farming under the sea." Everywhere upon the coasts of eastern New England may be found, ten feet below the water mark, the lichen known as carrageen, the "Irish Moss" of commerce. It may be torn from the sunken rocks anywhere, and yet the little sea-port of Scituate is almost the only place in the country where it is gathered and cured. This village is the great center of the most business in the country, and the entire Union draws its supplies from these beaches. Long rakes are used in tilling this marine farm, and it does not take long to fill the many dories that await the lichen, torn from its salty, rocky bed. The husbands and fathers gather the moss from the sea, and the wives and daughters prepare it for the market. Soak it in water and it will melt away to jelly. Boil it in milk and a delicious white and creamy blanc-mange is the result. The annual product is from ten to fifteen thousand barrels, and it brings $50,000 into the town, which sum is shared by one hundred and fifty families. Its consumption in the manufacture of lager beer is very large, and the entire beer in the country draws its supplies from Scituate beaches, as the importation from Ireland has almost ceased. It is generally known that the moss, as an article of food, is called "sea moss farina."

A man may be a day-dreamer; he may take no interest in every day affairs; in the busy world he may be as a drone in a hive but just step on his pet corn and see how quickly he will wake up.

Conscience is your magnetic needle. Reason is your chart. But I would rather have a crew willing to follow the indications of the needle, and giving themselves no great trouble as to the chart, than a crew that had ever so good a chart and no needle at all.

"What was the principal element of my success?" asked a reformed milkman of wealth at a workingmen's convention, the other day; and, behold, his modesty overcame his assurance when a ragged boy from the gallery answered back, "Water, you old cheat!"

We have never been able to understand how it is that a woman who is apparently deaf when her husband asks her where that half dollar is which he left in his pantaloons pocket before going to bed, can hear the wail of her two weeks old baby down two flights of stairs and through three deal doors.

At a popular store famous for the prompt and polite attention of the clerks, a woman of perhaps thirty years was looking at goods, when a young man stepped towards her, and asked, "Is any one waiting upon you?" She stared at the clerk, and exclaimed, "Why, what a question! I've been married these ten years."

A clerk in a Philadelphia bookstore thinking to annoy a Quaker customer who looked as though he was fresh from the country, handed him a volume saying, "Here is an excellent essay on the rearing of calves." "Thee had better present that to thy mother, young man," was the spontaneous reply of the Quaker.

A new clerk in a drug store was discharged the other day because he didn't know how to look wise, roll his eyes, and say seventy-five cents without turning red in the face as he handed out a little powder that had cost the concern two cents and a fraction. Emotion and business don't jingle.

A colored child had a fall from a second-story window the other day, and his mother, in relating the occurrence at a grocery, said: "Dere dat chile was a comin' down feet fust, wid ebery chance of bein killed, when de Lawd, he turned him ober, de chile struck on his head, and dar wasn't so much as a button flew off."

The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year; the husband wears an injured look—house cleaning time is here. The wife goes madly tearing 'round with scrubbing brush and broom—the dull and sombre thud of mops is heard in every room. Now with a wild and frightened glare—a glare devoid of hope, the husband tumbles down the stairs upon a cake of soap, or with an awkward, clumsy flop and with a smothered wail, he trips o'er some protruding mop and sits down in a pail.

The following is said to be a funeral sermon lately peached in Ohio, by a Buckeye clergyman: "I have been begged, importuned and entreated to preach this 'ere sermon, but I don't wan't to do it. I never liked the man; I never knew nothing good of him. He had horses, and he run them; he had cocks, and he fit them. I have heard he was occasionally good at fires. The bearers will please remove the body and sing the following hymn:

With rapture we delight
To see the cuss removed.

It was at a revival meeting in Hopkinton, Iowa. Several had related their experience. Mr. W. was called. He arose and spoke as follows: "Brothers and sisters—you all know why I joined the church last winter. Shortly after I came out on the Lord's side, a man, one of the devil's agents, offered to bet five dollars that I would not hold out a year. I covered that bet with five dollars. The time isn't quite up yet, but will be in two weeks. Five dollars will come good to a man these hard-times. Thank the Lord. Brothers and sisters, if any of you should see any man who wants to invest any money in the same way, just send him on. Pray that I remain faithful."

Not Very Good Spellers.

The San Francisco board of education, in overhauling the teachers of that city as to their educational qualifications, found that some of the young ladies who had been nominated for positions were decidedly unfitted for their work. The teachers were asked to write the following words, with their definitions: vacillation, hieroglyphics, antediluvian, aphorism, bivouac, codicil, hallucination, inveigle, periphery.

One of the young ladies spelled and defined them as follows: "vassilation, the act of being vaseil; hyerogliphics, (correct definition;) antediluvian, the act of loosening down before, as it were aphorism, a rising beforehand; bivouac, (was unable to define;) codissel, relating to a code, law or rule; hollusenation, a strange loosening or separation, as it were; inveigle, somewhat strange; unnatural."

Several others who were examined spelled and defined some of the words as follows: "superannuated, the state of being over-exerted; bivioue, excitement; gaiety; codicile, (couldn't define;) perriffery, (couldn't define;) hallucination, act of rejoicing or blessing; bivouac, American bushfighting."

One of the young ladies, who received 7½ per cent., defined hallucination as "the condition of being made clear."

Astonishing the World.

For a perfect renovation of exhausted and enfeebled constitutions, female weakness and decline, nothing so surely and speedily produces a permanent cure as does Electric Bitters. Their wonderful cures are astonishing the world. For Kidney or Urinary complaints they are a perfect specific. Do not give up in despair, for Electric Bitters will positively cure, and that where everything else fails. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co., at 50 cents a bottle.

Not Growing Worse.

Is the world growing worse? We do not think so. All observing intelligent men know that the world, however appearances contradict it, grows steadily better. One reason of the contrary seeming true is that we have facilities for gathering all the news in the world—an evil makes news while good does not—and presenting it in a single day. When we take up the journal, the villiany of the entire civilized globe is thrust upon our attention; whereas, only a few years ago, we got it in fragments, at intervals, and often but a small portion at most. Another is that, during the periods of commercial dullness and momentary pressure, men, driven to ther wits' end to avoid failure in business, are tempted in a hundred ways that they would not be in prosperous times. Moreover, their irregularities are hidden by subsequent success, while, with continued strain and stagnation, their misdeeds are forced into light—there is no method of covering them up. Sinners are "found out" now-a-days, and cannot lead wicked lives undiscovered.

The state of Illinois has had three capitals. The first was Kaskaskia, at the mouth of the Okaw River, which was established as the provincial headquarters as early as 1683, and continued the territorial capital until 1810, when by an act of the general assembly the present site of Vandalia, then a wilderness, was selected, and a state-house and other necessary buildings constructed, at a cost of about $35,000. On Feb. 28, 1837, the capital was removed to Springfield, and $100,000 used in erecting necessary buildings; which have since been abandoned for the stately structure, costing millions, which is yet uncompleted.

A noted sharper, wishing to ingratiate himself with a clergyman, said: "Parson, I should like to hear you preach more than I can tell you." "Well," responded the clergyman, "if you had been where you ought to have been last Sunday, you would have heard me." "Where was that?" asked the sharper. "In the county jail," was the reply.

Javanese Mechanics.

The Island of Java, in the East Indian archipelago, is under the government of Holland. At Surabaya the government has a large machine shop where many castings are made, but where the chief business is the manufacture of steam boilers for the navy. A traveler describes this establishment, in which over nine hundred Javanese were laboring voluntarily. The Javanese are of the Malay race, and most of the overseers are native, but few Europeans being employed in the whole works. These Malays perform their allotted tasks quietly and steadily, without loud talking or unnecessary noise. Some of them are so skillful that they receive nearly two guilders, or 75 cents, per day. Here the standard weights and measures for the government are made. Some of the workmen had been in the shops as long as fifty-seven years. This is all the more remarkable, because these natives are usually unable to labor at the age of thirty-five or forty, on account of their dissolute habits. Most of their machinery is not as nicely finished as that imported from Europe, but it appears quite as durable. Yet the fact that the Javanese have the capacity to do some nice work was proved by one in charge of the engraving department, whose fine cut lines would have been creditable to many a European.

A Chinese Military Review.

A Chinese review is thus described by a correspondent of the Shanghai Courier. The men, clad in uniforms of red and blue, were ranged in two ranks, every tenth man holding a flag, while the sergeant in the middle gave the time to advance by waving a huge crimson standard. At the sound of a horn, which resembled the humming of a gigantic bee, the battalion prepared to receive cavalry. Out popped a soldier brandishing a pike, which he poked at an imaginary assailant, then uttering a shriek like an owl, he flourished his shield, turned a somersault, and trippingly retired to the ranks. When everybody had popped out, brandished and poked his pike, shrieked like an owl, thrown a somersault, and retired, the big horn hummed once more, the soldiers formed in a square, and one of them danced gravely but energetically forward, throwing out his right leg with a graceful jerk; then bounding backward, he again danced forward, this time throwing out the left. Then he jumped, he waltzed, he capered, he pranced, he turned head over heels, rolled himself well in the dust, (which rose in clouds), stood on the back of his neck while he flourished his legs in the air, recovered himself, grasping wildly with his arms at nothing in particular, made a grotesque courtesy to the Viceroy, and retired. With this martial spectacle the review concluded.

Everyday Enjoyments.

Happy the man or woman who finds happiness in the daily incidents of life. A susceptibility to delicate attentions, a fine sense of the nameless and exquisite tenderness of manner and thought, constitute, in the minds of its possessors, the deepest undercurrent of life; the felt and treasured, but unseen and inexpressible richness of affection. It is rarely found in the characters of men, but outweighs, when it is, all grosser qualities. There are many who waste and lose affections by careless and often unconscious neglect. It is not a plant to grow unattended: the breath of indifference, or a rude touch may destroy forever its delicate texture. There is a daily attention to the slightest courtesies of life, which can alone preserve the first freshness of passion. The easy surprises of pleasure, earnest cheerfulness of assent to slight wishes, habitual respect to opinions, unwavering attention to the comfort of others abroad and at home, and above all, the cheerful preservation of those proprieties of conversation which are sacred when before the world, are some of the secrets of that happiness which age and habit alike fail to impair.

THE OHIO MORMON TEMPLE.—The Mormon church which Joseph Smith built at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1834, is now owned by Smith's descendants, and is rented for lectures, dances, and exhibitions of all kinds. This first Mormon temple is a massive stone structure, four stories in height, and surmounted by a tower overlooking all the country around. It was solidly and durably built by the Mormons themselves, of roughly hewn sandstone, from plans Smith claimed to have received in a vision, and is still quite well preserved.

Anybody can soil the reputation of any individual, however pure and chaste, by uttering a suspicion that enemies will believe and his friends never hear of. A puff of idle wind can take a million of thistle seeds and do a work of mischief which the husbandman must labor hard and long to undo, the floating particles being too fine to be seen, and too light to be stopped. Such are the seeds of slander, so easily sown, so difficult to be gathered up, and yet so pernicous is their fruit. Slanderers well know that many a wind will catch up the plague and become poisoned by their insinuations, without ever seeking the antidote. No reputation can refute a sneer, nor any human skill prevent mischief.

American Ball-Blue is a favorite article in American laundries. Try it; you will never use any other. It is just what you want.

It is not until the flower has fallen off that the fruit begins to ripen. So in life, it is when the romance is past that the practical usefulness begins.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 10, 1881.

The peach crop of Michigan and the orange crop of Florida will both feel the blight of the present severe winter.

Our Legislature is taking a rest this week to afford the members an opportunity to visit the various State institutions.

The cabinet-makers will soon be out of employment. In less than one month Gen. Garfield will take a hand at that business himself.

Senators Conkling and Butler had a set-to in the U. S. Senate the other day which afforded a very good illustration of plantation manners.

The Pennsylvania Legislature is still in the throes of their Senatorial contest. Unless they hurry up business the new Senate will organize with only one Senator from that State.

The prospect of the confirmation of Stanley Mathews as Justice of the Supreme Court is not very flattering.—Senators Thurman, Bayard, David Davis, Conkling and Carpenter are said to be opposed to his confirmation.

It is said that Ohio has two or three available candidates for the speakership of the next House. If so, why doesn't she trot them out? Ohio, in this instance, should depart from her proverbial modesty and not hide her light under a bushel any longer.

The temperance question is looming up in several of the State legislatures this winter. It will be one of the most exciting topics of discussion at Lansing. As long as the present tide of intemperance flows on unchecked, it is a question that ought to be discussed.

All danger of a squabble on the counting of the Electoral votes has passed. The Morgan Electoral count resolution has passed both the Senate and House, and the process of counting in Garfield and Arthur will now proceed without any hitch when the proper time arrives.

Philadelphia is all torn up over the approaching municipal election in that city. The two party machines nominated party tickets, and now the people step in and place a Reform ticket of their own in the field. The present indications are that the peoples' reform ticket will sweep everything before it.

Jay Gould is a very philanthropic man. He didn't engineer the late telegraph combination for monopolizing purposes. Not at all. His sole object, as he tells a reporter, was to perfect a cheap system of telegraphy throughout the country, with direct special wires for newspapers, and other conveniences.

Another awful calamity occurred in Buffalo last Tuesday. The roof of the N. Y. Central depot fell in, and a Lake Shore train of cars was buried in the ruins. Several lives were lost. The accident was caused by a defective construction of the roof, and the volume of snow upon it, which had become very heavy by the late thaw.

The State Pioneer meeting at Lansing last week was very largely attended. The session lasted two days, and a large number of interesting papers were read. Lenawee county was represented at the meeting by T. F. Moore and wife, Manson Carpenter, Brackley Shaw, G. P. Waring, A. Howell, A. L. Smith, F. N. Dewey and R. E. Phelps.

General Garfield made some suggestive observations to a visiting delegation of Indiana politicians recently.—They hinted very skillfully at the desirability of putting an Indiana man in the Cabinet, and when they had finished General Garfield said: "I am under obligations to my district for sending me to the State Senate. I am under obligations to the people of my Congressional district for sending me to Congress so often. I am under obligations to the State of Ohio for electing me to represent them in the United States Senate, and I am under obligations to the 4,000,000 Republican voters of the United States for electing me to the Presidency. I have more obligations than I can pay. Gentlemen, I am a bankrupt, with more obligations than assets."

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

Abusing Garfield.

Detroit Free Press, Dem.: The Norristown Herald accuses Garfield of having kept a diary for twenty years, and yet that very paper talked about mud-throwing during election time!

A Familiar Sound.

Adrian Times, Rep.: The Massachusetts Democrats have concluded to cast their votes in the Legislature for a man named Benj. F. Butler as their candidate for U. S. Senator. Butler! Butler?. That name has a familiar sound.

The Proper Plan.

Detroit Evening News, Ind.: Within four years after her navigation laws were repealed the tonnage of Great Britain increased 700 tons. If we wish to have a share of the carrying trade of the world we must adopt the same policy. The repeal of our navigation laws would do more to restore our merchant marine than any system of subsidies, and would not cost the people a dollar.

Two Days In The Cabinet.

New York Tribune, Rep.: Governor Foster is out of the Cabinet again already. The time of his stay was unusually short. Heretofore he has been allowed to stay in for at least a week. He went in on Monday as Postmaster-General, and the fact was announced with as great a show of authority as possible. On Wednesday an equally emphatic declaration, coming from precisely the same sources, was made in these words: "It is authoritively stated that General Garfield's Cabinet has been definitely decided upon. But one thing certain is known about it—Governor Foster will not be a member of it." This was two days ago, and it is entirely possible that Foster may be in again before sunset to-night.

The Widow Still Frisky.

Boston Herald, Ind.: Butler loves a minority, if it be a good big one and the majority has grown tired of him. The ex-Widow will be the Mrs. Micawber of the Democratic party so long as the new object of her affection doesn't keep her waiting too long for something to turn up. The Senatorial nomination will serve for the present, and we should like to see the man who will be bold enough to deny the quality of Butler's Democracy after this indorsement. To enter a party by burglary, and within three years to be took of the walk, the "boss of the whole business," indicates that Uncle Benjamin is a good ways from his political dotage.

Sound Political Philosophy.

Louisville Courier-Journal, Dem.: All this talk about what Garfield is going to do for a Southern policy is pure drivel. If he be a man of sense, as I take him to be, he will have no Southern policy any more than he will have a Northern policy. All of us are getting on pretty well, and, if we are to continue so, the Government must let pretty well alone. It was meddling and muddling, that between '65 and '75, lost the Republicans their grip. They have it back through no merit of theirs, but through the faults and follies of the Democrats. If they would retain it, they must behave themselves. If they don't do this, the Democrats will come in again. That is the long and the short of it; and, as far as we are concerned in the South, we are officially, indifferent. We have put our house in order and we propose to keep it in order. We are busy, doing well and defy sectional partisans—either the fools and bigots among ourselves or the fools and bigots of the North—to hurt or hinder us. The South is as independent as a wood-sawyer. As time passes this will appear in many practical shapes: in substantial and solid improvements; in larger intercourse with the world; in better understanding of home interests, material and spiritual; in moral emancipation, wherein the spelling-book and arithmetic will make geography a sight to see.

Jay Gould in a New Role.

New York Sun, Ind.: We learn from Washington that our distinguished fellow citizen, Mr. Jay Gould, will soon take his seat as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Gould will rank among the able men on the bench. As a man of letters he is not unknown to fame. In early youth his precocious talent discovered itself in a history of his native country. At present he enjoys the unprecedented distinction of being the reputed head of two metropolitan dailies of different politics.

In law Mr. Gould's experience has been extensive. Other men may have been more profound students, but in practical knowledge and nice distinctions in both civil and criminal branches his attainments have long been recognized; and years ago his name in the common speech was familiarly associated with that of David Dudley Field and with other legal luminaries.

Meanwhile Mr. Gould has contrived to accumulate one hundred millions, or such a matter, in railways and telegraphs—an amount far exceeding the total earthly possessions of all the other Judges.

Canadian shippers of cattle to England are in a state of perplexity about a new order in the Council of England requiring the slaughtering of cattle within six days of their landing. Should the order be carried out it will stop the shipping of cattle from Canada.

News from Lander County, Nevada, says the Sheriff has levied on three freight trains and one passenger train, at Battle Mountain, to satisfy a judgment of $40,000 for delinquent taxes for 1880, due from the Central Pacific Railway Company. As fast as trains come in they are tied up by the Sheriff.

It is reported that the Northwestern Pacific Railroad has succeeded in negotiating the right of way to the Black Hills with the Indians at Spotted Tail and Red Cloud Agencies similar to that made at Washington with the Cheyennes and Pawnees, at the price of $110 per mile for 200 feet wide.

A special from Little Rock, Ark., says that three men who attempted a rape on the person of Miss Georgiana Hamblett, who lives at Augusta—a highly accomplished young lady—were taken from jail by a mob, who, having taken them across the river and hanged them, threw their bodies into the river.

John A. Hoaxwram, a German citizen of Decatur, Ill., attempted to kill his young wife, making desperate stabs at her with a knife, and then pounding her over the head with a kettle. Two gentlemen interfered, and he then pulled a revolver and shot himself twice in the head, and failing to kill himself, he seized a common wood saw and hacked away with it at his throat until he severed the jugular vein, when he bled to death.

Mr. T. T. Romyen says that he took the Monroe Democrat for twenty consecutive years, and preserved a file of them throughout the whole time, commencing in 1837.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

The Democrats have strong hopes of passing the Morgan Joint Rule.

Senator Logan does not think the vote of Georgia can be counted, because it was not cast on the day prescribed by law.

The Sundry Civil Service and General Deficiency bills are the only appropriation bills now remaining to be considered by Committee.

But nine persons have been discharged from the Postoffice Department since Postmaster General Maynard took charge.

It is probable a whaling vessel will be purchased by the Government, instead of detaching a man-of-war, to make a cruise in search of the exploring steamer Jeannette.

The Inter-State Commerce Bill, it is probable, will drop out of sight. Free passes have been rained down on members quite liberally, and it seems, has had the effect to change their opinion in the matter.

Senator Eaton's Tariff Commission Bill will probably be acted favorably upon. Prominent members of both Houses are in favor of a Commission, to be composed largely of Senators and members who will belong to the next Congress.

A petition signed by 5,000 persons has caused Gen. Young to introduce a bill asking the enactment of a law giving ex-soldiers and sailors of the late war, or their surviving widows and children, a land warrant out of the public lands without the requirement of actual settlement.

Delegate Cannon having learned from Salt Lake that it was reported there that President Hayes was at the bottom of Murray's action in giving the certificate of election to Campbell, the defeated candidate, Mr. Cannon called upon the President to learn the truth of these reports. The President told Delegate Cannon that he had nothing to do with the action of Murray in this matter, and knew nothing of it until he saw it in the newspapers. He never advised Murray to take any such step. Mr. Cannon says that the President intimated that Murray had exceeded his authority in taking this action. The general opinion in Washington is that Cannon will hold the fort.

There is but little doubt now that Captain Eads will obtain a favorable report upon his bill, with certain amendments, from the Committee on Inter-oceanic Canals. The committee will probably require the ships, with which the test of the proposed road is to be made, to be of 4,000 tons, instead of 2,000 tons burden, and will reduce the limit of the time upon which the Government is to guarantee the payment of the interest on $50,000,000 of stock from thirty to fifteen years. If the bill is finally reported favorably, in this form, it will be by a very small majority of the Committee. It is unlikely, however, that a bill to incorporate Captain Eads' Company or any Inter-oceanic Canal Company, can be passed before the 4th of March. If anything is done upon the subject of the Canal at all, it will probably be to pass a resolution affirming the Monroe doctrine in its fullest sense.

The Washington National Republican credits the following assertion to a Senator whose word it asserts is as good as the gold: "It is a perfect farce to talk about any outraged dignity in connection with the executive sessions. They are the very antipodes of anything dignified. Senators smoke, spit, and swear as freely as if they were at ward meetings. They put their heels on the desks, yell and chaff at each other like all night men at some fast club. The only real reason why certain Senators enjoy executive sessions is because of the freedom it gives them for this kind of horse play. You would be surprised to see who are the principal ones in this coarse fun. Senators who are masquerading under the semblance of solemn dullness, and aping profoundity in the open sessions, are oftenest the worst and coarsest of the buffoons of the secret sessions."

The pension figures are getting to be enormous. And what is more, the pension officials, who base their opinion upon what data before them, express the belief that although the expenditure on account of pensions will reach fifty million of dollars during the next fiscal year, that the year following it will be probably $75,000,000, or fifty per cent. more than the total expenditures of the Government in 1860. At the end of the year 1861 there was 4,337 invalid pensioners on the rolls, all of them drawing pensions on the Mexican War, the various Indian wars, and the war of 1812, and not including any of the results of the civil war then in progress. At the end of the year 1865—the year the war closed—there were 85,000 invalid pensioners on the rolls. This does not include widows, or wounded, or any other class but invalids. Since that time 41,602 have been dropped from the rolls, mainly by death, yet the increase of new names of late years has been so great that at the end of the year 1880 there were on the rolls and drawing pensions no less than 145,272 men under the head of invalid pensioners, or about four times as many as at the end of 1865.

The Secretary Schurz of the Interior, in response to a Senate resolution adopted January 27, has transmitted to the Senate a copy of the report of the Ute Commission and copies of all correspondence between the Interior Department and the Governor of Colorado, concerning the Ute Indians, since the 15th of June, 1880. Secretary Schurz, in his letter of transmittal, says: "I am informed that during the debate on the Severalty Bill in the Senate, the 25th ult., the remark was made that the Interior Department had voluntarily and willfully withheld the report of the Ute Commission from the knowledge of the Senate. I beg to say that the report was not called for by the Senate until Thursday, the 27th of January. On the 28th and 29th ult. the criticism was repeated, while the Senate resolution calling for the report did not reach the Department until the 28th. The volume of the report will convince the Senate that it was impossible to make the necessary copies with all the available force the Department has for such purpose, in less time than has been consumed upon it. I did not transmit the report without a call from the Senate for the simple reason that it contains nothing concerning the statement of the Utes in severalty, except what was contained in the letter addressed by me to Hon. Richard Coke, dated the 19th ult., which was communicated by him to the Senate in the debate on the first day of the discussion on the pending bill, and the statement of the Ute Commission as to delays which prevented them from proceeding with the allotment of lands to different bands of Utes in compliance with the act of June 15, 1880."

Discovery of a Letter Written by Adam to Eve.

In Josh Billings' "Cook Book and Picktorial Receipts," the following interesting letter is found:

Eden, Pennsylvania, Year Two.

Dear Eve—I have been on the rampage now one month, prospecting for our new home, and and have seen some ranches that will do pretty well, but none of them just the chicken. The old garden is a hard place to beat, but we have lost that, and are turned out now to root hog or die. We will fight it out now, on this line, if it takes all summer. Eating that apple was a great blunder, but, my dear girl, let bygones be bygones; there is hope for us yet. Just as soon as I strike a good claim I will come back to you. Watch over Cain closely, he is a brick. The weather is raw and cold. I feel that I am too thinly clad. No more now from your loving Adam.

P. S.—Has Cain cut another tooth yet?

Mrs. Miller and George Smith were hanged at Williamsport, Penn., on the 3d inst., for the murder of Mrs. Miller's husband. Mrs. Miller was broken down in spirits and some difficulty was experienced in getting her onto the scaffold. She moaned and prayed continuously while the shackles were being put upon her feet. Smith's confession was read, in which he stated that he killed Miller, and Mrs. Miller wiped the blood off his clothing with a white rag. They both glanced pitingly at the rope while they were being adjusted, and which they had been placed above their necks, and the black caps drawn over their heads. Mrs. Miller was at times unable to stand but had to be held up by her on her feet. Black bodies despite [illegible] as unusual that not thirty were [illegible].

LAST Sunday evening several persons were baptized at the Baptist church.

CHARLIE BREWER is open for congratulations; he has another little one to bestow his attention upon.

A. O. MILLER, as Muzzle in "Over the Hills to the Poor House," at the Opera House next Monday evening.

THE funeral services of Franklin Osborn, of Franklin, were held yesterday at his home. His remains were taken to Clinton to be placed in the vault.

THE mills were in trouble yesterday from high water, and some of the dams were in danger last night. The water is now under control and no further danger is apprehended.

LAST Sunday was an unusually eventful one at the Universalist church in this village. The communion service was held and nine persons were admitted to church membership.

THE high kicking of the Georgia Minstrels' performance was remarkable, also was the kicking at the hotel next morning by some of the members of the troupe against the manager, which resulted, we understand, in one of the men taking his baggage and starting for Chicago.

THE lecture of R. J. Burdette at the Opera House on Friday evening last, was a splendid effort. The audience was not as large as it should have been, but they who attended were highly pleased with the entertainment the Hawkeye man gave them. His delivery is very easy and graceful and his lecture was a fine literary effort, running over with witticism and fun. If Burdette would consent to visit Tecumseh again, we can assure him a crowded house.

A GOOD many people seem to be under the impression that Prof. Wedeles only accepts advanced players in his class. This is a mistake, as the Professor informs us that he accepts beginners as well. Good instruction when commencing to play is the only security for a future artist, and we recommend everybody to act accordingly.

THE house that greeted the Georgia Minstrels last Monday evening was not as large as it would have been if the weather had been favorable, but as it was the receipts were more than sufficient to pay the expenses. Although the performance as a whole did not seem to be up to the standard, some parts of it exhibited genuine negro minstrelsy. The specialties of Billy Banks were good, he seeming to be the life of the whole troupe.

THE Maxwells, surported by an excellent dramatic company will appear at the Opera House next week, on Thursday evening, Feb. 17, in that most interesting and laughable comedy "Uncle Joshua Whitcomb," on Friday evening in "The Octoroon," on Saturday evening in "The Streets of New York." The Maxwells have an enviable reputation in the above three plays, and it will furnish the theatre goers a fine series of amusements.

THE Ladies Society of St. Peter's church will give the last social entertainment of the season on Thursday evening, Feb. 17th. At the last meeting of the Common Council held on Monday evening last, several persons appeared before the Council and asked that measures be taken for the extension and opening of Cummins street in this village.—The action taken thereon will be found in the Council Proceeding.—President Fitzsimmons at once issued the following call for a public meeting:

By authority of the Common Council. W. C. FITZSIMMONS,

Tecumseh, Feb. 8, 1881.

In pursuance of a call for a public meeting of citizens, tax-payers of the village of Tecumseh, issued by the President of the village, as authorized by the Common Council to take in consideration the extension of Cummins street from its present western terminous to the east line of Adrian street, and eastward from the east line of Evans street to the corporation line, the aforesaid citizens and tax-payers assembled in the opera house on Wednesday evening, Feb. 9, 1881, and on motion adopted the following resolutions with but one dissenting vote.

1st. Resolved, That we favor the building of the Toledo & Milwaukee Railway through the village of Tecumseh, and approve of all reasonable measures to accomplish that result.

2d. Resolved, That as regards the proposed extension of Cummins street and the granting to said railway company of a license to lay their track thereon, we recommend that the Common Council take such action as in their judgment the business prosperity and interests of this village shall demand.

On further motion the meeting adjourned.

E. B. WOOD, PRESIDENT.
D. MCNAIR, Secretary.

The Council will meet again to-morrow evening, at which time they will undoubtedly take prompt and liberal action in the matter.

DEATH OF J. CLEM. EATON.

The near friends of J. Clem. Eaton, who have been aware of his critical condition during the past few weeks, have perforce entertained grave fears that the fell Destroyer might soon bereave his wasted form of the lingering sparks of life. Tuesday, February 1, came the sad realization of their fears. To those unaware of his severe illness it brought consternation with grief. His robust nature and manly physique seemed akin to a long life of usefulness. But as the vigorous oak that falls before the repeated blows of the woodman's ax, so Clem's sturdy frame gave way to ravenous disease. To all it was a sorrowful thought to think that the distaff should not have spun a longer thread of life for one so affable toward all, so endowed with enviable faculties, so young in years, so possessed of culture. Clem was favored with all the benefits of an excellent literary training. Upon his gradduation from the Tecumseh high school, he entered the University of Michigan in the fall of '71, and was graduated therefrom in the civil engineering course in the spring of '75. During his college course he was an active member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, one of the leading secret societies at Ann Arbor. Upon leaving his alma mater he entered the service of the United States lake and river survey. His work, in this connection, being wholly in the summer time, was confined mostly to the coast surveys of Lake Erie, and the course of the Mississippi river. In May, 1879, he went West; a few months prior to this time he was engaged as clerk in the Lawrence House in Adrian. He remained in Leadville until the mining season opened, when, practicing his profession as civil engineer, he went into the Gunnison district. Here it was that he was stricken down with mountain fever, the disease that afterwards proved fatal to him. He remained in this district three weeks after the beginning of his illness in hopes of recovery; but it became evident to his physicians that recovery was impossible as long as he remained in that wild region. So upon their advice he started for home. One day in October last, after a journey not only of tiresome length but also fraught with many perils and sufferings for one so unstrung and wasted by sickness as Clem, he reached his home. A vast contrast there was between the energetic, sturdy Clem Eaton that left his home for the West in '79 and the enervated, drooping Clem Eaton that came home two years after to recover, but as it was, to die. Next March he would have been 27 years of age.

The funeral services were held in the M. E. Church of Ridgeway, a 10:30 A. M. on Thursday last, Feb. 3d. Upon his coffin rested the star and crescent, the badge of his society, beautifully formed from flowers, a gift of his former associates. The pall bearers were W. S. Gardner, C. H. Metcalf, J. A. Stacy and D. A. Whitney of Adrian, and Willis Merritt and F. B. Wood of this place. A widowed mother and a brother, H. B. Eaton, with whom he made his home while here, are among the surviving relatives. It was with sad hearts and tearful eyes that the remains of one so promising should in the morning of life be consigned to the earth as an eternal charge. He will always have a bright spot in the memories of his former associates. Those who ever knew him, knew him naught but as a most cheerful, pleasant companion, one whose loss will be deeply felt by all.

A BRIEF REPLY.

EDITOR HERALD:

Dear Sir—We have just seen the article of J. H. O. in your last issue, and have no reply to make. We did not before know that J. H. O. held himself to be an inspired Prophet of the Lord, and to be speaking under Divine direction, as were Elijah and Daniel, to whom he compares himself, which is a very different thing from a self appointed wise man of this world to which were alluding; and therefore understanding this to be his claim in the case, however absurd his deliverances may seem to us, we take it for granted that it is only because we are not able to comprehend them; and bowing with becoming reverence and awe, we hold ourselves to be corrected and reproved. ANTI-ZOPHAR.

Tecumseh, Feb. 10, 1881.

WE understand that certain parties in Tecumseh have a number of shares in a large manufacturing business for sale cheap. The business is an entirely new invention, the result of former Clinton talent, which Tecumseh bought up because "Clinton never could appreciate a good thing" when she had it.—Clinton News.

Look out, you treadle on some one's toes.

SOME persons were of the opinion that the late General John B. Williams, of Detroit, commanded the Michigan troops in the Black Hawk war instead of the late General Brown of this place. A Detroit gentleman comes to the front and decides the matter by showing that both had command of a division.

TIDINGS FROM THE WEST.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 6, 1881.

Owing to the revolution of the earth the Mississippi river tends to the western bank, thus causing bluffs of a more abrupt nature on the one side than on the other. The great Creator of the universe sifted gold and silver in the western hills and planted the first little colony at the East, and in after years we find as a result the rich fertile plains intervening dotted here and there with farm houses, villages and cities, erected by those whose spirit of enterprise and the love of gain has prompted them to seek a home in the West, or to "go West," prospect and open up a business for themselves and wait to see the result. If satisfactory all is well, if not, strike out further west or back to the old home. This is the spirit that moved us to the West. Now we find ourselves in this live city of 60,000. It is indeed a live place in every respect. It seems queer to one from the quiet town of Tecumseh to see men working, building fires at different points on the main streets, thereby making it easier and facilitating the work on sewers, gas pipes and water works. This week I chanced to pass where several new hydrants have been put in place within a few days, and on the same street I saw builders at work on dwellings, stores and barns—no stopping for winter yet. The weather has not been severe since we came here. The thermometer has ranged form 10° to 50° above and no snow; rain to-day. Much work yet remains to be done on the streets of Kansas City to make them what nature has done for old Tecumseh, that is to "level up." Many places even on the most important streets are so uneven that pedestrians frequently fall in icy weather. In many places the original bluffs stand as high as buildings on the opposite side of the street.

This is an exciting town on account of the rough portion of society that occasionally, if not daily, disturb quiet citizens. The first evening of our arrival here was ushered in with the death of I. M. Smith, cashier of the Kansas City Bank, who was assaulted and thrown over the bluffs near the depot down a rocky embankment of forty feet, crushing his skull. Present prospects indicate a good field here for our work in the Home Guardian Sickness and Accident Insurance; at least it starts out well.

We find here occasionally a Michigan man. W. A. Satterlee, a former teacher in the Tecumseh high school, is engaged as book-keeper in Samuel Yourtee & Co.'s carriage, harness and horse goods' establishment; Lyman J. Baskin is operating lively in mercantile agency and law; Dan Carpenter as printer, and Dr. I. A. Garlinghouse has opened an office on Main street for the practice of medicine. Business prospects have a good outlook at present, and with thirteen railroads centering here it must increase. The clearings of the business done here during the month of December last was twelve millions; 1500 new buildings went up here last year, and 900 more will be erected the coming spring and summer. Carpenters get from $2 to $2.50 per day. A lot on Walnut street sold last week for $400 per foot. Many large factories will also be started the coming season. My hand is tired and I will say farewell.

E. HAUSE.

Of their recent engagement in Grand Rapids the Eagle of that city says:

"Most prominent of the new elements introduced is the part played by Mr. A. O. Miller, who makes a sagacious and intensely comical character of Muzzle, a darkey who has been "bounced" from the celebrated Lime Kiln Club, and who stirs up roars of laughter, as he never fails to do and seemingly cannot help doing, when he takes a part for all the fun there is in it or can be worked out of it. Mrs. Miller's acting of Mrs. Reed makes that character a gentle, refined woman, still filled with motherly love while overwhelmed with sorrow at being turned over to the poor-house as old age approaches, with the knowledge and consent of her children. Mrs. Miller's acting in this part is that of true art reflecting nature, and was therefore duly effective upon the audience, who watched her and listened to her intently and sympathetically."

AT the Universalist church next Sunday evening, by request, the pastor will discourse from Matt. 25—46: "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."

OBITUARY.

HANFORD—Entered into rest on Wednesday, Feb. 2, 1881, after a long protracted illness, Mrs. Elenor Hanford, beloved wife of Abraham Hanford of this village.

Mrs. Hanford was born in Onondaga Co. N. Y., Nov. 18, 1826. She was married to Mr. Hanford Dec. 19, 1849. In March, 1854 they settled in Tecumseh, which has been their home since that time, now almost 27 yrs. She leaves beside her husband, two children to mourn her loss, Mrs. Stella Blackmar, residing in Georgetown, Colorado, and a son at home, Grant O. Hanford. The event of Mrs. Hanford's death though for some time looked forward to, and anticipated by her family and friends brings a deep sense of personal loss. She was a woman who by endearing virtues attached to herself warm personal friends. A woman of more than ordinary intelligence, of gentle and pleasing manners, of a kind and obliging disposition, always ready to help those in affliction or distress, remarkably faithful and true to her friends, endeared and idolized in her family and home. Her funeral was attended on Sunday last at her late residence by a large concourse of friends and neighbors. The solemn service for the burial of the dead was read by the Rector at St. Peter's church, and the body then conveyed to Clinton for sepulchre, accompanied by a long train of sorrowing friends. As a mark of sympathy to their afflicted brother, the masonic fraterity both in Tecumseh and in Clinton attended the funeral rites.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

AN ESSAY ON HOUSEKEEPING.

BY MRS. J. W. GILLESPIE.

At a meeting of the Farmers' Club, held at the residence of Mr. F. Horton on the evening of Dec. 17, 1880, I was chosen by a committee consisting of Mrs. J. Benedict, Mrs. I. H. Schreder and Mr. Geo. Griswold, to write an essay, entitled "The Events of a Week or a Housekeepers Diary."

Now I think this committee made a sad mistake, for surely among so many members present they could have chosen one of more fertile brain and abler pen than mine to have undertaken so great a task. Many a time during the last few days has the thought come to me that while speech is silver, silence is golden; and could I only remain silent on this subject, happy might I be. But the mandate has went forth and as it is the duty of all the members to do whatever they can to make these meetings cheerful, pleasant and interesting, I could not refuse to obey. And if kind friends I fail to interest you, judge me not too critically I beg of you, but remember that many a day has passed away since I as a school girl wrote essays and compositions at the teacher's bidding, and read them for the instruction and perchance amusement of my schoolmates. Well written, earnest thought is a golden diadem, and right worthy of the crown are they who can, no matter what the subject be, in language eloquent and chaste transfer their thoughts to paper in such a manner as to make it interesting and instructive for others to peruse.

Some one has said that a woman's work is never done, and sometimes I think it is too true a saying. But though a ceaseless and monotonous round of toil a woman's work has no continuance. Day by day, week by week, it leads on into the future without expansion; each day's duties forming a circle so firmly welded that tomorrow's duties cannot be linked in to form a chain. A woman's life is a daily round of monotonous duties that must be done again and again, and every good housekeeper is continually finding some new and more sensible method of preparing some of their tasks that daily must be done anew. Women engaged in daily toil have no idea how much these tasks may be lightened if their minds have something instructive to feed upon. And as there is always more than one train of thought passing through our minds it is in the power of all to cultivate these different trains of thought, and thus grow in knowledge even while attending to the duties of the home circle. But first in order to become a successful farmer's wife we must study order and economy; not merely financial economy, that is of course one of the most essential items, but economy of time, and as ever King Winter brings little or no respite to a housewife's duties, where she does her own work, it is for her own interest to study how she can accomplish the most work in the least time and with the least fatigue to herself. Now I know that there are no two persons that do their work exactly alike, not even mother and daughter, but doubtless every one is apt to think her way the best and most likely for her it is the easiest. Now I don't pretend to most very much, nor even doing my work, yet I think that taking one week with another by having certain days to do certain duties, no unforseen occurrence preventing, I manage to do my work with care and have more leisure hours to devote to sewing, reading, writing, etc., than I otherwise would did I do my work in a haphazard sort of way. But were I to enter into all the details of the manner in which as a housekeeper I pass my time over for one week, I should not only weary your patience but so trespass upon time that the gentlemen would have no opportunity to resume their interesting discussion upon the topic of the last meeting, viz: Straw. And so I will merely give a brief synopsis of the manner and order in which I do my general housework one week with another through the fifty-two weeks of the year. True, there as the one thing most needful, toward a successful day's work, is a good brisk fire and having early married life learned my place, and master with the dreadful it is a part of his duty to kindle the morning fire as well as to provide the fuel therefor. I have no trouble or that sort to bring very obedient wife, I hint that it is time the fires were built. My morning work completed I prepare the breakfast. I skim the milk, winter or summer, I always skim the milk before breakfast, then set the table. By this time my gude man comes in with the milk and while he is getting ready to eat, I strain and put it away. Then we are ready to partake of our morning meal. Breakfast over, dish-washing is next in order. Now who does not dread dish-washing? Now, methinks I hear some of the gentlemen say that it is only play. But by the way, did you ever see a man wash dishes? Well, this is the way they most all do: wad the dish-cloth up in their hands and rub the saucers with their knuckles. Dishes washed, house put in order by sweeping, dusting, making beds, etc., I go to washing, this being Monday morning, and I am old-fashioned enough that Monday is the true washing day. Having put the boiler upon the stove before we ate breakfast I have plenty of water ready to go to work with. I never use pounding barrel, washing machine or washing fluid of any kind; always wash my calico clothes first; think it the best way, if a person has many to wash. Then my white clothes are thoroughly rubbed, boiled in a light suds and are soon ready for the line. Generally through washing at ten o'clock at the latest; then have my cleaning up done in season to get dinner. The afternoon I spend in sewing or doing any of the odds and ends of work that require to be done, no matter how well regulated the house may be. Tuesday is my ironing day and most always I churn and bake also, this for my forenoon's work after doing up my other morning work. In the afternoon I do up the weeks' mending or at least a portion of it; think it a bad practice to put off such work until the last day of the week. Wednesday I do up the morning work as usual, and after sorting and putting away the weeks' washing which is now thoroughly aired, always being careful to avoid any dampness with the garments when put away, I have leisure time to do what ever duty or inclination dictate until time to prepare dinner. Dinner over, dishes washed, house again in order, I have leisure hours again in the afternoon to spend as I see fit. Thursday, the usual household duties accomplished, I churn, bake again and do the cleaning up, which will occupy the most of the forenoon. Afternoon have the same leisure hours to devote to sewing, reading, or perchance go and make a neighborly visit to some friend. Friday is what I style my general redding up day, by which I mean after doing up my usual morning work, with broom and duster in hand I go through that part of the house which is not in daily use, and sweep, dust and see that all things are in order and in their place, being careful to note the while that no busy little spider has sown a web to ornament the corners. This duty accomplished, together perhaps with a few minor duties, such as washing the windows of the living rooms, putting fresh papers upon the pantry shelves, etc., takes up the better part of the morning. Dinner over, dishes washed, I have the afternoon to pass away as I wish. Saturday is, as we all know, generally a busy day, at least in the forenoon, as there is the churning, morning and taking to be done sufficient to last over Sunday and Monday, for I do not like to bake when I am washing. But I generally manage to have it all done in time to get dinner in good season. Dinner work completed and house in order, the leisure hours of the afternoon I pass as heretofore or perhaps go to town for a change although I don't make a practice of going to town every saturday afternoon, preferring to go some other day of convenience. And now ladies I think I have given you a pretty concise idea of the manner in which I manage my work one week with another, and if any of you wish to know the method of my so doing you will have to come and stay a week with me and I will endeavor to explain fully, by practice what I think would be wholly impossible to do upon paper unless to one endowed with more patience than your humble servant. And now as this is the first meeting of the members in the new year, it will not be inopportune for me to close my essay by wishing you all a happy New Year and the hope that prosperity may be with you all and though in the year just dead many disappointed hopes lie prone within the casket that old father time with his long bony fingers of years has just clasped forever. Let us mourn not, but with renewed hope and fresh aspiration turn in joy to the new born year and with loving thankful hearts and eager hands reap the fleeting moments as they fly. Let the dead past bury its dead, but let us profit by the lessons taught and with faith, hope and charity for our companions, peace, joy and pleasure shall come at our bidding.

The horses of the German army are now fed with biscuits. They consist of thirty parts of oat flour, thirty parts of unfermented pea flour, thirty parts of rye flour and ten parts of linseed flour, sometimes of twenty parts of pea flour, twenty parts of wheat flour, twenty parts of corn meal, twenty parts of rye flour, twenty parts of grated bread, and ten parts of linseed flour. The ingredients are made into biscuits. The first-named mixture is the best. These biscuits are made with a hole in the middle of each, so they can be strung and hung to the saddle-bow, or be carried by the trooper around the waist. Each biscuit weighs, baked dry and hard, about two ounces. Seven biscuits are broken up and given to the horse in the morning, moistened with water, if convenient, otherwise dry—twelve at noon and seven at night. After careful experiments in camp, on the march and manœuvring, they are reported by all the cavalry and artillery officers better than oats. A trooper can easily carry thirty pounds of these biscuits, which will furnish his horse with full rations for eight days, or will serve, with forage, for twenty days' hard marching.

An Anecdote of Astor.

The Boston Transcript tells the following good story of John Jacob Astor:

One of his captains had sailed six voyages to China and other distant countries with no chronometer, depending only on "dead reckoning" and "lunars." Just before starting on his seventh voyage, he suggested to Mr. Astor that it would be safer to have a chronometer. "Well, get one," said the merchant. The captain did so, and entered its cost in his account current. When Mr. Astor's eye fell upon the item, he drew his pencil through it. The captain expostulated. "Tam it, man," said Astor, "I told you to get one; I didn't say I'd pay for it." The captain severed his connection with Astor then and there, went into Wall street and engaged with other owners, and before night was in command of as fine a ship as ever floated in New York's beautiful bay.

In three days he was ready for sea, and set sail. At the same time, Astor's ship, under command of a new captain, set sail also. They had a race for Hong Kong, but the captain who, as he used to put it, had discharged John Jacob Astor, by keeping the men at the braces and taking advantage of every puff of wind, won by three days. The ship was loaded in the shortest possible time, and before Astor's vessel, which had arrived meantime, was half loaded, our captain weighed anchor, and with a full cargo of tea set sail for Sandy Hook, arrived in good time, got his ship alongside the wharf, and began hoisting out his cargo, which was sold by auction on the spot. This glutted the market, for the consumption was comparatively small in those days, and when Astor's ship came in, prices had fallen. Two days later, as the captain was sauntering down Broadway, he met his former employer. "How much did dat chronometer cost you?" asked the latter. "Six hundred dollars," was the reply. "Vell, dat vas sheap," said Astor, "it cost me $600,000."

The merchant and the captain have both, years since, paid the long reckoning, but that chronometer is still a good time-keeper, and treasured relic as well.

The Planet Mars.

Prof. Lockyer thinks that human life on the planet Mars may be very much like human life on the earth. Although the light cannot be so bright, yet the organs of sight of the inhabitants may be so much more susceptible as to make their vision quite as good as ours. Probably the heat on Mars is less than on the earth as the polar snows extend further toward the equator, but it is by no means in proportion to the lessened power of the solar rays. Several remarkable seas are now definable in the Southern Hemisphere, where, as in the case of the southern hemisphere of the earth, water covers a much larger area than in the northern hemisphere. One of the southern seas of mars is very like the Baltic in outline. Another sea near the equator is one thousand miles in length and about one-hundred in breadth—a long, straggling body of water, pretty much the shape of the letter S laid on its back, stretching from east to west.

The golden chain that reaches from earth to heaven is the foundation and cap-stone of the climax of all the Christian graces. It is an unpolished marble set in the frame of love, resting on equity and justice. It is the brightest star in the Christian's diadem. Without it our religion is like a body without a soul, our lives more icebergs on the ocean of time; but did universal charity reign earth would be a heaven.

Vegetable acids cool and dilute the blood, and generally refresh the system. All fruits contain acids and salts, which exercise a cooling and invigorating influence. Apricots, peaches, apples, pears, gooseberries and currants contain malic acid. Lemons, raspberries, grapes and pineapples contain citric acid. The skin of grapes and plums contains tartaric acid, which has a bitter taste.

Railways in ocean travel urges those who fear seasickness to take a teaspoonful of the sugar before sailing and a dose of citrate of magnesia on the following morning. Then eat breakfast and go on board. He has followed this practice for several years and been entirely free from all qualms. All those who have imitated him have been equally fortunate.

Land sold for taxes may be redeemed at any time within five years from the date of sale by payment of the amount for which the same was sold and 25 per cent additional, if redeemed within six months; between six and twelve months, 50 per cent additional; between twelve and fifteen months, 75 per cent additional; and two years, 100 per cent additional.

It is not what we earn, but what we save, that makes us rich. It is not what we eat, but what we digest, that makes us strong. It is not what we read, but what we remember, that makes us wise. It is not what we intend, but what we do, that makes us useful. It is not a few fair wishes, but a life-long struggle, that makes us valued.

What is more quaint and poetic than a child's idea of ice: Water gone to sleep.

Hard words never taught wisdom, nor does truth require them.

The Detroit Light Guard, Co. A, of Brigt. M. S. T., have issued invitations for the Governor's levee and military soiree in honor of His Excellency, David H. Jerome, to be given under their auspices. The invitations are decidedly rich and neat, in full accordance with all the undertakings of Co. A.

It is fearfully solemn to hear the insurance agents of Tecumseh relate the miseries and privations of families who have lost their home and all by fire, and then moralized upon the happiness that an insurance policy would have brought to the households.

IRELAND.

A Record of Her Internal Disturbances

The Fenian proclamation is placarded in Salford and Oldham.

The placards which are now pronounced the work of the Fenians, were posted generally in the Provinces, and were torn down by the police.

The London Daily News and the Pall Mall Gazette disapprove of the sweeping nature of the bill for the protection of life and property in Ireland, especially the retroactive provision.

A dispatch from Cork says: "Flying columns are stationed at Limerick, Fermoy and Cook will march Tuesday. Extraordinary precautions are being taken for the protection of the Barracks of Tralee."

A land meeting attended by 7,000 persons was held at Cloghan, King's County. The Dublin authorities have made arrangements to increase the number of mounted constables at forty-seven stations in the outlying districts of South and West Ireland, and mounted men will be attached to stations for the purpose of sporting communication in case the telegraph lines are cut.

The London Daily News says it has reason to believe that the new Land Bill embodies the principle of the "three F's," governed by the establishment of a special court of reference for disputes between landlord and tenant.

The Fenian proclamation has been posted in North Shields.

It is positively stated a branch of the Land League has been formed in the Island of Jersey by an agent from America.

A priest and twenty members of the Land League have been summoned to answer charges of intimidation at Mallow.

The Secretary of the Parnell defense fund has been committed for trial on a charge of intimidation.

Michael Davitt has been arrested under his "ticket of leave." News of the arrest spread through the provinces with amazing rapidity, and many indignation meetings have already been held. The arrest was for not reporting himself to the police. Immediately after his arrest, Eagan, Brennan and Dillon, of the Land League, went to the Castle and sought to have an interview with him, but the police informed them he was not there. The detectives on arresting Davitt drove to Kingston, where the prisoner was placed on board a mail steamer for London. Eagan, Brennan and others went to Kingston to see him before the steamer sailed, but the police refused them admittance and would allow no one to see the prisoner except the doctor, who advised him to go to the hospital as soon as he arrived in the prison, as he was threatened with lung trouble. Eagan and Brennan subsequently succeeded in obtaining an interview with Davitt, who was in good spirits. He went before a Magistrate in Bow street, and thence to the convict prison at Dartmoor.

Thomas Brennan, Dublin correspondent of the New York Irish World, and also Secretary of the Land League in Dublin, sends the following by cable to this paper:

"DUBLIN, February 3.—Davitt is arrested. The Castle authorities declare his ticket of leave forfeited. There is intense excitement all over Ireland at the news. The Government, by this act, have thrown off its disguise, and gives all who doubt it may concern to know that it will make open war on the Land League, or on any other organization through which the Irish people may express its will. Great crowds gathered around the newspaper offices. Knots of men are discussing the act and speculating as to the next step the government will probably take. [illegible] Land League. [illegible]"

PARLIAMENT ROW

Extraordinary Proceedings in the British House of Commons—Forcible Ejectment of Parnell, Dillon and Other Home Rulers.

A London cable dispatch, dated February 8, says: "Vernon Harcourt, Home Secretary, in replying to Parnell, said Davitt was arrested because his action was considered incompatible with his ticket-of-leave. Parnell asked what conditions Davitt had violated. There was no answer to the question. The Irish members cheered and shouted, and the other members [illegible] surprised. The Speaker called on Parnell to withdraw the imputation. John Dillon rose, but the Speaker refused to hear him. After repeated warnings, the Speaker named Dillon, who refused to withdraw the imputation. [illegible] was adopted—[illegible] to 10. Dillon refused to withdraw, and was forcibly ejected by the Sergeant-at-Arms. A meeting of Home Rulers last night, Parnell presiding, discussed the future stages of the Coercion Bill. The unanimous feeling was that they should be resisted with the utmost determination.

At a meeting of Conservatives several members said that rather than submit to the [illegible] they would [illegible] Parliament.

The Cold Weather.

On the 3d and morning was down to as low as 87 degrees below zero. At Saginaw, Mich., it was 85 degrees below; at Wakeman, Ohio, 37 below; at Jamestown, New York, 34 below; at Mayville, 34 below and at Pressburg 34 below. News from Norwich, Ct., says that navigation on the sound is almost at a standstill. Shipping at Delaware Breakwater is completely blocked. Toronto reports the coldest weather in forty years. In New York, in Broadway and other streets the snow is packed solid and rounded so smooth by the wheels of heavy sleds and trucks that horses have difficulty in maintaining a foothold. When one goes down, and this is often, a blockade occurs that takes the policemen a long time to break. As a consequence shippers are subjected to many disappointments, and truckmen paid by the load for merchandise delivered say enough is not earned to keep a horse in fodder, to say nothing of food for families. In the West and Northwest, the weather has been unprecedentedly cold, and there has been much suffering in consequence.

DEATH OF J. C. ADAMS.

We take the following extracts from the obituary notice of J. C. Adams, from the Indianapolis Journal. The deceased was the oldest son of the late Isaac Adams of this place:

J. C. Adams died at his residence, near McCoy's Station, Jan. 15, 1881, after only a few days illness, which probably might be called blood poisoning. He was born in Ossian, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1823. His mother dying when he was but a child, left him to the care of his grand parents, who did well to train him in the principles of the christian religion which guided his after life.

He married Miss Nancy Hamilton, daughter of the late James E. Hamilton, June 7, 1849. Building the present residence of Wm. Scott, one mile west of Kingston, he began to farm. After a few years he moved to his late home and remained there, with the exception of a brief sojourn in Topeka, Kansas. He served the church of Kingston in the eldership for many terms, being re-elected every three years; and was frequently sent to the Presbyteries and Synods, where he always made a favorable impression. He was also chosen by Presbytery to represent her in the General Assembly of the church.

He was a man of liberal culture, a good degree of natural ability, and a strong tendency to be radically right. Hence, as might be expected, he was in favor of everything good. And what seemed to him wrong, he hated. Being gifted as a teacher and speaker, and acquainted with the Scripture he was a help in the Sabbath school and social meetings of the church. During the week of prayer, sickness in his family prevented his being present but two days. But his words will be remembered; and especially a part of his prayer for his pastor, which went over the long years of their christian fellowship, from before the time the eldest child, a little girl, came out on the Lord's side publicly, till after the youngest, a year ago, was enrolled among the professed friends of Christ.

On a sharp, stinging winter's day a man on his way to dinner can fall leaving a star of the first magnitude on the icy sidewalk and upon his arrival at the dinner table invoke the divine blessing with perfect equanimity of mind; but when the weather is at this moderate temperature, let his treacherous feet allow his body to seek the ground, leaving an imprint of his reclining form in the slush of three months' snow, he will be mentally and morally unfit to fulfill his religious duties for two weeks.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN'S habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to the Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

For the Daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free. Address, I. W. ENGLAND,
Publisher of THE SUN, New York City.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

ADDISON.

The saw mills in this section of country have received more logs this winter than during any season for some years.

Since the recent thaw we observe wheat to be looking badly in many places.

Wheat, straw and corn fodder was never in better demand than now.

One of the fine Holstein cows owned by Mr. Arthur Underwood of this place took sick and died a few days since. The creature was valued at $400.

Mr. Chas. Claybrooks, a colored man, residing north of town, lost a horse recently.

The class in vocal music taught by Mr. L. Salsbury has made arrangements for a general review of the work gone over during the winter. Hereafter the class will meet for practice at the M. E. instead of the Friends' church.

Last Saturday's Band of Hope entertainment was a success, and we trust the fine effort will prompt the organization to increased zeal in the work.

Since entering upon the duties of principal of the schools here Mr. Fuller has won the confidence of our citizens as a teacher to such an extent as to do him no small credit.

Mrs. R. Hathaway has been in feeble health for some months, and doubts are now entertained by some of her friends as to her recovery. Mrs. H. has been a woman of estimable worth and untiring energy in every department of life. Secularly, strong and willing; socially, instructive and pleasant; spiritually, patient and long suffering.

Miss Emma Richey is reported convalescing.

The pleasant apartments of Mr. O. B. Bowen's residence were set apart as the place for St. Valentine's little missives to be distributed on the evening of the 14th. Many were the little hearts made to "rejoice and be glad by reason thereof."

CLINTON.

We noticed quite a number of Tecumseh people on our streets last Monday.

Frank Miller has some fifteen or sixteen very fine Canadian horses, and Cook & Palmer about the same number of Ohio ones here for sale.—They are a splendid lot of horses taken together.

If there is one thing, that conduces to the public good of any village or city more than another, it is unquestionably its hotel accommodations.—And for some years past it has been our misfortune in this respect to suffer sadly from the want of a properly conducted public house. At last, however, hopes are entertained that the long looked for change for the better has come. Frank Silvers of this place has recently purchased the Exchange hotel property, and having refurnished it entire feels confident that by attending strictly to the duties of "mine host" the public will soon learn that once more they can be "warmed and fed" in Clinton as well as in other towns. We wish him abundant success.

RIDGEWAY.

The funeral of Mrs. Elsa Rendall took place on Thursday.

Henry Baughman has taken to wife a daughter of the late J. V. Hoagland.

See to it that your T. & M. R. R. notes have a depot clause put in.

Henry Clark, of this township, died on Sunday last and was buried on Tuesday.

A train went over the D. & B. Tuesday distributing fence posts.

Mrs. G. P. Waring, and her sister Miss Ella Cadnius, are visiting at the State capitol this week.

Geo. W. Jackson can tell you something of how much patience Job had, being similarly afflicted.

There will be a donation party held in the M. E. church on Tuesday evening next, for the benefit of the church. Let everybody consider themselves invited and govern themselves accordingly.

A. O. MILLER appeared last Monday evening as Muzzel, in "Over the Hills to the Poor House." The play is a good one, and his company did it justice. Mr. Miller himself in the leading role is a capital hit, the character seeming to be exactly adapted to him. Those who were present were well satisfied. Mr. Miller will visit Tecumseh again at an early day and we bespeak for him a full house.

ON THE THRESHOLD.

"Dying?" Yes, they tell me so,
Well, 'tis something just to know
This fierce pain must soon forego
Its envenomed dart.
Bound no longer in Time's thrall,
Deaf at last to Sorrow's call,
God's own peace shall softly fall
On my tired heart.

"Lonely?" It may be I miss
Something, in an hour like this,
Which might tremble in a kiss,
On lips silent grown;
But the truest love, if high,
Could not whisper, "sweet, good-bye!"
Standing on the shore, while I
Drift away—alone.

"Frightened?" What is there to fear?
Through the solemn dark I hear
Sweet souls calling: "Be of cheer—
God thy step shall keep;"
Take away the lights, and let
No one come, with vain regret,
My soul's calm to grieve and fret.
Hush and let me sleep!

Bioplasm.

Among the recent discoveries in science, none perhaps, will prove of more utility to man than those relating to bioplasm, because they throw light on physiological questions, particularly those concerning the construction and nutrition of the body and the causes of disease. It was formerly supposed that our bodies were alive from top to toe, inside and out; but this is found to be a mistake. Only about one-fifth part is alive: the rest is formed material. Everybody knows that a tree may become so hollow that only a shell is left; yet the tree may grow and mature buds and leaves and fruit. It is because the outside of the tree—the bark—is alive; the wood is non-living; it is simply formed material. Now the body is not like a tree—alive only on the outside; but the living portion and the formed material exist together in every part—in every tissue, organ and vessel.

A slight abrasion of the cuticle, or the rupture of a cell, is followed by particles of fluid which were formerly overlooked as of no account. But the microscope has revealed to us that this apparently useless, insignificant ooze is the vital, living part of the body; it is bioplasm.

This is the mechanic, the skilled artist, that constructs the cells, builds the organs, and perhaps, under the direction of a higher power, adapts each part to one harmonious whole.

For the last fifteen years, certain English and German physiologist have spent much time with the microscope, watching this workman. They have seen it forming tissue, muscle, and nerve, changing food into blood, making the secretions, and, as parts of the body become worn and effete, silently disintegrating and utilizing them, or removing the useless parts from the body.

The first decided knowledge of bioplasm came by accident (if finding a thing we are searching for can be called accident; is it not rather revelation?) by ascertaining that when a piece of live tissue is immersed in a solution of carmine the bioplasm is stained. This discovery has enabled observers to find and watch this little workman, while busy in constructing every part of the body.

Bioplasm is the builder, not only of the body, but of all animals and plants. In every organized form, whether animal or vegetable, owes its formation and growth.

Bioplasm is a clear, colorless fluid, like thin mucus. Only microscopes of the highest power are of use in studying the substance, for the largest normal masses are not one-thousandth of an inch in diameter; but such microscopes fail to detect in it the least sign of organization. Yet this apparent unorganized substance is the cause of all organization. It is the medium through which dead inorganic matter becomes living, organized.

How Vaccine is Obtained.

Through the kindness of Dr. Bessey, says the Hamilton (Ont.) Star, our reporter recently had an opportunity of visiting Logan's Farm to inspect the process of collecting vaccine lymph from an animal vaccinated for the purpose with cow-pox. On arriving at the farm-house of the late Sir William Logan, (now occupied by Mr. Thomas Irving), we were shown the fine stock of Ayrshire cattle for which the farm is famous. The animal that attracted particular attention was the vaccinated Ayrshire heifer, one year old, valued at $100. It had been closely shaven about the flanks, had been vaccinated about six days previously, and the spot was now covered with a fine crop of genuine cow-pox pustules. The latter were hundreds in number and had the appearance of beads of pearl with a depression in the centre of a drab or slate color, having a whitish rim. The animal having been properly secured to prevent kicking, the pustules were punctured with sharp ivory points, especially made for the purpose. The clear, water-like lymph which exuded from the puncture was collected on the ivory points alluded to, and these were laid on a board to dry. A number of the vesicles were left untouched, so as to produce "scabs, which are still preferred to lymph by many of the older practitioners. The lymph having dried on the ivory points, the latter are carefully packed in cotton wadding, blue paper and tin-foil, and placed in an air-tight tin box in a cool place for preservation. On Logan's Farm are about thirty animals which have had the cow-pox during the past six months. No injury results to them from the infection. In a fortnight all trace of the disease disappears, and the animal is not again susceptible to the infection.

A Simple Protective Against Epidemics.

Those who are at all afraid of epidemic diseases may feel comforted on hearing that one of the best protective measures they can resort to is a very simple one—the use of soap and water. An eminent physician says:

"It is worth while for common people to learn that typhoid typus germs will thrive in the circumference of a pin-head or a visible globule. It is worth while for them to note that these germs may be dessicated and be borne, like thistle seeds, everywhere, and like demoniacal possessions, may jump noiselessly down any throat. But there are certain things spores cannot stand, according to the latest ascertained results of science. A water temperature of 120 degress boils them to death, and soap chemically poisons them. Here sanitary and microscopic science come together. Spores thrive in low ground and under low conditions of life. For redemption, fly to hot water and soap, ye who live in danger of malarial poisoning. Hot water is sanitary. Soap is more sanitary. Fight typus, smallpox, yellow fever and ague with soap. Soap is a board of health.

Changes Imperative.

It is certain that the surveys and exploring expeditions now in progress will soon require the preparation of new maps, while the vast system of re-arrangements in the boundaries of counties, and the creation of new states and the annexation of old ones, indicates that already the time has come. The text of our school geographies must conform to the fixed facts of political geography. No map of Europe, a year old, is reliable. The northern coast of Siberia must be rectified on our maps. School books should be true to the facts of to-day.

Arithmetic is used in mechanics, engineering, commerce and finance, and the tendency is toward a decimal system in money, weight and extension in its three directions. A common unit is sought whose rates of increase and decrease shall be ten.

We cannot estimate the result of this tendency. The decimal metric system is in exclusive use in eighteen states, comprising a population of 236 millions of inhabitants; its use is optional, but legal, in the three English speaking states, with a population of 75 millions; it is admitted in principle or partially for customs in five states, with 343 millions of inhabitants; it is in principle or optionally, or legally established in twenty-six states, with a population of 655 millions. Four states have decimal systems, based not on the metre as the unit. These states comprise 471 million inhabitants. At this date more than half the people of civilized states legally recognize the decimal metric system of weights and measures.

The christian states have been devising a common system of decimal coinage. The chief obstacle is the want of a unit of value.

In chemistry, there are now recognized several elementary substances not known a few years since, while a most intractable gas, has been reduced to a liquid. Electro-magnetic science must be rewritten, and spelling reform has descended from the regions of theory to the newspaper and fireside discussion.

Our school books should be free to appropriate any discovery in science or change of form, or system of calculation. And doubtless they will, if they are let alone. But if the books of this day are by contract, placed in schools to remain for a series of years, no improvement or change in their design, character or adaptation to teaching things as they may be, can be a anticipated. Their educational value can not increase, while if new standards of value, weight or extension be adopted, that value must be greatly impaired or quite destroyed.

There is a movement countenanced in very respectable quarters to secure fiat spelling, and fiat writing and printing. If it will go one step farther and establish fiat pronunciation, we will admit that a legislative enactment can prevent fish from biting, if the angler has not paid his poll tax.

School books are helps to pupils to learn what they will need to know when they are grown up. While they should be as good as possible, any policy which shuts them up to improvement is contrary to sound education and true science. Yet, a policy which impresses on them an unchanging character of contents; closes them to a recognition of newly discovered facts, and prevents them from adapting themselves to new systems of values, or new applications of the properties of numbers. If historic truth should prevail over the partiality of patriotism, American history will need to be rewritten. Lee, at Monmouth, will not then escape with a charge of vacillation. His treachery will not be veiled in a doubt.

We deprecate in the interests of public schools a policy which requires the books of yesterday to be the books for successive years, thereby depriving them of their best character, that of keeping themselves adapted to the varying wants of pupils. If such a policy may be detrimental to schools, it is still more detrimental to the general welfare. It is an extreme interference with the right of individual action. There have been discussions of sumptuary laws, but an enactment to determine what books alone may be used in the people's school is a precedent of an extreme character.

It is not easy to overestimate the importance of leaving school books free to be improved, rearranged, or rewritten, to meet the real wants of pupils. Even the foundation of christian morals has been disturbed by the researches of a few scientists into the origin and principle of physical life. A similar investigation is going on in the department of intellectual life and development. It is easy to trace the influence of this on the methods of education. Teachers find it advisable to have more "drill work," and present overtures to publishers to prepare books for this specific end. There is a healthy drift among teachers to push their work beyond the point of simple instruction, beyond the point of comprehension by their pupils, to ease, rapidity and accuracy in the use of the knowledge. The order of the studies, or what branches should be first taught, is not neglected. This is not settled, but the discussion must have an influence on the character of text-books. It is unwise to place restrictive financial disabilities in the way of changes in these books to increase the efficiency of school work. Schools should be left open to all advantages, and any gain in their educational value, will be cheaply purchased by leaving the power to exercise it at will, to the decision of those immediately concerned.

But the school district fills another office than maintaining a school for popular education of children. It has a great and almost an unsuspected political value. From its importance, its universality, and its nearness to the sacred interests of parents, it is the primary republic in the state; the first teacher of the duties and powers of self-government, the first place where official accountability is enforced by the wakeful solicitude of the people. It needs some restraints of law to protect it from the capriousness of reckless innovators, but generally it is the best thing for the legislature to let alone.

The disinfection of letters containing paper money during the height of the Russian plague panic was effected on the Prussian border by exposing them for six hours in a peculiarly constructed closed vessel to the fumes of sulphuric acid. It was not considered necessary to open or puncture the letters, since it was proved by experiment that the vapor of the acid penetrates the pores of paper, however firmly made. In the laboratory of the Berlin Board of Health, blue litmus paper, enclosed in four thicknesses of paper, and in several envelopes tightly compressed, was intensely reddened by being subjected to the fumes of this acid.

Remedies Worth Trying.

The Paris correspondent of the Boston Courier, referring to his recovery from a dangerous illness, says: I mention this illness that I may tell you how easily I was cured. I was bent double. I could not breathe. My physician ordered me to take a flat-iron and heat it as hot as I could bear; put a double fold of flannel on the painful part, and move the iron to and froon the flannel. I was cured as by enchantment. My doctor told me that some time since a professor in one of our colleges, after suffering some days with neuralgia in the head, which he himself had tried to cure, sent for the former, who prescribed a hot flat-iron. The next time the doctor saw the professor, the latter exclaimed with mock anger: "I really shall not pay you any fee! What! I had no sooner applied the heated iron to my head than instantly all pain vanished! That is as simple as good day; surely you cannot expect a fee for it!" My physician was summoned recently to the bedside of a woman who had neuralgia in both sides, and so violently she alarmed the whole neighborhood by the screams which her intolerable anguish wrung from her. She was taken from her bed and borne near the fire. In such severe cases a heated iron is not energetic enough. He has an iron rod fastened in an ivory handle. He heats this rod to white heat (which causes less pain than red heat) and applies it very slightly to the seat of pain, first in longitudinal, then in latitudinal lines. The application is so light that no trace is left, but red lines on the epidermis which are soon effaced. In twenty minutes the woman walked back to bed, and the third day afterwards quitted it entirely, freed from neuralgia. This instrument is not to be entrusted to awkward hands. Three weeks ago, one of our brilliant artists was invited to shoot by the owner of a chateau in whose grounds there are wild fowl in abundance. He woke, the morning after arriving at this gentleman's house, with sciataca in his right thigh. The nearest doctor was sent for. "I can do nothing which will give you immediate relief." The artist is a patient of my physician. He told the doctor what to do. The latter declined taking the responsibility of any such violent treatment. "But I assume all responsibility." The doctor applied an iron rod heated to white heat, but so awkwardly that the artist has scars the size of a five franc piece on his thigh. He was nevertheless cured, and enjoyed a week's sport without another twitch of pain.

Some Clever Girls.

I must give an account of an adroit and very pretty and harmless piece of finenessing resorted to by a party of young ladies here the other day, by means of which the ladies concerned obtained some very choice seats in the senate gallery, where hundreds were in vain seeking admittance, much to the mystification of certain senators and an attache of one of the legations. The ladies in question have a teacher of modern languages who possesses a remarkably fine presence and a cultivated manner, and speaks French with true French accent. Noticing that the diplomatic gallery was unoccupied, though all the others were packed, the jolly party proposed to their teacher that they should pass themselves off on the polite doorkeeper of the diplomatic gallery as persons entitled to admittance. This agreed to, they marched coolly up, with their teacher at the front, who affecting to be a stranger to the place, asked the doorkeeper in fluent French if that was the diplomatic gallery, and upon receiving an affirmative response, she asked him to admit them, which he proceeded to do with a great flourish, though with surprise in his face, evidently wondering how it happened that these legation people had never presented themselves there before, or that he had never seen them. Into the gallery the fair deceivers filed and took possession of the front seats, with all eyes turned upon them. Senators rest their eyes upward, and stared puzzled, unable to make out to which legation they belonged. Again and again senators turned and looked. A member of one of the legations stepped in on the floor of the senate from the side where the diplomatic gallery is visible. His eyes fell upon the fairy bevy, and he stood and gazed. A senator walked over to him and evidently asked him who the comers were, for the two stood and looked, and walked away mystified. Meanwhile the ladies sat demurely looking on at the proceedings, soberly and calmly, as if they were in their proper place, and were the foreignest of foreigners.

Brevity.

The king of Zulu-land is said to have recently addressed a note to the British officer at South Africa as follows: "Excellency—First came the missionary, next the consul, now the army. Cetywayo." This brief letter recalls some short speeches and cart correspondence which will doubtless be delightful reading in these times of long harrangues at Albany and Washington. A western judge once upon a time, addressed the grand jury in these words: "Gentlemen: The weather is extremley hot; I am very old; you know your duty—perform it." Another American judge once intervened in an odd way to prevent a waste of words. He was sitting in chambers, and seeing, from the pile of papers in the lawyer's hands, that a certain case was likely to be a long one, he asked: "What is the amount in question?" "Two dollars, your honor," said the plaintiff's counsel. "I'll pay it," said the judge, handing over the money; "call the next case." An English judge was more patient. He listened for a couple of days to the arguments of counsel as to the construction of an act, and finally observed, when they were done: "Brothers, that act was repealed a year ago." One morning a woman was shown into Dr. Abernethy's room. Before he could speak she bared her arm, saying, "burn." "A poultice," said the doctor. Next day she called again, showed her arm, and said: "Better." "Continue the poultice," was the response. A few days afterward she came again; then she said: "Well. Your fee?" "Nothing," said the great physician; you are the most sensible woman I ever saw." Lord Berkeley, wishing to apprise the Duke of Dorset of his changed condition, wrote: "Dear Dorset: I have just been married, and am the happiest dog alive. Berkeley." The answer came: "Dear Berkeley: Every dog has his day. Dorset." The editor of a Chicago newspaper, wanting the details of a terrible inundation in Connecticut, telegraphed to a correspondent at Hartford: "Send full particulars of the flood." The reply came quickly: "You—all you know of them in Genesis."

Praise after Death.

Men have commonly more pleasure in the criticism that hurt than in that which is innocuous, and are more tolerant of the severity which breaks hearts and ruins fortunes, than of that which falls impotently on the grave.

And thus well says the good and deep-minded Richard Hooker: "To the wisest and best, while they live, the world is continually a froward opposite, and a curious observer of their defects and imperfections; their virtues afterwards it as much admireth. And for this cause, many times that which deserveth admiration would hardly be able to find favor, if they who propose it were not content to profess themselves therein scholars and followers of the ancient. For the world will not endure to hear that we are wiser than any have been which went before."—Book v. ch. vii. 3. He therefore who would maintain the cause of cotemporary excellence against that of elder time, must have every class of men arrayed against him. The generous, because they would not find matter of accusation against established dignities; the envious, because they like not the sound of a living man's praise; the wise, because they prefer the opinion of centuries to that of days; and the foolish, because they are incapable of forming an opinion of their own. Obloquy so universal is not likely to be risked, and few who make an effort to stem the torrent, as it is made commonly in favor of their own works, deserve the contempt which is their only reward.—Ruskin.

The Pope on Brains and Legs.

When Pius IX. was Pope, Fanny Elssler visited Rome, danced and set the public crazy. In forty-eight hours the gilded youth, her admirers, had subscribed twelve thousand francs and bought a splendid crown to be presented to her as a testimonial. When the time came for presenting the danseuse with it, one of the subscribers, an excellent young noble, obtained an audience of the pope and asked if there would be anything wrong in the presentation—if the pope had any objections. "I have neither objection to make nor advice to offer," said his holiness, "but it does seem to me that you might have pitched upon a more appropriate gift. In my simplicity as a priest, I have always thought that crowns were made for heads and not for legs." The crown was duly given to the danseuse, who meanwhile had heard of the pope's saying, and promptly sent the value of the gift in money to the parish priest for the poor. Pius IX. heard of this in his turn, and when next he met one of the subscribers to the testimonial said to him: "You were quite right in giving that woman that crown—she has just proved that there is more sense in her legs than you had in your heads."

OUR CHIP BASKET

The recruits are at target practice.

The captain, to a recruit who misses the mark:

"Stupid! Hand me your gun and watch me; it's the simplest thing in the world."

He shoots—and misses.

"Do you see?" he asks, not at all disconcerted; "that's the way you do! Now."

Shoots again, and "hits it in the same place."

"And that," he remarks, cooly, is the way some others do, that I might mention."

Fires again, and hits the mark,

"And that," he remarks, proudly, "is the way I do it."

An ounce of mother is worth a pound of clergy.

He that cannot bear with other people's passions, cannot govern his own.

To be open to argument and to be open to conviction are two different things.

A man's character is like a fence, for you cannot strengthen it by whitewash.

The hum of the teakettle paid for is far more beautiful than an operatic air on a piano that is not.

A man often needs his anger—as well as his other passions—to blast away the obstacles in his path; but the indiscriminate use of nitro-glycerine is dangerous and destructive.

Thought steals over the earth like a mournful feeling over the soul, and in our sorrowful moods, as in the shadow of the evening, we see stars that were before invisible.

If men would but see more of the future in the present, and mark the harvest in the bud, then life would be more beauteous to them than it is.

The great moments of life are but moments like the others. Your doom is spoken in a word or two. A single look from the eyes, a mere pressure of the hand, may decide it; or of the lips, though they cannot speak.

It is difficult, I own, to blend and unite tranquility in accepting, and energy in using, the facts of life; but it is not impossible; if it be, it is impossible to be happy.

In many matters of opinion, our first and last coincide, though on different grounds; it is the middle stage which is farthest from the truth. Childhood often holds a truth with its feeble fingers, which the grasp of manhood cannot retain—which is the pride of utmost age to recover.

"We old maids," remarked Miss Stibbins, "love cats because we have no husbands, and cats are almost as treacherous as men."

James Parton has named his son Victor Hugo. It will be handy in after years when he wants to say, "Victor Hugo out and split some wood."

The idea that fruit eaten at night is deleterious is proved by the bad effect it had upon Adam from eating an apple after Eve.

The compositor who set up "court of common fleas" for "court of common pleas," has been dropped out of the back window.

A Jersey man tells us his wife was kicked in the jaw by a mule. "Did it hurt her?" "Bless you, no; but the mule broke his leg, and had to be shot."

If you see a bank note on the sidewalk or crossing, be sure you pause, stoop and pick it up. In not doing so, you might be guilty of passing a counterfeit bill.

Deaf Lady—"What's his name?" Young Lady—"Augustus Tyler." Deaf Lady—"Bless me, what a name! Busthis Biler! Eliza, you must be making fun of me."

An eight-day clock is pretty good on the run, but if anything can beat the way a dollar's worth of milk tickets galop into the misty past, we're ready to take a half interest in it.

Of course no woman ever did such a thing, but supposing now for the sake of argument, as it were, that a woman was to go to church for the purpose of showing off her new sacque, would it be sacreligious, so to speak?

A fond mother, hearing that an earthquake was coming, sent her boys to the country to escape it. After a few days she received a note from the friend, saying: "For goodness sake, take your boys away and send along that earthquake instead."

"My dearest Maria," wrote a recently married husband to his wife. She wrote back: "Dearest, let me correct either your grammar or your morals. You address me, 'My dearest Maria.' Am I to suppose you have other dear Marias?"

A very old lady on her death-bed, in a penitential mood, said: "I have been a great sinner more than eighty years, and didn't know it." An old darkey woman who had lived with her a long time exclaimed: "Lors! I knowed it all de time."

A professor, lecturing on the effect of the wind in some western forests, remarked: "In traveling along the road I even sometimes found the logs bound and twisted together to such an extent that a mule couldn't climb over them: so I went around."

Scene: Surrogate's office in a neighboring city—Enters a gentleman, who, after considerable struggling, makes his way to the desk of the chief clerk, to whom he handed a folded document.

"What is this?" says the functionary.

"That is my will," says the visitor.

"What do you want done with it?"

"I want it proved, so that after I am dead there will be no more trouble about it."

"You want it proved? Why, you can't have that done," says the chief clerk, seriously, "until you are dead; but if you will bring in your will after you are dead we will prove it with the greatest pleasure."

Sincerity is speaking as we think, believing as we pretend, acting as we profess, performing as we promise, and being as we appear to be.

—A few evenings since, a father and daughter at Wellesley, Massachusetts, were having a pleasant chat, mutually recalling incidents of the latter's childhood. "I shall never forget," said the young lady, "how you took me out of church one sabbath, when I was about three years old, and punished me for playing in meeting. I can remember the tingling of that peach tree switch to this day."

"Very strange, very strange," said the father; I don't recollect the circumstance at all."

"Ah, well, papa, you were at the other end of the switch!"

Pay as you go, and take extra care you don't go before you pay.

The world's production of gold is one third less than in 1850.

Honest and courageous people have very little to say about either their courage or their honesty. The sun has no need to boast of his brightness nor the moon of her effulgence.

A large mushroom forced its way through twelve inches of concrete, covered with a thick layer of asphalt, in the floor of the savings bank department of the general postoffice in London.

Inexhaustible beds of lignite are found between Jaffa and the Dead Sea. This with the asphaltum, also abundant, will make the Holy Land a coal supplier for all Egypt and Syria, both of which having no wood, pay from $12 to $14 a ton for foreign coal.

Those romantic creatures who hate to call a spade a spade, and who always have the "varioloid" instead of the small-pox, should go to China. Small-pox is called "heaven's flowers," and inoculation is called "cultivating heaven's flowers." It is performed by blowing pulverized scab powder into a child's nostrils. It is a very effective preventive—if the person does not die, of which there is quite as much danger as of the disease taken in other ways.

Some one has invented a sort of pedometer that will tell the rate of speed a train travels at by utilizing the swinging motion of the cars. It is described as follows: Within a case clockwork is fixed, which causes a large horizontal plate to rotate once in twelve hours. On the plate a disk of paper is held by a spring, the border being divided into hours and minutes. The point of a pencil is attached to two springs and a pendulum, so that the pencil makes a zig-zag line around the paper; on removing the latter the rate of traveling may be studied.

The other evening, at a little dinner-party up town one of the guests, the younger brother of an English nobleman expressed with commendable freedom his opinion of America and its people. "I do not altogether like the country," said the young gentlemen, "for one reason, because you have no gentry here." "What do you mean by gentry?" asked another of the company. "Well, you know," replied the Englishman. "Well—oh, gentry are those who never do any work themselves and whose fathers before them never did any." "Ah," exclaimed his interlocutor, "then we have plenty of gentry in America, but we don't call them gentry, we call them tramps." A laugh went around the table and the young Englishman turned his conversation into another channel.

The locomotive muscles are entirely dependent on stimulus. We once saw a young lady reclining on a sofa with such a languid air that we felt almost sure she was suffering from incipient paralysis. The next day she was slowly walking across a green pasture, picking a flower here and there as though the effort was terribly exhausting. Suddenly, however, there loomed up in front of her, and in her immediate vicinity, a creature with horns. With slow and measured step he advanced, and then catching sight of a red shawl he filled the air with a clarion note of defiance. The locomotive muscles of that languid maiden were galvanized into spasmodic action. She ran twenty yards with the speed of a gazelle and then clambed over a five-rail fence with a rapidity that was startling. What we need in this life is impulse, and when we have enough of it we can accomplish wonders.

WE are apt to smile at enthusiastic people, and the smile is mingled with compassion. "He is so enthusiastic," we say apologetically of some friend, and we make the admission as if it implied a want of balance. But what would the world be without enthusiastic souls, or how would its great enterprises be sustained and accomplished? Enthusiasm is the lever by which most of us need to be lifted. The inertness of selfish or preoccupied or indolent souls can only be overcome by this force. For enthusiasm is gifted with the faculty of seeing into futurity, and, overlooking the immediate steps, the toil and effort of the work, beholds a glorious vision of the whole, and is refreshed thereby; while the duller spirits are yet doubting and calculating. Some one has said, and said truly, that "he is old indeed who has outlived his enthusiasm." Well for us if we have kept ours, if we can still be enthusiastic over a fine poem, a noble deed, an exalted faith.—Christian Intelligencer.

A QUEEN'S GRAVE.—The remains of Queen Catharine of Arragon, "pattern of female excellence," is daily walked over and trodden on, not only by the clergy and choristers of Petersborough Cathedral, but by all persons entering the choir from the north side. On the south side, and directly opposite, under a similar black marble slab, was interred the headless body of Mary Queen of Scots. Her remains have, however, since been removed to Westminster Abbey, and a fitting monument erected over them. Queen Catharine's resting place has not been changed. It is now marked by a rude and rough black marble slab, with the words "Queen Catharine" on an insignificant brass plate. A correspondent of the London Times directs attention to the daily indignity of the tramping of the choir and the careless step of every visitor. Certainly this is not the spirit of the lines: "I was a chaste wife to my grave; embalm me, then lay me forth; although unqueened, yet like a queen, and daughter to a king, inter me."

Abraham's Jewel.

There is a rabbinical story which tells the value in which pearls were held in the early ages, only one object in nature being thought fit to be placed above them: "On approaching Egypt Abraham locked Sarah in a chest that none might behold her dangerous beauty. But when he was come to the place of paying customs the collector said, 'Pay you the custom;' and he said, 'I will pay you the custom.' They said to him, 'Thou carriest clothing,' and he said, 'I will pay for clothes.' Then they said to him, 'Thou carriest gold,' and he answered them, 'I will pay for my gold.' On this they further said to him, 'Surely, thou bearest the finest silk;' he replied, 'I will pay custom for the finest silk.' Then said they, 'Surely, it must be pearls that thou takest with thee;' and he only answered, 'I will pay for pearls.' Seeing that they could name nothing of value for which the patriarch was not willing to pay custom, they said, 'It cannot be—but open thou the box and let us see what is within.' So they opened the box, and 'the whole land of Egypt was illumined by the lustre of Sarah's beauty—far exceeding even that of pearls.'"

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Improving Backward.

There are many grand improvements now before the public intended to enable lazy, shiftless people to farm better than their more sensible and industrious neighbors. Patent cow-milkers are an abomination; they unnaturally distend the natural orifice of the teat, finally permanently ruining the cow by rendering her unable to hold her milk at all. Patent egg-food is another, forcing hens to lay out of season, and finally preventing them from laying in season. Any tool, instrument or treatment which violates nature must rapidly lessen the real value of the animal upon which it is used, far beyond any temporary advantage from its employment. Good health among stock is the best security that the animals will yield well; and sensible people who own good animals cannot be wheeled into the use of any quack nostrum or quack machine. On the other hand, those folks who own poor stock, and expect to suddenly make it valuable by the use of these foolish devices, show how little they know of their business.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing.—Wherever once introduced and be comes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents). Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

In the great race for wealth and fame does it ever occur to a man that 6,500 years ago Sirius was the predominant star of autumn, and that 6,000 hence it will be the ruling star of spring? We don't suppose it does. The greed of gold drives the love of astronomy out of a man's head, and if you were to tell him that 200,000 years hence the moon would shine in the daytime and the sun at night, he wouldn't manifest any alarm whatever, but cooly reply, "We shall see."

EPIDEMICS.—Just now coughs, colds, lung and bronchial complaints seem to be epidemic. In these cases of sudden colds the best thing to do is to get a bottle of N. H. Downs' Elixir, which invariably gives speedy relief and ultimately effects a complete cure in all cases where the breathing organs are affected. Use it in time and prevent serious lung difficulties. Sold by all Druggists.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the LIVER, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of disease, and if not Regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All SORES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, PILES, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and BOWELS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, CHILBLAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE, ERYSIPELAS, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all disorders attendant with INFLAMMATION.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 17, 1881.

The latest edition of the history of the deluge may be found in the recent telegraphic dispatches from Toledo and New Orleans.

Five square miles of New Orleans were under water last week, an area almost as large as the settled portion of the city of Detroit.

The office-seekers are now busy brushing their plug hats, blacking their boots and packing their grip-sacks preparatory to a forward movement on Washington about the first of next month.

The loss to the telegraph companies this winter, caused by the breaking of lines and consequent interruption of work, will give new impetus to the plan of burying all telegraph wires beneath the surface of the ground.

The Senatorial uneasiness in Pennsylvania continues. Oliver has withdrawn, but the Cameron and Anti-Cameron lines are as closely drawn as before, and the dead-lock seems to be as political lock-proof as at any time hitherto.

An amendment should be made to the River and Harbor bill providing for an appropriation to clean out Water street in Toledo. More water ran down that street last Saturday than could be found in a whole season in many of the rivers and creeks that secure a government appropriation.

In Leadville everything is done on a grand scale. A visitor was talking with the popular clergyman of the city about a large funeral procession he had seen the day before, and asked if the deceased was an eminent citizen. "Oh, no," replied the clergyman, "that wasn't much of a funeral. You ought to be out here when we plant a man of importance if you want to see a funeral!"

Capt. Boycott, seems to be having a hard time of it all around. The accident insurance company has now gone back on him. He carried an accident policy of $5,000 for death, and $50 per week indemnity. The company has refused to renew the policy, for it cannot afford to take a fifteen dollar premium to cover a risk on a life that requires infantry, cavalry and artillery to protect it.

Last year was a remarkable one in railroad building. The increase in mileage was larger than in any year since 1872. The total number of miles of road built was 4,721, or more than double the average of the previous five years. The Financial Chronicle for December published a table of the gross earnings of forty-three railroads for the eleven months of 1880, compared with those for the corresponding period of 1879. The figures for 1880 were $180,660,789, against $143,840,029 for 1879; a gain of $36,820,660, or nearly one quarter.

In the last number of the Churchman, Dr. Adams, of Wisconsin, speaks these kind and true words about our State University:

"Michigan University is most distinctly the leader in a career that every State in the Union will yet enter upon. And I suppose that even the most enthusiastic friends of that institution are hardly aware what a great and ancient system they have reorganized in this nineteenth century, and what a tremendous development in the future is in store for them in the growth and increase of learning, in the gathering together in one place of multitudes of men of extraordinary ability in all sciences, all arts, and all knowledge; and, above all, in the multitudinous increase of students, so as to be a city population of themselves!"

The making of steel rails in the United States is controlled by eleven rolling mills, who have licenses from the inventor, Sir Henry Bessemer.—These mills produced in 1880, 775,000 tons. The estimated production for 1881 will be 1,150,000 tons. The mills get $60 to $62 per ton for the rails, $28 of which is subsidy, in shape of a tariff forced from the consumer for the benefit of the mill owners. This little luxury cost the people $21,700,000 last year, and next year the people will pay the rolling mills a subsidy of $32,200,000. The railroads pay this tax.—They repay themself by increasing their freight and passenger rates. Every inhabitant of the United States feels the burden of this tax, while the men who are enriched by it could be stowed into one passenger car.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

The order retiring General Ord was issued a few days ago.

The Capitol and grounds are to be lighted with electricity.

The House has passed the Senate concurrent resolution for the counting of the electoral vote. There were but seventy-seven votes against it.

The Senate Finance Committee has indefinitely postponed further consideration of the House bill, which provides for imposing a specific duty on malt of twenty-five cents per bushel.

Somebody in Nashville, Tenn., is honest. The Secretary of the Treasury last week received a letter from there inclosing $60, with the request that it be placed to the credit of the conscience fund.

Congress is getting intoxicated with the idea of a Yorktown Centennial. In addition to the $120,000 for a grand Blow-out, the Senate has appropriated $20,000 to pay the expenses of French officers who may attend.

The Senate Finance Committee has agreed to amend the House funding bill by making the interest 3½ per cent., the bonds to be redeemable in five years and payable in twenty. The Carlisle amendment is stricken out.

A Board of Naval Medical Officers will convene at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital March 1 next, for the examination of candidates for admission into the medical corps of the navy, in which there are now eleven vacancies.

The River and Harbor Appropriation Bill is an eye-opener. As reported back from the House Committee on Commerce, it appropriates, in aggregate, $10,159,800. It seems that every river, harbor, reservoir, etc., in the land needs doctoring. And it will always be thus.

The Commissioner of Patents in obedience to an order from the Secretary of the Interior has issued an order annulling all interference of proceedings in the Trade Mark cause and directing all application for registering lawful Trade Marks to be granted in the order in which they are filed.

The President of the Union League of America has called a meeting of the National Committee to take place in Washington March 2. A public meeting of the entire League will take place the next day. The League will also participate in the inauguration ceremonies of General Garfield.

What will become of the Apportionment Bill, or when and how that matter will be settled, is only a matter for conjecture. Apportionments are partisan, have always been, and will always be. The trouble now seems to be whether to gerrymander the districts according to the vote of the country, or the census. There seems to be a difference from some cause.

Notwithstanding the favorable action of the House Committee on the Inter-Oceanic Canal, indorsing the scheme of Eads to borrow fifty million dollars on government credits to build his ship railroad, there is no prospect that it will pass the House. If it is any possible thing it passes the House, the Senate will probably select to deal with the scheme.

By direction of the President the limits of the Department of Arkansas are extended to embrace the posts of Fort Smith, in Texas, heretofore included in the Department of Missouri, and the post in Venango county, as a School of Instruction for Infantry and Cavalry. In the Senate, Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, in taking notice of Mr. Conkling's New York speech during the campaign, spoke of the allusion to the colors of South Carolina as charges and insinuations as malignant in their purposes against the South as the heart that inspired them, and that Mr. Conkling had never had the honesty to correct this perversion of facts when the truth concerning his inaccurate utterances had been made known. Mr. Conkling, in turn, characterized the remarks of Senator Butler as vaporings with which he (Conkling) had no concern. Mr. Butler retorted by characterizing Mr. Conkling's utterances as "the swaggering insolence of the Senator from New York." This constrained Mr. Conkling to give notice that Mr. Butler was a person with whom he (Conkling) could not afford to bandy epithets, either in the Senate or out of it. The Senate did not seem much disturbed by this manifestation of Senatorial politeness, and immediately resumed its humdrum proceedings.

Near Manchester, N. H., a Hollis family of the name of Patch is tormented by fleas to a degree heretofore unknown in a civilized world. It appears that in 1876 a member of the family came from a seaport town in a second hand suit of clothes. Shortly after the father, mother, and the other members of the household discovered the presence of black insects. This insect is called a flea by the Hollis people. He burrows under the skin of the victim, and tortures him day and night. Artificial heat makes him go to pieces and hence the family have little or no fire in the house, preferring to endure the cold rather than the terrible burning and itching. They have baked their clothes and burned their beds. They have consulted medical men at home and abroad, have tried internal and external remedies, and still get no relief. They are isolated from the community, and are in deep trouble.

The Toledo flood, which has up to date caused a loss of $1,500,000 is slowly falling, and business is being resumed. The cellars of the wholesale warehouses on Water street were filled destroying many dollars worth of stock. A number of vessels were torn from their moorings, and either sunk or were crushed in the ice gorge. The bridges across the river have been demolished by the ice, and almost everything contiguous to the river was either totally wrecked or greatly damaged.

A couple of disorderlies sojourned in the cooler a night this week.

The steamer California, from Sitka, has brought to San Francisco the sensational news that Alaska is affected with the gold fever. Some two months ago genuine quartz croppings, it is said, were discovered near the Token River, about eighty miles north of Sitka.

A bill has been introduced in the New York Legislature authorizing the incorporation of a company, with a capital stock of $15,000,000, for the purpose of supplying drinking water to the city of New York. It is understood that Lake George will be the source of supply.

Prof. Hixp makes use of rather forcible language. He says: "From 1871, just after the treaty of Washington was signed, to 1877, when the award of the Halifax Commission was made, the Canadian trade returns have not been worth the paper they are printed on; they are deluding, insulting, vile, and criminally false."

Dr. A. B. Elliott, of the Lansingburg (N. Y.) Gazette, who has been to Mentor interviewing General Garfield says that Blaine is to be Secretary of State; Governor Charlie Foster is to have whatever he wants; that Ohio will be represented in the Cabinet; that Indiana will get nothing, and that New York will get the Secretary of the Treasury.

An extraordinary case of abduction was that of Katie Schaeffer, of Jersey City, who was carried off by a tramp in full view of hundreds of people, but succeeded, after being robbed, in making her escape.

At Canada de los Amosia, thirteen miles from Santa Fe, N. M., Julian Vigil, a Mexican, killed his wife and young daughter, chopping them with an ax, and severely wounded his son, leaving him for dead. The man then hung himself to a rafter in the same room. The cause is insanity, produced by liquor.

Chas. O'Neil, a convict in the Penitentiary at Jeffersonville, Ind., complained of illness, but the authorities thought the complaint was only pretense, and to cure him of what they called "soldering," his arms were drawn through the gratings of the cell door and handcuffed on the outside, in which position he was kept from 7 a. m. until 2 p. m., and from 4 to 6 p. m. Also, the bedding was taken out of his cell and he was compelled to sleep on the bare floor. Under this treatment O'Neil died, and a post-mortem has shown that he was suffering from heart disease and congestion of the lungs. It was rather cruel treatment for a sick man.

At Maseville, Pittsylvania County, Va., a negro, convicted of a trifling offense, abused the Magistrate. When remonstrated with by another negro, he assaited all the whites with a bludgeon, killing J. C. Arthur, and seriously wounding two others. The negroes escaped to the club room of the True Friends, who resolved not to allow their comrades to be arrested. They held an all-night session, marching with the murderer at their head, and beating a drum. Twelve men, all armed, secured their arrest and safely lodged them in jail. The citizens with difficulty were prevented from lynching them.

Gen. Grant presided at a meeting held in New York last week, interested in railroad construction in Mexico, at which the following persons were present: Matias Romero, Stephen B. Musgrave, Sidney Dillon, Russell Sage, Jay Gould, James H. Work, and Gen. G. M. Dodge. Mr. Romero made a detailed statement of the advantages connected with the railroad in Southern Mexico, showing its relations to other portions of the railroad system in process of construction in that country. After some remarks upon the terms of the charter of the railroad in question held by Mr. Romero, and which he proposed to transfer to the new company, a resolution was adopted accepting the transfer of the charter and providing for the obtaining of such modifications in its provisions as were deemed necessary.

An explosion in the coal mine of P. C. Manser & Co. at Robbins, on the Niles and New Lisbon Railway, resulted in the instant death of six men and the serious injury of a number of others. A man named Smith passed through a room in the mine containing fire damp, with a lighted lamp, which he had been forbidden to do, and immediately the explosion followed by which a hole was blown through fifteen feet of earth. A mule and train of eight cars were shot out of the main entrance as if from a cannon. Another mule drawing a car in which a man was seated was blown on the top of the car, killing the driver. A dog was also blown out of the mine. One man, Jackson Leck, who was just entering, was blown back and over a high railroad embankment into the creek below, being badly hurt. The men not disabled or killed escaped through a shaft to the open air.

Ten miles north of Pana, Ill., at Owaneco, a construction train on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad was backing at the rate of twelve miles per hour in order to give a passenger train free passage northwest. Workmen on the train had been laying new rails and taking up the old ones, and had a flat car full of iron just in front of the caboose. Twenty-five or thirty workmen were crowded in the caboose. The passenger train was running at unusual speed in order to make up lost time, and the two collided with a fearful shock. The engine of the passenger train tore through the caboose, pushing the occupants among the masses of iron on the flat car, killing three outright—Allen Jones, W. W. Tatlock and H. McPherson, and wounding the following: Louis Selby, the conductor of the passenger train, seriously; Jacob Hoadley, Thomas Virden, Charles McGowen, Frank Green, Owen Gleeson, Charles Mills, Daniel Donohue, John Hardman, and Charles Watcher. Lockhart, conductor of the construction train, is responsible for the accident.

A disastrous railroad accident has just occurred on the North Pennsylvania Railroad, resulting in the loss of six lives and the serious injury of a number of others. The accident was caused by the passenger train which was due at Rock Hill Station at 8 17 a. m. running into a freight train which was entering a siding to permit of its passage. Both engines were demolished, the baggage car telescoped and a number of freight cars wrecked. The list of killed and wounded: Killed: Michael Hatlehan, hotel keeper, South Easton, and James Fraley, section foreman, Quakertown. Fatally injured: Rev. Mr. McFetridge, Germantown; John Gattley, passenger, Richard Morton, South Bethlehem, fireman passenger train, and Geo. Yeomans, West Bethlehem, baggage master. Badly injured—Chas. Feifer, South Bethlehem, engineer freight engine; [illegible] Greene, South Bethlehem, engineer passenger train; Charles Everett, Bethlehem, Conductor Wood, Philadelphia, and James Moore, Match Chunk, Express Messenger. Many were slightly injured. The flag station was partly demoralized and the telegraph operator seriously, if not fatally, injured. The disaster was due to the misconstruction of a telegram by the engineer of the freight train, who had been ordered to run into the siding below the station. There was another siding above the station which he thought was the one meant in the dispatch, but before he was able to reach it the collision occurred. There was a dense fog at the time.

AN APPALLING ACCIDENT

A Buffalo correspondent, writing under date of the 8th inst., says: "Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning the arched roof of the old New York Central Depot, on Exchange street, over-weighted with accumulated snow and weakened by the removal of former offices which had formed a large portion of its support, fell, burying a number of cars and human beings beneath a tangled mass of iron, wood, glass, snow, and brick. The St. Louis express on the Central was three hours and a half late. The connecting train on the Lake Shore, composed of four cars, with the sleeper Meta, stood upon the outer track. A Canada Southern train had just hauled out, and only twenty minutes before the day express on the Central had borne eastward a large load of living freight. Switch engine No. 137, Frank Schaeffer, engineer, was on the middle track. Near the other end of the new depot was a train of flat cars. On the track just outside the south wall were some old-fashioned passenger cars belonging to the Central. Among the people known to be in the depot just previous to the crash were Depot Master Byron King, and John Reedy, of Johnston Brothers' eating house, who stood near together about the center of the building; Dewitt C. Gibson, switchman; E. M. Stearns and Robert Barry, baggage-men; R. C. Smith, Passenger Agent on the Lake Shore; P. J. Hartwig, Henry Eckert, D. S. Hubby and other employes. Half a dozen passengers were in the cars waiting for the Lake Shore train, and one or two others believed to be lost, were standing in the depot near the flat cars. Coroner Scott had just boarded the switch engine, and was on the point of bidding good-bye to Henry Walters, Superintendent Tillinghast's Confidential Secretary, through whose orders the engine had been placed at his disposal, when a sudden, hollow sound, as of snow falling in a mass from a roof, was heard, and immediately the South wall, about sixty feet from the new portion, began to totter and fall. Depot Master King succeeded in getting beneath a brick wall which held its position, but no cap was torn from his head by the falling fragments. Smith ran into the vestibule of the standing office house, and escaped through the door. Walters, just behind him, was caught by a timber and held prisoner until other portions of the falling roof crushed out both life and human shape. The Lake Shore train was buried from sight by the roofing material. The switch engine was broken and partly dismantled. An unsightly gap was torn out of the wall of the beautiful new waiting room, the fatal mass which had crushed the life out of Captain Byrnes. The old cars on the track were torn to pieces. The work of overhauling the ruins was immediately begun by the fire department, and the employes of the railroad. The first two bodies recovered were those of Captain Byrnes and Henry Walters. Shortly after the workmen found the mangled body of Wm. Wells, clerk for Car Inspector Howe, of the Lake Shore Railroad. Two other bodies were found later. John H. Jackson, colored, was in the closet of the waiting room, and immediately on hearing the crash smashed a window and jumped into the street. He was followed by Wm. F. Odell, agent of the Wagner Sleeping Car Company. J. Covey, who has charge of the news stand, escaped through a window, in smashing the glass of which he cut his head severely.

COL. DELOS PHILLIPS, of Kalamazoo, was appointed Deputy Grand Dictator, Knights of Honor, of this State by Willis Merritt on the 16th inst.

A CRYING SHAME.

EDITOR HERALD:

Since the advent of printing, it has been justly said that the pen is mightier than the sword. Being convinced of the above saying it induces me to make this appeal, not on my own personal account, but in the cause of common humanity. I refer to the glaring nuisance about one mile west of your town, on the turnpike, where the road is over three feet under water, and the culvert in said road likely to give way at any minute. Now, Mr. Editor, what sane man with the least spark of humanity would, for one moment, think of driving a horse through a pond of ice cold water from eight to ten rods wide, with the thermometer below the freezing-point. It would not only endanger the health but perhaps the life of the team and the driver's safety. I may be mistaken, but I think there is (if not there should be) a law on the statute books of the State for a remedy of all such evils. It is for the benefit of your town as well as the farming community that a remedy ought to be applied. Our town officers in authority ought to see that something is done. They are elected for that purpose. These are not only my sentiments but those of every man who travels the road.

A FRANKLIN PIONEER GONE.

Franklin Osborn was born in Ovid, Seneca Co., N. Y., August 16, 1820. In the year 1842, when only twenty-two years of age, he came to Michigan and purchased land on section 25, in the town of Franklin, this county. The following year he returned to New York, and in 1845 he moved back to Franklin with his family, where he ever since resided. His first purchase was forty acres, but at the time of his death he owned over three hundred acres of land nearly all improved. In 1855 he commenced shipping poultry to New York City, and he has done a large business in that direction ever since. In December, 1876, he and his brother Richard Osborn went to New York with a large shipment of poultry. At Buffalo they took the ill-fated train that fell through the Ashtabula bridge on the night of December 29th. Richard was never seen after the accident. Franklin was severely injured, having his collar bone broken, his left arm fractured, six ribs broken, a frightful scalp wound, and serious injuries about the spine. He was about helpless for six months, and finally to the surprise of his friends, he recovered sufficiently to get around without assistance. He received $10,500 from the railroad company for damages, and $400 upon an accident insurance policy. He remained at Ashtabula about four weeks after the accident, the railroad company paying all expenses, including hotel and doctors' bills and finally conveyed him to Tecumseh in a magnificently appointed sleeping car, devoted exclusively to himself and family. For the past two years Mr. Osborn has enjoyed good health so far as outward appearances went; he has been able to ride to the village on pleasant days and visit with his friends. Last summer he took a great interest in the Toledo & Milwaukee railroad, and rendered valuable assistance in canvassing Franklin to raise the required bonus in that town. The severe cold weather of this winter seemed to effect him unfavorably, and for the past few weeks he has been gradually failing. On the evening of the 6th inst. he quietly passed away. His funeral was attended at his residence in Franklin on the 9th inst. by a large concourse of neighbors and friends. His life was truly an eventful one, he had more than his proportion of earth's misfortunes, but he conquered every obstacle, amassed a handsome property, and has finally passed over the river respected by all who knew him.

AMUSEMENTS.

Tuesday evening St. Elmo gave, so called, spiritual manifestations at the Opera House. The house was well filled and the performance worthy of the house. A committee consisting of Dr. Peters, T. T. Kneeland and O. W. Bean was selected by the audience to do the usual tying and examining of the apparatus which the spirits work. The first manifestation was of hands appearing from the cabinet. St. Elmo and his assistant were tied in a most secure manner by the committee and placed within the cabinet. Dr. Peters was called to close the doors and while fastening the first one greatly to every one's astonishment a large hand with the rapidity of lightning struck the Doctor twice upon the back, and with sufficient force to be felt. Mr. Kneeland was called to close the other door of the cabinet and while he was looking at the persons within a hand appeared before his eyes grasping his throat, so that he was satisfied that it was not the hand of either the performers. When the doors were closed hands appeared from all parts of the cabinet, bells were rung and tambourines thrown upon the stage.—As the last manifestation a table was produced at which two of the committee sat together with the performers. The hands of all were placed upon the top of it. The table jumped around and ended in forcibly running around the stage pushing Mr. Kneeland over a chair and Mr. Bean over a table, and stirring them up generally. St. Elmo does not have any belief in spiritualism, but at the same time he does not openly say so. Many interesting features of modern spiritualism were presented during the evening, none of which could the committee explain. St. Elmo intends to return to Tecumseh and give another performance.

Commencing with to-night, the Maxwells will appear at the Opera House for three nights. The plays are all interesting and first class.

DR. HOUSE is on the sick list.

LONGFELLOW'S BIRTH-DAY.

At present quite a strong effort is being made in our best public schools to correct the tendency, on the part of the youth, to read that which is low and vile, by directing their reading towards the best English and American literature. How this may be fully accomplished, when so many parents give little or no attention to what or how their children read, is difficult to determine.

It is a lamentable fact that the demand for poor literature exceeds that for the pure and wholesome.

The present effort is directed to lessening the demand for the one by creating a love for the other.

Important it is to remember, that, especially in a republican form of government, as are the people so will be the nation, and that the youth of to-day will be our law-makers, governors, and statesmen of to-morrow.

How important then it is to awaken among them noble thoughts; to arouse high aspirations; to so direct their thought and reading that they may acquire a love for that which is good, true, and beautiful; to so influence their minds that they may learn to select that which develops mental power, that which is of real, solid worth, rather than that which may be read with little or no mental effort, which does not strengthen the mind, but leaves it in an overexcited and unhealthy condition.

The manner in which this effort is being directed in the Tecumseh public schools is as follows: Some prominent author, whose writings may be regarded as classic, is selected by the Superintendent. Pupils learn all they can, from the teacher and from books, in regard to his life, his home, his works. They become acquainted with him by learning about him and by studying his writings. In the lower grades short selections are taught the children by the teachers. In the higher departments pupils memorize selections chosen by the teachers, carefully study and analyze the thought of the author, the grammatical construction, the figures of speech, and the style, noticing the weak and strong points, the peculiar force of the words used, often substituting for unfamiliar words their more common synonyms, changing poetry into prose, combining simple sentences into compound, or resolving compound sentences into simple ones.

It requires close application and earnest thought to read good literature understandingly. Hence the necessity for such training as is here indicated. Light stories and trashy literature may be understood without close attention or much mental effort.

The author being studied at present, in all departments of the Tecumseh schools is Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. He is the first author that we, as a school, have attempted to study in the way here outlined. We hope, however, to continue this kind of work and to create within ourselves a strong desire for that which ennobles, for that which develops true character, for that which arouses the mind to an understanding of its possibilities.

The seventy-fourth anniversary of Mr. Longfellow's birth-day occurs February 27, 1881. This being Sunday, we have chosen to commemorate it on Friday, February 25. The first part of the afternoon, commencing at 1:30 o'clock, will be occupied in recitations, select readings, essays, and music. All selections will be either concerning Mr. Longfellow or from his writings.

It is earnestly hoped that the citizens of Tecumseh will encourage this work by assisting the children at home and by attending the commemorative exercises. As these exercises are held in all the school buildings, and in all the departments you can not miss them except by a determination to do so.

E. B. FAIRFIELD, JR., Supt.

THE Adrian Times has the following complimentary notice of a Tecumseh enterprise: "Mr. L. M. Waldron representing the firm of A. K. Waldron & Son, called at the Times office Monday, and left some samples of sorghum sugar and syrup, produced by them the past fall. The Messrs. Waldron do a large business in the making of cider, jellies, &c., their establishment being situated near Tecumseh, and incidentally they have been giving some attention to the sorghum product. They readily disposed of all they made, and judging by the samples left at this office, their experiments may be declared fairly a success. In some of the states farther west the cultivation of cane, and the development of its products have for some years engaged the attention of enterprising agriculturists."

THE state military board will recommend that one hundred dollars a year be given to each company of the State troops for paying incidental expenses, that the pay of the officers be increased, and that the encampments be annual brigade encampments, each company to do its own cooking, the sum of seventy-five cents per day being allowed to each man to obtain his rations with.

KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

The annual session of the Grand Lodge of Knights of Honor of Michigan was held at Kalamazoo on the 7th, 8th and 9th inst. The order of Knights of Honor is a mutual life insurance order, and has a membership of nearly one hundred and twenty thousand in the United States. The order is divided into three jurisdictions, as follows:

1st. The Supreme Lodge of the United States, the original jurisdiction, composed of representatives from Grand Lodges.

2d. The Grand Lodges have only state jurisdictions and are subject to the laws of the Supreme Lodge. They are composed of the officers and representatives of subordinate lodges within their respective states.

3rd. Subordinate lodges have local jurisdiction in villages and cities and are subject to the laws of the Grand and Supreme Lodges.

Each member is insured in the sum of two thousand dollars. Death assessments of members under forty-five years of age are one dollar. During the past year there have been only thirteen assessments. In this state there are one hundred and fourteen lodges, with a membership of about four thousand, including many of the ablest men in the state.

MONTHLY STOCK SALES.

EDITOR HERALD:

By your permission I would like to write a few lines on the above subject. From a farmer's view it seems to me that there could be such an enterprise started here as a monthly stock sale, which would be of much benefit to the village as well as to the farming community. Very frequently farmers have a horse to sell or some other stock, but he does not know at the time who wants to purchase. Again buyers wish to buy but do not know where to look for the stock they wish without taking more time than they wish to spare. There are buyers for all the stock that might be brought to Tecumseh at fair prices. If it was known that on a certain day in the month there would be a public sale in Tecumseh, men that had stock to sell could bring it to market sure of finding a buyer, and buyers would know where to go and get stock. Such sales have been carried on very satisfactorily in other places. In London, Ohio, they have a sale every month, thousands of dollars worth of property changing hands at every sale. Men have been known to come 50, 60 and 70 miles, and even further, to attend these sales. I should like to hear from farmers and others, also from the Editor of the HERALD on the subject mentioned. Hoping to hear from some abler pen, I remain yours, etc.,

DIED.

CURTISS—Lieut. A. B. Curtiss died at Flint, Mich., February 9, 1881, aged 41 years.

He volunteered in the 4th Reg't Michigan Infantry, for service against the rebellion; was in the first Bull Run affair, and continued in all the service of that regiment till the battle of Gettysburg, where he was badly wounded. Later, at the close of the war, he was appointed a Lieut. in the 8th Regular Cavalry of the U. S. Army, where he served over two years in the mountains against the Indians. Then resigning he engaged as an assistant engineer in building the Flint & Pere Marquette railroad, and remained in the employ of that company till the time of his death. He was the son of Col. D. S. The funeral services were conducted at the family residence in Freeport on the 26th ult., a large number of friends from home and abroad being present. The Freeport Bulletin gives these particulars of the solemn occasion:

The cortege was headed by the band of Company C, I. N. G., a large number of the members of the company, under command of Capt. S. D. Atkins, turning out to pay the last sad tribute to their worthy surgeon and comrade. The following regimental officers were in attendance from headquarters at Rockford: Lieut. Col. Frank Noble; Major H. N. Starr; Quartermaster Bartlett and Chas Godfrey, Company B, 3d Reg't. The remains were taken to Tecumseh, Mich., where they will be interred. Rev. R. F. Sweet and D. B. Breed, brother-in-law of deceased, accompanying them, and will return on Friday evening. The weather was extremely cold, and the very large attendance of members of the company and other friends, was the best evidence of the high esteem deceased was held in by all who knew him. The druggists made manifest their warm personal friendship by closing their stores during the time occupied in holding the services. Very few men who have died in Freeport had as many friends as Dr. Chas. H. Stocking, and the expressions of regret have been universal on all sides.

Household Hints.

To Stain Wood a Mahogany Color.—Take half a pint of nitric acid, a piece of alum about the size of a Spanish nut, and as much logwood as will give the desired color.

To Remove Rust from Iron.—The easiest method of removing rust from iron is rubbing it with a rag dipped in oil of tartar. The rust will disappear immediately.

Potato Salad.—Six large cold boiled potatoes cut fine, two small heads of lettuce broken in small pieces, half a small onion cut fine, two hard-boiled eggs, one tablespoon capers, Mayonnaise dressing, or a dressing made of French mustard, oil, and vinegar.

Cocoanut Candy.—Grate the meat of a cocoanut, and, having ready two pounds of sifted white sugar, and the beaten whites of two eggs, also the milk of the nut, mix together and make into little cakes. In a short time the candy will be dry enough to eat.

Boke Felon.—The London Lancet suggests the following simple treatment. As soon as the disease is felt, put directly over the spot a fly-blister, about the size of your thumb nail, and let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of blister, may be seen the felon, which instantly be taken out with the point of a needle, or a lancet.

The Medical Press says it is the worry about ways and means that kills; doctors themselves are worried to death by pecuniary troubles. This is an opinion worth more than many prescriptions for which a large price is paid. It is an easy thing to give advice which is hard to take, but we commend this medical counsel as good to begin the year with and to use all the year through: "Don't worry; take things quietly; the darkest night has a morning; and worry wears out the heart and life." No charge for that, but it is sound advice.

If a fish-bone or a portion of food sticks in the throat, and threatens to produce suffocation, first give a smart blow between the shoulders. This will most likely dislodge the substance. If the patient can make any attempt to swallow, put a large lump of butter in his mouth. This will help the offending substance to pass down the throat more easily. If he cannot swallow, put the finger as far down the throat as possible and endeavor to pull the bone or meat out, or tickle the throat to produce immediate vomiting. Unless there is prompt action, life may be lost.

When freshly spilled, ink can be removed from carpets by wetting in milk. Take cotton batting and soak up all the ink that it will receive, being careful not to let it spread. Then take fresh cotton wet in milk, and sop it up carefully. Repeat this operation, changing the cotton and milk each time. After most of the ink has been taken up in this way, with fresh cotton and clean, rub the spot. Continue until all disappears; then wash the spot in clean, warm water and a little soap; rinse in clear water, and rub until nearly dry. For ink spots on marble, wood or paper, apply ammonia clear, just wetting the spot repeatedly till the ink disappears.

According to the Pharmacist, it is a frequent practice in the New York asylum for inebriates to administer to the patients at bed time a glass of milk to produce sleep, and the result is often found satisfactory, without the use of medicine. Medicine is there sometimes prescribed in milk. It has been recently stated in medical journals that lactic acid has the effect of promoting sleep by acting as a sedative, and this acid may be produced in the alimentary canal after the ingestion of milk. Can this, then be the explanation of the action of milk on the nervous system after a long continued, excessive use of alcoholic drink? Sugar, also, is capable of being converted in the stomach, in certain morbid conditions into lactic acid; and a lump of sugar allowed to dissolve in the mouth on going to bed will frequently soothe the restless body to quiet and repose.

Boiled Apples.—A friend who knows about good things to eat, writes to us that about the nicest morsel that ever tickled the palate is boiled apples—not boiled like a potato, nor steamed like a pudding, but as follows: Place a layer of fair-skinned Baldwins, or any nice variety, in the stew pan, with about a quarter of an inch of water. Throw on about one-half cup sugar to six good-sized apples, and boil until the apples are thoroughly cooked and the sirup nearly thick enough for jelly. After one trial no one would, for any consideration, have fair-skinned apples peeled. The skins contain a very large share of the pectous—jelly-making—substances, and impart a flavor impossible to obtain otherwise." He also says: "A wise housekeeper, instead of throwing away the skins and cores of such pie apples would use them for jelly. A tumblerful of the richest sort can thus be obtained from a dozen apples. Boil the skins, etc., a few minutes, and strain. Add a little sugar to the liquid, and boil until right to turn into the tumbler."

Envied Beauty.

What is more handsome than a nice bright, clear complexion, showing the beauties of perfect health? All can enjoy these advantages by using Electric Bitters. Impure blood, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are speedily cured. For nervousness and attendant ailments, they are a never failing remedy, and positively cure where all others fail. Try the Electric Bitters and be convinced of their wonderful merits. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

This is the latest story that is being told of Mr. Southern's "playful eccentricity." He objects to his dog forming new acquaintances, so he fastens two very sharp needles to his nose, leaving the ends projecting about an inch. When a strange dog rushes up to "shake noses" with him, he gets a thrust that sends him off howling, and the effect is such that Mr. Southern's dog cannot get within gun-shot of any other that knows how the trick works.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

About Parsnips.

The parsnip, writes a correspondent, is the only root which will remain in the ground all the winter, not only without injury, but to its great benefit; since after the winter's frost the root is not only larger, but sweeter and finer than it was in the fall; and could it be plowed out without the expense of digging, it would form a most desirable crop for fresh cattle and hog food in the spring. It admits, too, of being sown in the fall, and comes so early as to almost, if not quite, outgrow the hardiest and quickest growing of our weeds. Fall-sown parsnips with one good horse-hoeing, as soon as the rows may be seen, will afterwards nearly, if not quite, take care of themselves.

To get the benefit of the parsnip as a farm and cattle-feeding crop, we must change the character of its growth, reduce its length and depth, and increase its width. If it could be grown the shape of an early horn carrot, all requirements would be met, and it could then be plowed out as wanted in the spring with but little trouble and expense.

Late experiments have shown that the parsnip readily yields to improvement by selecting the seed-bearing roots, and it is believed that if the short, thick roots from a crop were selected as seed-bearers, the character of the shape of the roots could be greatly changed, if not altogether altered, from their present type in a few years. The 'Student parsnip,' one of the best, if not the very best kind, was obtained in seven years by selection from the wild weed parsnip, which grows on the Cotswold hills in Britain.

The writer has never grown bad parsnips into better ones, but he has with much interest observed the annual decadence of the quality of good roots when allowed to become self-sown and grow as they please without cultivation; the deterioration of the quality of the plant is most rapid, and it soon degenerates down into the stringy, fangy type of the wild parsnip.

Those who have dug many parsnips, or who have sorted over heaps of the roots, cannot but have observed specimens of short, thick roots, entirely different from the rest of the crop. These roots, if planted for seed, would most certainly perpetuate the peculiar character of the parent root, and in a few transformations the new type might be permanently fixed, and even turnip-rooted parsnips eventually be obtained. The long, tapering roots being those that are considered the handsomest in the eyes of the gardener, and the ones which are supposed to be the best adapted for cooking, are naturally the ones now saved for seed, and hence the deep growing, smooth and tapering roots are perpetuated.

The parsnip, particularly after being allowed to stand in the ground all the winter, contains a considerable amount of sugar—the chemical books say 12 per cent. If so, there must a great amount of glucose in it; but different kinds, no doubt, vary considerably in richness, as do the beet and other garden and field roots.

That parsnips contain a considerable amount of crystalizable sugar, anyone can prove for themselves by grating the root, pressing out and then purifying the juice with lime, skimming and setting the boiled syrup, then destroying the effects of the quicklime by carbonic acid, and finally by phosphoric and sulphuric acid, and eventually boiling down the syrup into molasses. These, if stood by in a warm place, eventually (after a considerable time) yield a considerable portion of crystalized sugar, which may be obtained pure from the molasses by the centrifugal machine, and cleansed the same as beet sugar. This, however, is a mere fanciful experiment, and it is not for one moment urged that sugar could thus be profitably extracted.

One of the old English home-made standard wines is "parsnip wine", the recipe for which is found in any old English cookery-book. It makes a most excellent home-made wine, and when drank carries with it some of the flavor of the original root, but not offensive to those who like the root.

There is one very curious thing about growing parsnip seed which is not generally observed. After seed has been raised in or near one place in the garden from year to year, the plant, when the "umbels" are in full green seed, will at times be affected by a caterpillar, which feeds on the green seeds, and eventually destroys most of them. These worms are most pugnacious, and will attack either a finger or a stick presented to them, and when irritated will even pursue the attacking instrument all across the umbel, biting and nipping at it most savagely with their formidable forceps. This is the only actually "belligerant" worm the writer ever met with. Many caterpillars which are armed with forceps will pinch and defend themselves when squeezed or injured, but this is the only one which will deliberately and violently become the assailant of a disturbing influence.

In growing parsnip seed, it must be borne in mind that the seed loses its vitality after the second year of keeping, and will be greatly injured by keeping over to the second season, let it be ever so carefully preserved. The first season nearly, if not quite, all seeds vegetate; this will account to many for a miss crop of bought seeds. Sow the seed the first year it is raised, and nearly every seed will grow

CURE FOR HOG CHOLERA.—A correspondent of the Kansas Farmer says, a farmer in this county, extensively engaged in the hog business, here and in Marshall county, and who has suffered from the loss of over 100 hogs this year, has a remedy, which he says cures in every case. The remedy is so simple and costs so little, that I hope all our farmers will try it, and report your success. My informant breaks a box of concentrated lye into a barrel of clean water, and when the lye is dissolved, gives it to the hogs as drink. A neighbor who had lost some 200 hogs this season, tried the cure, with entire success; every one of the sick hogs got well, and none have sickened since. He says he had in his feeding lot, a hog which would weigh 400 pounds, so near dead that he thought it useless to try to save him, but second thought said, try anyhow. So he rolled him on his back and poured a pint of the liquid, made stronger than in the barrel, down his throat, and in less than an hour, porker was on his feet, cracking corn nearly as lively as ever.

Words pass away, but actions remain. Let your actions be worthy ones.

THE FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmers' Social Club of northern Tecumseh and southern Clinton, met at Mr. Jacob Everhart's, Feb. 11. A good attendance.

The following program was presented: Instrumental music by Misses Millie and Annie Everhart. Essay, Don't put all your Eggs in one Basket by Mr. F. V. Horton. Mrs. C. Benedict being absent, the Misses Everhart favored us with vocal music. The subject for discussion—"The Care of Milk, and making of Butter," was now taken up. Mrs. J. Benedict was expected to open the discussion, but being absent, Mrs. F. C. Rector was called upon.

Mrs. Rector said: The care of milk and butter was a very important work and she was comparatively a young housekeeper to some present, and she would much rather some of the older ones had led the discussion, but she would give her manner of making butter. 1st. She wanted the men to do their part in taking good care of the cows, giving them plenty of good food and providing them with an abundance of pure fresh water, stabling them in clean stables, free from foul odors. When the milk is brought to her, she strains in large pans, setting the milk shallow in summer, and deep in winter. Skims before the milk gets too old, would prefer to skim just as the milk turns, before getting thick. Churns often, every other day in summer, and if the weather is very warm, every day. When the butter is gathered washes it with water, salts it to suit her family and customers, but has no rule according to pounds and ounces, works it only enough to incorporate the salt well at first, then after standing a number of hours gives the final working. Would work only enough to separate the buttermilk, as too much working injures the butter.

In caring for the utensils used about the milk, she thought she might be considered national as she will not allow either soap or rain water used in washing them.

Mrs. Schreder would agree with Mrs. Rector except in regard to washing. The never used any water about her butter. Had tried both ways and prefered working the buttermilk out. She also was opposed to the use of soap about the utensils.

Mrs. Horton would like to ask Mrs. Rector why she objected to the use of rainwater in washing her pans? Mrs. Rector replied, if she could have the rain direct from the clouds into her pans, she would not, but when it came from dirty roofs and stood in cisterns, she did not like to use it about her milk utensils. Mrs. Horton would first rinse them out with cold water then wash them in soap-suds, thorougly scald in well-water, wipe and put away. Did not approve of putting out in the hot sun in the summer as it heats the pans and they are liable to become dusty. She would wash her butter, as she thinks it requires less working. Would advise using Ashton salt would hardly dare use any other for packing for long keeping.

Mrs. Everhart gives quite an extended account of visiting a creamery last fall in the state of New York. She could not see as the process gave much different results from that practiced by the farmers' wives here. The cream is taken off (or the milk drawn from under) while sweet, but the cream is kept until it sours before churning. The first working is done with a butter worker, but the final by hand, and she could not see as the butter was any better quality than good butter makers make here. But it was creamery butter and brought a higher price. She also favors washing butter.

Mrs. John Gillespie is particularly favored in her cellar; it being remarkably cool, so much so that she sometimes has to use warm water in June to warm the cream. She thinks the great secret of poor butter is letting the milk stand too long, then keeping the cream too long after skimming, and too much working. She also favors washing as a better mode of separating the buttermilk from the butter.

The club adjourned to meet at E. C. Rector's, Friday evening, February 25, when the following program will be presented:

Inst. Music—Mrs. Fred Griswold.
Song—Minnie Rector and Kittie Griswold.
Select Reading—Grant Schreder and Eva Rector.
Music—Fred Horton and Hattie Long.
Essay—I. H. Schreder.
Subject for discussion—Raising fruit, care and profits of the same.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Secretary.

I had rather believe all the fables in the legend, and the Talmud, and the Alcoran, than that this universal frame is without a mind; therefore God never wrought miracles to convince atheism, because his ordinary works convince. It is true, that a little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion; for while the mind of man looketh upon second causes scattered, it may sometimes rest in them, and go no farther; but when it beholdeth the chain of them confederate, and linked together, it must needs fly to providence and Deity.

EDGAR ALLAN POE.

BY REV. J. A. DE SPELDER.

So great is the mystery of human life, that it is not only difficult to foretell at its dawning, what shall be the nature of the coming day, but it is almost equally difficult to declare at its setting what the day has been. There are so many elements to be noted, some good, others bad, some lying on the surface, and others hidden deep below that it would be almost always rash to describe the life of man or woman by a single epithet.

No one's life is all light, neither is any one's all shadow. Indeed, it is the combination of light and shadows that makes the finished picture, and the eye that would justly criticise must rest upon the one no less than on the other. Moreover it depends upon the preponderance of the brightness over the darkness, whether a life picture deserves to be hung in the worlds gallery of portraits that are to be admired and praised.

These well known facts are not to be forgotton in pronouncing judgement on the poet, Poe. That they have been forgotton, however becomes painfully evident to any one who reads the various and often conflicting sketches of his life. Some persons, like Ingram his recent English biographer, seem to be dazzled by the brilliancy of his acknowledged genius that they are blind to his faults, while others, like Griswold the first historian of his life, seem to speak with undue severity and to exaggerate what was ignoble and wrong in his short and checkered career. Doubtless the world of to-day is not yet far enough removed from him in time, to be strictly accurate in its estimate. At any rate the biographer which shall speak of him as he was, which shall

"Nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice," is still the biography of the future.

Making allowance for partizanship on the one hand, and enmity on the other, we learn from the different memories of Poe which have been published that the following are the main facts that pertain to his life.

Edgar Poe was born in the city of Boston on the 19th of January, 1809. His father, David Poe, though he had begun the study of law, had adopted the profession of an actor, being doubtless drawn thereto by the influence and fascination of a beautiful actress named Elizabeth Arnold, to whom in course of time he was married. It was while they were filling a theatrical engagement in Boston that our poet was born. Nearly two years after his birth, his parents came to a tragic and untimely death by the burning of the Richmond theatre, in which they were performing. Immediately after this calamity the child, Edgar, was adopted by Mr. John Allan, a wealthy citizen of Richmond—hence the poet's middle name, Edgar Allan Poe. The latter's education was begun in Scotland, where his new parents had gone to spend two years visiting friends. This period of time being past, they returned to Richmond, and Edgar, now nine years old, was sent to the English and Classical school of Prof. Clarke. While in this school he wrote his earliest verses. At sixteen, he was placed under private tutors, in order to be prepared for college and the next year, Feb. 1, 1826 he entered the University of Virginia. But at the end of a year he quit the University, being deeply in debt, a debt he contracted at the gaming table. This is the first mention that is made of his indulgence in an evil practice. And as gambling and drinking go almost invariably hand in hand, the sad probability is that his subsequent intemperance, whether occasional or habitual, is to be traced to his collegiate course. Two years after leaving the University Poe published at Baltimore the first volume of his poems, a volume of no special merit, but which alas, had this significant dedication: "Who drinks the deepest.' Here's to him."

On arriving at his twenty-first year, the young poet, who had seemed thus far to have lived to little purpose, was urged by Mr. Allan to adopt a profession. He consented, and chose the army. Accordingly in July, 1830, he entered West Point Academy as a cadet. His student life, here however, like that at the University, reflects but little credit either upon his mind or heart. "Here," it is said, "he totally neglected his studies, drank to excess, and was court-martialed and expelled* in less than one year, after entering the Academy." This matter greatly offended the man who had during so many years treated him as a father. Perhaps still other causes conspired to cool Mr. Allan's affection for his adopted son; at any rate, he saw fit to disinherit him, and Poe was thrown for the first time in his life upon his own resources. Certainly this was far from being an unmixed evil. For being now obliged to summon his powers into exercise, he began the composition of those wonderful tales and those unique and excellent poems which have made his name famous throughout the world. He worked steadily and well, with only an occasional relapse into his former habits. Would that he had had sufficient self control to avoid these occasional lapses, then they would not have proved so many milestones upon his downward road to ruin. Then it would have fallen to his lot to have been no less honored as a man than he is celebrated as a poet.

Still, debarring these debauches now and then, he devoted himself industriously to his literary work. He took up his abode first at Baltimore, than at Richmond as editor of the "Southern Literary Messenger," then at New York, then Philadelphia, where he was editor of two different magazines, then again in New York city, where he published in '45 the grand poem of "The Raven." Upon this production him fame chiefly rests. It made him known throughout the civilized world. As one has well said: "On the dusky wings of 'The Raven,' Edgar Allan Poe will sail serenely over the gulf of oblivion."

While living at Baltimore, viz., on the 2d. of September. 1835, he was married to his cousin, Virginia Clemm and Poe's tenderness and devotion to his frail, bright-eyed and beautiful wife is unquestionably the finest and most touching characteristic of his life. On account of her failing health they removed to a cottage in Fordham, N. Y., and here, after a little over eleven years of married life, the tenderly cherished Virginia in whose love he had found a balm and solace amid his many reverses, passed away from earth.

The effect of this event on Poe's subsequent and downward course, it is not easy to over-estimate. He was overwhelmed with sorrow. "This sorrow," he says, "deprived me for several weeks of all power of thought and action." He describes it in one of his pathetic poems:

"The skies they were ashen and sober:
The leaves they were crisped and sere,
The leaves they were withering and sere,
It was night in the lonesome October,
Of my most immemorial year.

He walks and wanders on, until he is "stopped by the door of a tomb,

By the door of a legended tomb,
And I said—"What is written within sister,
On the door of this legended tomb?"
She replied—"Ulalume—Ulalume—
'Tis the vault of thy lost Ulalume."

Then my heart it grew ashen and sober
As the leaves that were crisp and sere,
As the leaves that were withering and sere.

He seems to have anticipated the grief of this period when he described that night scene in "The Raven."

"Eagerly I sought the morrow—vainly
I had sought to borrow
From my books surcease from sorrow—
sorrow for the lost Lenore:
For the rare and radiant maiden whom the angles name Lenore—
Nameless here for evermore.

But failing to find "surcease from sorrow" in his books, he sought it alas, in his cups. He probably never drank as madly, or so deep as then. Even one of his most generous biographers has said: "The most melancholy effect of this crushing grief was the resort to stimulants, hoping to drown his sorrows in the waters of Lethe. Fatal delusion; Lethe proved indeed, a hell to the unhappy poet."

He lived less than three years after his wife's decease. If it be true, as it seemes to be, that during this short period he was twice engaged to be remarried, we are indeed tempted to look with distrust upon the wild vehemence of his grief and to take his lamentations at a discount, but there remains no doubt that the sorrow furnished the occasion and the impetus for his rapid downward course.

On the morning of the 3d of October, 1846, he was found in one of the streets of Baltimore, being unconcious and delirious through drink, in which condition he remained after being taken to the Washington College Hospital, where he died on Sunday Oct. 7, at the age of nearly 41. On the following Tuesday afternoon, a gloomy October afternoon, when again

"The skies they were ashen and sober,
The leaves they were crisped and sere,"

he was buried among his ancestors in the cemetery of Westminster Church in Baltimore, and it is a sad and significant fact that "only eight persons attended the funeral of the author of 'The Raven.'"

Lincoln and Lord Hartington.

The Marquis of Hartington was traveling in this country during the war, and while here made a semi-official call on President Lincoln. He was introduced to honest old Abe in the white house, with some ceremony, but Mr. Lincoln grasped the hand of the marquis with his broad hand, closed a grip on it that brought the tears to the Englishman's eyes, and said in a cheery voice: "Glad to see you, Marquis of Hartington. Shall never forget you, because your name rhymes with one of our great characters—Mrs Partington. How are you marquis?" and he gave Hartington another squeeze; after which my lord left the executive chamber nursing his hand and his temper, declaring to a friend that "Your American president is a boor!"

The secret of the president's action was that the marquis had appeared at a ball in New York a few nights before his visit to Washington, and ostentatiously wore the rebel colors in his bulton-hole. The incident was published, and the president, knowing the marquis was to call at the white house, concluded to give the haughty but ill-bred Englishmen a puncture that he would get through even his bull-hide. And he did.

A conspectus of the revenue receipts in South Carolina was submitted, and the report of the Secretary of the Interior was read. It was referred by a vote of yeas and nays, the division between Senators Bailey and Conkling.

In consideration of the Pension Appropriation Bill, as reported, the question being upon the amendment from the Pension Committee, for local pension courts, the amendment sixty surgeons bill. The proposition was modified so as to limit its application and operation to the next fiscal year, but was decided to be not in order.

An amendment appropriating $200,000 for the additional examiners for the Pension Office, and for the clerical force necessary for the Pension, Adjutant General, and Surgeon General's offices, to render effective the work of the paid examiners, was declared to be in order.

The credentials of Philetus Sawyer and Arthur P. Gorman were received.

A joint resolution to provide for the enforcement of the eight hour law was reported adversely from the Committee on Education, and indefinitely postponed.

Messrs. Beck, Kernan, and Wallace discussed the Pension Appropriation Bill in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Blair introduced a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit, after 1900, the manufacture and sale, anywhere within the United States, of distilled alcoholic and intoxicating liquors, or any intoxicating liquors mixed or adulterated with ardent spirits, or with a poison whatever except for mechanical, medicinal, chemical and scientific purposes. It also prohibits exportation and importation of such liquors, and their transportation through any part of the United States, except for medical and scientific uses. It was referred.

The House joint resolution granting condemned cannon to the Morton Memorial Association, passed.

The Pension Appropriation Bill and the Post-office Appropriation bill were discussed.

HOUSE.

A bill authorizing the St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, and Fort Smith Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River at a point near Thebes, Illinois, was passed.

A bill to extend the Indian laws in Kansas was passed.

The bill to refund to Mrs. E. F. Page was passed.

The Senate concurrent resolution for the adjournment of Congress on Friday, March 4, was taken up, and after a discussion in which the majority of the city was the principal point of the debate, it was finally agreed to without any vote. It provides that the adjournment of the first session of the Forty-eighth Congress shall be at 12 o'clock meridian on the following Friday, March 4, 1881, and that the following Senators and Representatives, namely, Senators Sawyer and Bailey, Representatives Hiscock, Hewitt, Bisbee, Hoge, Ward, Wright, Hewitt, Forney, Lee, Hazelton, Hiestand, Blackburn, Reagan, Killinger, Wellborn, Hepburn, O'Neill, Prescott, Lord, Robinson, Stephens, and Updegraff, of Ohio, be a committee to wait upon the President and inform him of the adjournment of Congress, and that the President be requested to make no communication to Congress.

Mr. Bragg moved to take up and pass the Senate bill making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy, but without success, the two thirds vote required under the rule to suspend the standing orders being against him.

Mr. Reagan reported back the River and Harbor Appropriation bill, and it was, with the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Bill, referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The East Gallery was set aside for visitors of members of the House or Senate who desired to witness the counting of the votes.

The Legislative Appropriation Bill was considered in Committee of the Whole.

The customary resolutions respecting the death of Mr. Parr, of New Hampshire, were adopted.

At Jamestown, Ohio, a five-year old child of Jos. Hickman, colored, who lives about one mile from town, was burned to death in the absence of both father and mother. By some means its clothing caught fire, and the little suffering creature rushed out of the house. The other children who were left at home, though older, were fearfully frightened. When they saw the child, after running around the house approaching the door in a blaze, they closed it and would not suffer it to enter. The little fellow put his hands on the door-knob, when the flesh clinged to the door, stripping the fingers bare to the bones. Finding it impossible to get in, he left the premises and went in search of his mother who had gone but a short distance to a neighbor's to wash. He got within fifty steps of the house and dropped. And when found by his mother, while on her way home, he was speechless, with not a stitch of clothing on his body. Even the shoes were burned entirely off.

CHIEF JUSTICE COMEGYS, of the Criminal Court, Wilmington, Del., called the Grand Jury's attention to the recent address in that city of Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, saying it was blasphemous and worthy the attention of the jury, as coming under the law of blasphemy.

SUNDAY.—Ralph Waldo Emerson reflects the sentiments the best class of people in this sentence: "Sunday is the core of our civilization dedicated to thought and reverence. It invites us to the noblest solitude and noblest society."

A LENAWEE BOY IN LUCK.

A recent number of the Leavenworth Daily Press contains the announcement that Hamilton J. Dennis has been recommended to the Governor by the Supreme Court for the position of State Librarian of Kansas. Mr. Dennis is an old Macon boy, having been reared in the family of Israel Pennington, at Pennington's Corners. He graduated at Ann Arbor in 1862, and began the practice of law at Leavenworth in 1863. The Press has these complimentary words to say of him:

Mr. Dennis has at various times occupied the important and responsible positions of City Clerk and Clerk of the District Court, and has at all times given such complete and perfect satisfaction that his services have always been in demand. His official life has always been marked with unflagging zeal, strict devotion to duty, strict integrity and inflexible honesty. His popularity is unbounded and we do not think we make a mistake when we assert that we do not think he has an enemy in the State. He has served us long and faithfully, and while we dislike to sunder social and official relations, we congratulate him upon receiving voluntary and deserved recognition by this appointment for which his talents so eminently fit him. We understand that Mr. Dennis will not take charge of his new position until the first of March, as Judge Kingman's resignation takes effect at that time. We wish Mr. D. all the happiness and enjoyment incident to the new position and hope he will live long and prosper.

England's Prime Ministers.

Below we give a list of the Prime Ministers of England since 1762—which is worth preservation for reference. The resignation of the Duke of Newcastle in 1762 ended the long rule of the Whig party, which had continued uninterruptedly from the death of Queen Anne.

Since Palmerston, no Prime Minister has held that important trust so long as has Beaconsfield.

1762—Earl of Bute.
1763—George Grenville.
1765—Marquis of Rockingham.
1766—Duke of Grafton.
1770—Lord North.
April, 1782—Marquis of Rockingham—died in office.
June, 1782—Earl of Shelburne.
March, 1783—Duke of Portland.
Dec., 1783—William Pitt.
1801—Henry Addington.
1804—William Pitt—died in office, January 23, 1806.
1806—Lord Grenville.
1807—Duke of Portland.
1809—Mr. Percival—assassinated.
1812—Earl of Liverpool.
April, 1827—Mr. Canning—died.
Aug., 1827—Viscount Goderich.
1828—Duke of Wellington.
1830—Earl Grey.
1834—Viscount Melbourne.
May, 1834—Duke of Wellington (temporary appointment).
Nov., Dec., 1834—Sir Robert Peel.
1835—Viscount Melbourne.
1841—Sir Robert Peel.
1846—Lord John Russell.
Feb., 1852—Earl of Derby.
Dec., 1852—Earl of Aberdeen.
1855—Viscount Palmerston.
1858—Earl of Derby.
1859—Viscount Palmerston—died Oct., 18, 1865.
Oct., 1865—Earl Russell (Lord John).
1866—Earl of Derby.
Feb., 1868—Benjamin Disraeli—Resigned Dec., 2, 1868.
Dec., 1868—Wm. L. Gladstone.
Feb., 1874—Earl of Beaconsfield (Disraeli).

In looking over the foregoing list it will be noticed that William Pitt held office much longer than any Prime Minister before or after him, that the average tenure of office has been five years to each, and that five Prime Ministers have died in office.

A Sea Lion Hunter.

Capt. Mullett, the sea-lion hunter, has described his methods to a St. Louis reporter. In six years he has caught one hundred and sixty-four sea-lions, mostly near San Diego and has profited thereby, since the regular price for an exhibition seal is $1,000. "Our method of capturing the lions," he said, "is this: They go in rookeries of one hundred or more, and we watch the shore to see where they will go into camp. This we can determine from the fact that they carry their young on the shore, leave them, and go back to the water, returning at the break of day. When we find a camp, we dig trenches in the sand to hide in, or, if there are rocks convenient, we hide behind them. The vessels are anchored some distance off the shore, and we bring from them in small boats, cages made of six-inch fence boards. When the herd comes ashore the lassoers watch their opportunity and lasso one of the lions around the neck. Another lasso is fastened to one of the hind flippers, and the lion is forced into one of the cages. This must be done in a short time, or the animal will not live. After the lion is captured, a shot, to which a long rope is attached, is fired from a bomb gun on the shore over the vessel; the other end of the rope is fastened to one of the cages, and it is pushed into the breakers and hauled out to the vessel. On board the vessel the lions are not put into water, but are kept wet with a sprinkler. They are then taken to San Francisco, where they are placed in cars built for the purpose, and transported across the continent, each car containing twelve lions."

That every man should regulate his actions by his own conscience, without any regard to the opinions of the rest of the world, is one of the precepts of moral prudence; justified not only by the suffrage of reason, which declares that none of the gifts of heaven are to be useless, but by the voice likewise of experience, which will soon inform us that, if we make the praise or blame of others the rule of our conduct, we shall be distracted by a boundless variety of irreconcilable judgments, be held in perpetual suspense between contrary impulses, and consult forever without determination.

The production of butter and cheese in this country is said to be four times greater in value than the total yield of our gold and silver mines.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest fearless comment. THE SUN'S habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

For the Daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free. Address, I. W. ENGLAND,
Publisher of THE SUN, New York City.

SPRINGVILLE.

Another thaw.

Meetings at the M. E. church, day and evening.

The S. C. B. is progressing with G. N. Stacy as Instructor.

Mrs. Jackson Ayres has been quite sick,—mumps.

Valentine day was nearly forgotten at this place this time.

Mrs. E. J. Smith fell and broke her wrist while coming from meeting last Thursday evening.

The largest amount of snow at any one time here this winter came last Thursday night.

The revival meetings, (so called,) conducted by the Rev. Higgins, of Detroit, at the M. E. church, in this place have been largely attended—Quite interesting.

The fine sleighing this winter has been the means of a large harvest for the saw mills in this township. A. Howard's mill and D. Lewis' mill are in full blast.

We would suggest to our Ridgeway friend who wants the depot clause in the T. & M. railroad notes, that it is best to be sure and secure the road first and then the depot.

FRANKLIN.

President—J. R. Keeney.
Secretary—E. L. Mills.
Treasurer—Walt Osborn.

It was decided to hold the annual public shearing at Franklin Centre, date to be fixed upon by the Ex. Committee.

A committee of three were chosen to draft Rules and By-Laws for a permanent organization, and report in two weeks, Henry Wilson, chairman.

The question of washing sheep came up for discussion, and nearly every member advocated discontinuing the practice. It being a great cruelty to the animals and an imaginary profit to the manufacturer.

Mr. —— stated that the only way some of our buyers could discriminate between washed and unwashed was from the dull, dingy appearance of the washed fleece, while the unwashed showed its natural crimp and bright appearance. The practice was declared a nuisance.

Members of the Association are awakening to the fact that there is a boom in the land, and have secured some fine registered stock.

Time of next meeting March 4th, 1881.

EAST TECUMSEH.

THE NEW BIBLE—QUICK WORK.

The new version of the New Testament, which has been so many years in course of translation and which is unquestionably the most important literary enterprise this century has seen, is being waited for with curiosity and anxiety by hundreds of thousands. It is not generally known that a first edition of 500,000 copies has already manufactured in England, and 100,000 copies are said to be already in New York City, not one of them permitted to be sold. They are awaiting a telegram from the authorities in England authorizing their issue. The first copies can only be had at the extravagant price of $10 per copy. The Literary Revolution proposes to meet the demands which its army of friends are making upon it by doing probably the quickest work in book-making which has ever yet been accomplished. Arrangements have been fully made to put the entire book into type inside of 24 hours from the time a printed copy of the English edition can be procured, and within three days at least 10,000 copies will be bound ready for delivery to waiting purchasers, and at least 5,000 copies will be manufactured every day thereafter, until the demand is met. It will be printed in large, beautiful type, neatly and strongly bound in cloth, in a volume of about 500 pages, and sold at the nominal price of 30 cents. A fine edition in half Russia, gilt top, will be sold for 60 cents, and one in full Turkey morocco, gilt edges, for $1.25. Of course, the popular demand will be enormous. Orders will be filled in the order in which they are received, with remittance. American Book Exchange, New York.

Mr. Steuerwald, of the Hudson Post, was able last week, for the first time since last November, to visit his office on account of a severe illness.

WORTHY OF PERUSAL.

The following sensible item, which we copy from the Printer's Circular, of Philadelphia, is worthy of careful perusal: "The columns of a newspaper are the publisher's stock in trade, and the parties who ask to use them for their especial benefit must expect to pay for the same. Every public-spirited citizen of a place should have a pride at seeing his town and surroundings improved. Every new house, every road, every new manufacturing establishment erected, every new business opened, enhance the value of property in our midst. Every reflecting mind knows this to be true, and it should not be forgotten that the local newspaper adds much to the general wealth and prosperity of the place, as well as increases the reputation of the town abroad. It benefits all who have business in the place, enhances the value of property, being a desirable public convenience, even if not conducted in the interests of the ruling power. It increases trade, it cautions against imposition, it saves you from loss, it warns you of danger, it points out different advantages, and increases your profits. The local press is the power that moves the people; therefore support it by advertising in it liberally, subscribing for it and paying for it."

Clinton News: While looking over an old account book of D. D. Piper's the other day, Frank Estabrook came across the following item: "Gedde Raisor, creditor to sixty bushels of corn at six cents per bushel." The date was 1847. What would our farmers say to such prices now-a-days?

Blissfield Advance: Seneca Corbin, living four miles south of Ogden, committed suicide on Tuesday, by poisoning himself with arsenic. No cause is assigned. Deceased was one of the first settlers of that section, having lived there for forty years.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Republican county convention met in the court house at Adrian, Monday, February 21, to elect delegates to the State convention and to the convention of the first Judicial circuit.

The convention was called to order at 11 o'clock A.M. by the chairman of the county committee, W. A. Underwood.

Hon. Cornelius Knapp, of Rome, and T. S. Applegate, of Adrian, were respectively chosen chairman and secretary of the convention.

The temporary organization was then declared permanent.

Upon inquiry of Hon. J. K. Boies, it was found that Clinton and Deerfield were not as yet reprerented in the convention. As the delinquent delegates were likely to arrive by noon, on motion of J. H. Fee, the convention adjourned till one o'clock P.M.

The chairman called the convention sharply at one o'clock, the Deerfield delegates having arrived in the mean time.

The convention, after some discussion, divided itself into representative districts, each district to name eight delegates.

T. S. Applegate, under instructions of the third ward of Adrian, offered the following, and asked its adoption:

The Republicans of Lenawee county, in convention assembled, reposing especial trust and confidence in the legal learning, honesty and industry of the Hon. Andrew Howell, do hereby instruct their delegates to the judicial convention for the first judicial district to vote as a unit for, and to use all honorable means to secure, his nomination for Circuit Judge.

Resolved, That the delegates from Lenawee county to the Republican State convention are hereby instructed to vote for no man for candidate for Regent of the University who is a partisan of either of the so-called Douglas, or Rose factions in the late lamentable controversy arising out of the laboratory defalcation, but to unitedly vote for the nomination of two men whose standing, character and history will be sufficient guarantee to the people of Michigan that they will govern the University with eyes open only to its success and glory, and to the best interests of the whole people of the State.

The resolution was adopted.

After recess the following were announced as delegates:

Ward or Tp.	State.	Judicial
1st ward	W. A. Underwood	T. J. Navin

This district named as alternates to the State convention, Thos. McComb, John Britton, W. F. Baxter, Cyrus Crandall, N. D. Yale, J. M. Robertson, W. H. Osborne, J. Rosenstiel.

Cornelius Quick, seeing an opportunity, sprung the following upon the convention and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, The Republican party has declared itself to be in favor of a government by the people and for the people; therefore,

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the proposed constitutional amendments in regard to the liquor traffic should be submitted to the people.

It brought forth considerable discussion, but was finally adopted, and a copy ordered to be sent to our Representatives at Lansing.

The convention then adjourned.

Adrian Times: The Wednesday before Christmas a large tree on the old Samuel Todd farm, in township of Madison, in which a coon had taken refuge, was cut down. The tree fell in such a position as to imprison the animal, which was allowed to occupy its quarters until Wednesday last, when the tree was opened by J. H. Storey, whose dog seized the coon on emerging. The animal had fasted during the interval, but was found fat and in good condition otherwise.

Adrian Press: Sheriff Bidwell evidently has been working up a second term. A Seneca Sunday school, had made preparations last week for a sleigh ride to this city, "to visit the jail". Glad our city has one point of interest.

The M. E. Church, of Morenci last week had a foretaste of one side of the hereafter. The Home and Aetna insurance companies however made good the damages.

NO TIME LIKE THE OLD TIME.

BY O. W. HOLMES.

There is no time like the old time, when you and I were young,
When the buds of April blossomed and birds of spring-time sung!
The garden's brightest glories by summer sun are nursed:
But, oh! the sweet, sweet violets, the flowers that opened first!

There is no place like the old place, where you and I were born,
Where we lifted our eyelids on the splendors of the morn!
From the milk-white breast that warmed us, from the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eye glistened o'er us that will look on us no more.

There is no friend like the old friend, who has shared our morning days!
No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise!
Fame is the restless flower, with gaudy crown of gold:
But friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.

There is no love like the old, love that we courted in our pride:
Though our leaves are falling, falling, and we are falling side by side;
There are blossoms all around us with the colors of the dawn,
And we live in borrowed sunshine when the light of day is gone.

There are no times like the old times—they shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place—keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like the old friends—may Heaven prolong their lives!
There are no loves like the old loves—the loves of loving wives.

"Old Virginny."

VARIOUS CUSTOMS STILL IN VOGUE AWAY FROM THE RAILROADS AND TOWNS.

A young society swell who was invited not long ago to go down to visit a family in the interior of Virginia, gives a very interesting picture of the pleasant customs that are still in vogue in that state.

When one gets away from railroads and towns, he finds things in much the same condition that they were about one hundred years ago. There are men in some of the back counties of Virginia who never yet heard of Jackson's death, and who would be very much startled if the news was sprung upon them suddenly. This young society man was a great horseman. He took his horse with him, a high-spirited, dark chestnut gelding. He found upon his arrival that his ability to ride at once made him popular with everybody. He was surprised to find that almost everybody rode horseback. Wagons and carriages were almost unknown. Young gentlemen going out to give their sweethearts a treat, simply swung a blanket on their horses, behind their saddle, where the young lady rides pillion fashion. He says it is not an uncommon sight to see four persons on one horse. He proves this to be the case by describing an actual scene that came under his notice, where an old gentleman and his wife were riding along comfortably with two children. The old man and the boy in front, and the old lady with a boy in her lap behind. This system of riding is very popular among young ladies and gentlemen in Virginia. The young Virginian mounts his horse, dashes up to the saddle-block, catches his sweetheart by the hand, and she bounds like an agile gazelle to the blanket behind him, and then she adds interest to the occasion by winding her arms around him, and his good horse starts off at a jolly pace.

Now this young swell got along very well in his visit, until one day he was at church at one of the country churches, and a young lady who owned a very comfortable place near there invited him to go home and take dinner with her. There were three or four very interesting young ladies stopping at her house, and of course he accepted her invitation with great pleasure; but his hair fairly sood on end when she said to him: "I guess you will have to take one of the girls on your horse; in dividing up our party, one at least comes to you."

The young man in question is not a heavy weight physically. He does not weigh over ninety pounds. The young woman who fell to his lot was a bouncing Virginia lass, plump and pretty, who would weigh at least one hundred and forty pounds. He was in no haste to get into the saddle. He watched very carefully how the rest of the fellows got their fair companions upon the upper deck. He was the last man to swing his horse in line. He had a little doubt too about his horse. The horse was very high-spirited and had never been ridden double. He darted up to the horse-block and the young woman was ready. The blanket was arranged behind in the most approved fashion. He edged his chestnut up to the side of the horse-block. She gave him one hand and in a second she bounded firmly to her place behind him, in as firm a hold as the proprieties of the occasion demanded. She was not the only one that had bounded. The horse bolted about ten feet in the air and came down on his fore feet, and, as the young fellow said, suddenly became very light behind. The young man, although a very good rider, said he would have gone over the horse's ears several times if it had not been for the young lady. She held on, and he felt perfectly convinced that if he went off she wouldn't, and so she stuck. His horse fought, shied, jumped and balked, greatly to the amusement of the young lady, who very near cracked several of his ribs in holding on to him when his horse bolted to the right and left. It was five miles to his destination. When he got off his horse finally, and walked into the farm-house, the great streams of perspiration slowly trickled down the sides of his face. He was weak and trembling.

The lady of the house asked him how he liked the trip.

He said that under less exciting circumstances he might have relished the hugging part of it, but beyond that he was very willing to confess that it was one of the greatest tests that he had ever undergone in his life.—Washington letter to Chicago Tribune.

THE QUAKER'S MOTTO.—A Quaker had this for his motto: "I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer nor neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

"Beautiful lives have grown up from the darkest places, as pure white lilies full of fragrance have blossomed on slimy, stagnant waters."

Extraordinary Shooting.

The San Francisco Chronicle says: The celebrated Dr. Carver, has a most formidable rival in the person of Dr. John Ruth. He gave an exhibition of his wonderful skill with the rifle at Shell Mound Point, Berkley, in the presence of about one hundred spectators, largely composed of the "crack shots," with both the rifle and shot-gun. There was also a fair sprinkling of ladies in the assemblage.

The doctor was accompanied by his wife, a prepossessing lady of medium stature, who also entertained the company by a brief display of her skill in the manipulation of the rifle and pistol. This was Mrs. Ruth's first exhibition in public, and she manifested considerable perturbation at first, or, as the Doctor expressed it, "she was a little skittish upon her first appearance," but after the first two or three shots the nervousness disappeared, and the glass balls were shattered in quick succession.

The balls were thrown into the air by an attendant, Mrs. Ruth breaking six out of nine. She then perforated a glass ball held in an attendant's hand at a distance of about twenty feet, and repeated the experiment with the hammer of the rifle held downward. She also shattered with a pistol several balls thrown in the air and also a ball held in the hand. Mrs. Ruth was loudly applauded for her steady nerve and wonderful marksmanship.

Dr. Ruth then proceeded to give an exhibition of his fancy shooting at a glass ball held in the hand of his attendant, he taking aim through his legs with his back to the object. He also held the rifle with the butt resting upon the top of his head, the hammer pointing downward. He also shot with his back reclining upon the table. In all these experiments he was successful on the first attempt.

He also performed the Austin Brothers' mirror trick successfully. Turning his back to the attendant, he sighted the rifle by the aid of a small hand-mirror, and broke the ball at the first trial. Perhaps the most wonderful feat that he accomplished, and one requiring considerable nerve on the part of both himself and attendant, was shooting a cigar out of the mouth of the latter, an experiment which led many to predict that the Doctor's assistant would not live to a very green old age. Another interesting experiment was shooting without a sight, that essential adjunct being covered by having a piece of cardboard placed round the barrel at its extremity. The absence of the sight apparently made no difference, as the destruction of the vitreous spheres continued unabated.

The following experiments were also successfully accomplished: shooting a ball from the head of an attendant, the latter being blindfolded; the same feat with the bandages removed from the attendant's eyes, and the latter looking into the muzzle of the rifle. One-hand shooting with a small rifle, manipulated in a variety of difficult ways, holding a rifle with the hands placed back of the neck.

In none of these shots did the Doctor fail to shatter the balls front the hand of the attendant. One of the most marvellous feats he perlormed was the following: Placing a glass ball on the ground, the Doctor shot in front of it, and plowing under it sent it flying several feet in the air by the force of the concussion, and before it reached the ground another shot broke it into a thousand pieces.

An exhibition of very rapid shooting was also given, the Doctor breaking the balls as fast as the attendant could throw them into the air. The exhibition closed with a display of short-range pistol-parctice, in which the marksman was not as successful as with the rifle, having, as he remarked, by way of apology, had little experience with the weapon. All those present expressed much astonishment at Dr. Ruth's wonderful skill, and it seemed to be the general verdict that Carver's proficiency was secondary to that of Dr. Ruth.

Brilliant Whitewash.

Take half a bushel of nice unslacked lime, slack it with boiling water, cover it during the process to keep in the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer, and add to it a peck of salt, previously well dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice, boiled to a thin paste, and stirred in boiling hot; half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting, and a pound of clean glue, which has been previously dissolved by soaking it well, and then hanging it over a slow fire, in a small kettle within a large one filled with water. Add five gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir it well, and let it stand a few days covered from the dirt.

It should be put on right hot; for this purpose it can be kept in a kettle on a portable furnace. It is said about a pint of this mixture will cover a square yard upon the outside of a house if properly applied. Brushes more or less small may be used according to the neatness of the job required. It answers as well as oil paint for wood. It retains its brilliancy for many years. There is nothing of the kind that will compare with it, either for inside or outside walls.

Coloring matter may be put in and made of any shade you like. Spanish brown stirred in will make red pink, more or less deep according to the quantity. A delicate tinge of this is pretty, for inside walls. Finely pulverized common clay, well mixed with Spanish brown, make a reddish stone color. Yellow ochre stirred in makes yellow wash, but chrome goes further, and makes a color generally esteemed prettier. In all these cases the darkness of the shades is determined, of course, by the quantity of coloring used. It is difficult to make rules because tastes are different, and it would be best to try experiments on a shingle and let it dry. We have been told that green must not be mixed with lime. The lime destroys the color, and the color has an effect on the whitewash, which makes it crack and peel. When walls have been badly smoked, and you wish them a clean white, it is well to squeeze indigo plentifully through a bag into the water you use, before it is stirred in the whole mixture. If a larger quantity than five gallons be wanted, the same proportion should be observed.

To keep furs and woolen goods from moths, close wrapping in paper is enough, though a little camphor may be put into the package to keep off other insects. Any paper will do if there are no holes in it, and no openings are left for the moth to creep in. Of course care must be taken to have the articles free from moths when put away.

The Magical Square.

A remarkable curiosity in numbers is the magical square. It consists of numbers so disposed in parallel and equal lines, that the sum of each line, taken any way of the square, amounts to the same. To work this out, it is necessary, first, to form a natural square, (see first diagram) and afterwards transpose the numbers to form the magical square.

NATURAL SQUARE

1	2	3	4	5
6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25

MAGICAL SQUARE.

11	24	7	20	3
4	12	25	8	16
17	5	13	21	9
10	18	1	14	22

First, the rank e f in the natural square to the diagonal a d in the magic square. Then the rank g h to the diagonal b c. Then 1 to the space under 13, and 2 in continuance of the diagonal below to the right. Some attention to the following diagram will be necessary, to make the remainder of the operation intelligible:

In continuance of the diagonal from 2 downwards, 3 falls out of the square into the right-hand corner of a supposed square placed underneath, at a. For this reason the 3 has been placed in the corresponding corner of the magical square. In the same continued line, 4 would fall into a second supposed square, at b. It is put in the corresponding part of the magical square. So, 5 would fall in the supposed space c, and it occupies a similar space in the magical square. But 6 falls in d, the corresponding space to which is occupied by 1; we therefore begin a fresh diagonal, and place it in the magical square beneath 18. The digit 7 is now placed in a diagonal line before 3 and after 5, still proceeding diagonally, we place 9. This would make 10 fall out of the square into a third suppositious square, at e. It is therefore placed in the corresponding part of the magic square. The figures from 11 to 15 are already placed; 16 would fall in the first corner (marked a) of the second supposed square; but the corresponding corner of the magic square is occupied by 11. We find the place it must occupy, by supposing the diagonal from 18 to be continued into a fourth suppositious square at g; the next number, 17, then comes in order, before 18, and 19 follows in the same line; 20 falls out of the square at h, which marks its position, and 21 would fall at i, but that part of the magical square is occupied by 16; we begin the next diagonal with it, and in the same line place 22. This brings 23 to the corner of the third supposed square, k, and 24 to l, near to which is the place of 25.

This being done, it will be found that the sum of every row of figures in the magical square, taken in a right line, makes 65. Any series of odd numbers in arithmetical progression may be worked in the same way.

A Merchant's Career.

THE LADDER BY WHICH A POOR BOY ONCE CLIMBED TO WEALTH AND HONOR.

We clip the following extract, showing the way in which some of our merchants have risen from an humble, non-remunerative position to that of wealth and prominence:

A few years ago a large drug firm advertised for a boy. The next day the store was thronged with applicants, among them a queer-looking little fellow, accompanied by a woman, who proved to be his aunt, in lieu of heartless parents, by whom he had been abandoned. Looking at this little waif, the merchant in the store said, "Can't take him; places all full; besides he is too small." "I know he is small," said the woman, "but he is willing and faithful." There was a twinkle in the boy's eye which made the merchant think again. A partner in the firm volunteered the remark that he did "not see that they wanted such a boy—he wasn't bigger than a pint of cider." But after a consultation, he was set to work. A few days later a call was made on the boys in the store for some one to stay all night. The prompt response of the little fellow contrasted well with the reluctance of the others. In the middle of the night the merchant looked in to see if all was right in the store, and presently discovered his youthful protege busy scissoring labels. "What are you doing? said he. "I did not tell you to work nights." "I know you did not tell me so, but I thought I might as well do something." In the morning the cashier got orders to "double that boy's wages, for he is willing." Only a few weeks elapsed before a show of wild beasts passed through the streets, and, very naturally, all hands in the store rushed to witness the spectacle. A thief saw his opportunity, and entered the rear door to seize something, but in a twinkling found himself firmly clutched by the diminutive clerk aforesaid, and, after a struggle, was captured. Not only a robbery was prevented, but valuable articles taken from other stores were recovered. When asked by the merchant why he stayed behind to watch when all others quit their work, he replied: "You told me me never to leave the store when others were absent, and I thought I'd stay." Orders were given the cashier once more—"Double that boy's wages; he is willing and faithful." To-day that boy is getting $2,500, and very soon he will become a member of the firm.

If a man have love in his heart, he may talk in broken language, but it will be eloquence to those who listen.

If a man is determined to do the best he can, whether he drives a cart, conducts a business of a million dollars, or preaches the gospel, he cannot fail.

Frivolity under whatever form it appears, takes from attention its strength, from thought its originality, from feeling its earnestness.

There are over fifty thousand post offices in the United States.

Servants.

There are frequent complaints that in these days servants are bad, and apprentices are bad, and dependants and aiding hands generally are bad. It may be so. But if it is so, what is the inference? In the working of the machinery of society, class moves pretty much with class; that is, one class moves pretty much with its equals in the community (equals so far as social station is concerned,) and apart from other causes as much those below as those above itself; but there is one grand exception to this general rule, and that is, in the case of domestic servants. The same holds, though in less degree, with apprentices and assistant hands; and in less degree only, because, in this last case, the difference of grade is slighter. Domestic servants and assistants in business and trade, come most closely and continually into contact with their employers; they are about them from morning to night, see them in every phase of character, in every style of humour, in every act of life. How influence will descend! Conscientiousness is spread, not only by precept but by example, and so to speak, by contagion it is spread more widely. Kindness is communicated in the same way. Virtue of ever kind acts like an electric shock. Those in contact with its practicers receive the communication of it. The same with qualities on the tempers that do not honor to our nature. If servants come to you bad, you may at least improve them; possibly almost change their nature. Here follows, then, a recipe to that effect: Recipe for obtaining good servants.—Let them observe in your conduct to others just the qualities and virtues that you would desire they should possess and practice as respects you. Be uniformly kind and gentle. If you reprove do so with reason and with temper. Be respectful, and you will be respected by them. Be kind and you will meet kindness from them. Consider their interests, and they will consider yours. A friend in a servant is no contemptible thing. Be to every servant a f[illegible] fearless, indeed, will be the [illegible] does not warm in love to y[illegible]

Lincoln and Lord Hartington.

The Marquis of Hartington was traveling in this country during the war, and while here made a semi-official call on President Lincoln. He was introduced to honest old Abe in the white house, with some ceremony, but Mr. Lincoln grasped the hand of the marquis with his broad hand, closed a grip on it that brought the tears to the Englishman's eyes, and said in a cheery voice: "Glad to see you, Marquis of Hartington. Shall never forget you, because your name rhymes with one of our great characters—Mrs Partington. How are you marquis?" and he gave Hartington another squeeze; after which my lord left the executive chamber nursing his hand and his temper, declaring to a friend that "Your American president is a bear!"

The secret of the president's action was that the marquis had appeared at a ball in New York a few nights before his visit to Washington, and ostentatiously wore the rebel colors in his bulton-hole. The incident was published, and the president, knowing the marquis was to call at the white house, concluded to give the haughty but ill-bred Englishmen a puncture that he would get through even his bull-hide. And he did.

TWILIGHT THOUGHTS.

O winter twilight, while the moon
Grows whiter on the deepening blue,
I find some brief-lived thoughts in you.
That rise not in the light or noon.

Of faded lovers, that once were sweet,
But now are neither sweet nor sad;
Of hopes that, distant, looked so glad,
Yet lie, unnoticed, at our feet.

Of these I think, until the red
Has wasted from the western sky,
And royal reigns the moon on high.
What profits to lament the dead?

Small profit; yet in dreams that hold
One hand to forward, one to pass,
We stay the years that fly so fast,
And link our new lives to the old.

A western journalist, whose wife had just presented him with twins, and who, for this reason, was compelled to neglect his paper for one day, wrote, the day after, the following excuse: "We were unable to issue our paper yesterday, in consequence of the arrival of two extra males."

"Beware of the woman," says the Elmira Advertiser, "who carries a knife in her stocking." Yes, yes, but how are we to discover if she carries a knife in her stocking?

A most interesting sight to see is that of a young lady with lips like rubies, and with teeth of pearly whiteness, and with cheeks that have stolen the deep carnation of the deathless rose, with her mouth full of gingerbread!

"What made you quit the East?" said a man in Nevada to a new-comer. "I got into trouble by marrying two wives," was the response. "Well," said the other, "I came out here because I got into trouble by marrying only one wife." "And I," added a bystander, "came here because I got into trouble by simply promising to marry one."

Scene—Teacher with reading-class. Boy (reading:) "And as she sailed down the river—" Teacher: "Why are ships called 'she'?" Boy (precociously alive to responsibilities of his sex:) "Because they need men to manage them."

A gentleman addresses another gentleman, whom he does not know, at a party: "This is awfully stupid; let's go and get a drink." "I would like to do it," was the reply, "but I can't leave very well." "Why not?" "Why, you see, I am the one who is giving the party."

A school board inspector asked a small pupil of what the surface of the earth consists, and was promptly answered: "Land and water." He varied the question slightly, that it might be impressed on the boy's mind, and asked: "What then do land and water make?" To which came the immediate response: "Mud."

"John, what odor is that?" "Cloves, love." "But that other?" "Allspice, my beloved." "But isn't there another?" "Yes, apples, belovedest." "Just one more?" "Raisins, my most belovedest." "Well, John, if you'd only just drink a little brandy now, I think you would make a good mince pie."

It must have been tremendously embarrassing to that nice young man out at Bowling Green, Ky., who escorted the preacher's fair daughter to church Sunday night, and arrived late, to hear the reverend gentleman read from the Bible as the couple marched up the aisle, "My daughter is greviously tormented with a devil," which verse occurs in an account of a New Testament miracle. The whole congregation snickered, and it would be hard to tel' which felt the worst, the preacher, his daughter, or her escort.

A clergyman recently left Liverpool in a large ocean steamer, and, beginning to feel uncomfortable after leaving the mouth of the river, sought the captain to learn if there was any danger. The captain, in response, led the clergyman to the forecastle and told him to listen to what was going on. The clergyman was shocked to hear the sailors swearing so vigorously, and expressed his horror to the captain. The captain merely remarked: "Do you think these men would swear in such a manner if there was any real danger?" whereupon the parson seemed satisfied and retired. A day or two after, during a severe storm, the captain saw the clergyman proceeding with difficulty to the forecastle, and on his return overheard him exclaim: "Thank heaven, they're swearing yet!"

A CRUEL HOAX.—Last evening, just before sundown, a gentleman who was sitting by his window on North B street, casually remarked:

"There goes the woman that George Brown's dead gone on."

His wife, who was in a back room getting supper ready, dropped a plate on the floor, stumbled over the baby, and ran like a quarter-horse to the window with:

"Where? where? tell me quick!"

Then the woman at the window said in tones of deep disgust:

"Why, that's Brown's wife."

"Yes; exactly," remarked the brutal husband, quietly.

Then the disappointed woman went back and got the supper ready, but her usually sweet disposition was soured for the entire evening.

Dread of Death.

Age, that lessens our enjoyment of life, increases our desire for living. Those dangers which, in the vigor of youth, we had learned to despise, assume new terrors as we grow old. Our caution increasing as our years increase, fear becomes at last the prevailing passion of the mind, and the small remainder of life is taken up in useless efforts to keep off our end, or provide for a continued existence.

Whence, then, is this increased love of life which grows upon us with our years? Whence comes it that we thus make greater efforts to preserve our existence at a time when it becomes scarce worth the keeping? Is it that nature, attentive to the preservation of mankind, increases our wishes to live, while she lessens our enjoyment; and, as she robs the senses of every pleasure, equips imagination in the spoil? Life would be insupportable to the old man who, loaded with infirmities, feared death no more than when in the vigor of manhood: the numberless calamities of decaying nature, and the consciousness of surviving every pleasure, would at once induce him with his own hand to terminate the scene of misery; but happily the contempt of death forsakes him at a time when it could only be prejudicial, and life acquires an imaginary value in proportion as its real value is no more.—[Goldsmith.

Man and the Bible.

Chiefly, the Bible holds its power over men as the record, in quaint, simple, and unconcious language, of life and the victories of life. No literary conceit or pride of authorship, as we say. No style, long syllables, or short syllables, studied metaphor, or critical or linguistic machinery. Rough style, indeed. You know the Roman Cardinal said he found it bad for his style, so he did not read it. Nay, no great logic; no system of metaphysics; no compact method of government; no treatise on natural history; no science of morals. Will it tell us whether there is an ocean at the North Pole? No, it will not tell us that. Will it tell us why God permits evil? No, it will not tell us that. Will it tell us whether the soul of man existed before he was born into this world? No. Will it tell us whether the body of man is derived in direct descent from the inferior races? No.

Then what will it tell us? It will tell us of the power of God, the Life of the Universe, over all the things which he made and set in order; of the power of man, whom God set to subdue the world, to carry out that enterprise when he loyally engages in it; of the power of the soul, which is the life of man, to control supreme the mind of man, and his body. It tells how the spirit of God moved on the face of the waters. It tells us how the inspiration of God led Israel out of bondage. It tells how the sense of God lifted Israel out of barbarism to command, and how, as Israel left God, she sank back to vassalage. And such little history is accessory only to the history of histories, the centre of history; when, in the middle of this book, four untaught men, in narration whose quaint simplicity challenges the criticism and imitation of the world, describe some incidents in the life of God's own son, who had no life but God's life, and obeyed no lesser law. In those fragments, there is the triumph of the great Personality of all time. Lord of Life, we call him wisely. Because the Bible encloses the four Gospels, explains, illustrates, leads down to them and leads back to them; because so leading, it shows always that life is always master, and that forms obey—forms, methods, law, and all the outside—that these obey and must obey; because the Bible is the book of Life, and the book of the Lord of Life—because of this it keeps its hold upon the world.—Edward Everett Hale.

Gough's Ruse.

Most lecturers and public speakers who have been introduced to their audiences have suffered from the high eulogiums passed upon them beforehand by their misjudging introducers. The natural effect is to arouse expectation that cannot be met, and to produce marked disappointment. John B. Gough relates how he once managed, before a London assembly, to avoid such a result. His introducer had pronounced him the greatest orator who had ever lived, and ended a long and fulsome eulogy by telling the people to prepare themselves for such a burst of eloquence as they had never before listened to. Gough, knowing that the best effort he had ever made would, under such circumstances, fall far short of anticipation, determined to practice a ruse, and the ruse was to affect stupidity. He opened by stammering and hesitating, by beginning his sentences and leaving them unfinished, until, as he said, the worst speaker in England could not have done worse. He soon overheard those on the platform whispering their disapprobation and censure, one man saying, "O, this will never do here, you know. It may be all very well in America, you know; but in England, you know, it is quite a different thing." He still continued in his dull, disconnected way until he had seen that he had a background for his verbal pictures. Then he gradually adopted his natural manner, and as sentence after sentence rolled out vivid and resonant from his lips, his audience grew enthusiastic, and fairly roared with applause. He had never been more rapturously greeted than he was then and there. Those who heard him declared that they had never known a man to change so after he had once warmed up.

A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

To set the mind above appetite is the end of abstinence, which one of the fathers observes to be, not a virtue, but the groundwork of virtue. By forbearing to do what may innocently be done, we may secure the power of resistance when pleasure or interest shall lend their charms to guilt.

When a friend corrects a serious fault in you, he does you the greatest act of friendship.

The Commercial Traveler.

What would I do without "the boys?" How often have they been my friends. I go to a new town. I don't know one hotel from the other. I don't know where to go. The man with the samples gets off at the same station. I follow him without a word or a tremor. He calls the bus driver by name, and orders him to get out of this now, as soon as we are seated. And when I follow him I am inevitably certain to go to the best house there is in the place. He shouts at the clerk by name and fires a joke at the landlord as we go in. He looks over my shoulder as I register after him, and hands me his card with a shout of recognition. He peeps at the register again and watches the clerk assign me to 93. "Ninety nothing," he shouts, "who's in 15?" The clerk says he is saying 15 for Judge Drysadust. "Well, he be blowed," says my cheery friend, "give him the attic and put this gentleman in 15." And if the clerk hesitates, he seizes the pen and gives me 15 himself, and then he calls the porter, orders him to carry up my baggage and put a fire in 15, and then in the same breath adds, "What time will you be down for supper, M. Burdette?" And he waits for me, and seeing that I am a stranger in the town, he sees that I am cared for, that the waiters do not neglect me he tells me about the town, the people, and the business. He is breezy, cheery, sociable, full of new stories, always good natured; he frisks with cigars, and overflows with "thousand mile tickets;" he knows all the best rooms in all the hotels; he always has a key for the car-seats, and turns a seat for himself and his friends without troubling the brakeman, but he will ride on the wood-box or stand outside on the platform to accomodate a lady, and he will give up his seat to an old man. I know him pretty well. For three years I have been traveling with him, from Colorado to Maine, and I have seen the worst and the best of him, and I know the best far out-weighs the worst. I could hardly get along without him. I am glad he is so numerous.—Burdette.

Laziness the Foundation of Socialism.

Socialism is a disease of a state of civilization in which a true science of society scarcely exists, in which false notions of life, of the relation of the individual to the society and the State, are wide spread; and in which all ranks are honeycombed by sentimental notions of what ought to be, and can be, in this world. Since Rosseau, a certain set of doctrines have been permeating modern society, which have no truth in history or fact at all, but which flatter human nature and are sure to be popular, because they make light of education, culture, capital, breeding, and all the excellencies which, being all very hard to get, raise him who has them above him who has them not. The same doctrines teach, per contra, that the untrained man is the norm and type and standard; so that men, instead of being urged to seek the excellencies, are encouraged to believe themselves superior, without them, to those who have them.

Such is the outcome of the doctrine of equality; and as it has spread, it has only grown more popular, has shifted more and more distinctly into a thirst and demand for (equal) enjoyment of material luxury. Socialism is an effort to gratify this thirst in some other way than by using it as an incentive to industry and economy. Obviously, there is no other way, unless it consists in taking away the means of material enjoyment from those who have produced and saved them, and giving them to those who have not produced and saved them. Every step in that direction is a step towards universal improverishment and barbarism; and every step will have to be won by war. The socialists assume that their victory in that war is certain; but it is certain that they are entirely mistaken.—Scribner.

Had covetous men, as the fable goes of Briareus, each of them one hundred hands, they would all of them be employed in grasping and gathering, and hardly one of them in giving or laying out, but all in receiving and none in restoring: a thing in itself so monstrous that nothing in nature besides is like it, except it be death and the grave, the only things I know which are always carrying off the spoils of the world and never making restitution. For otherwise, all the parts of the universe, as they borrow of one another, so they still pay what they borrow, and that by so just and well balanced an equality that their payments always keep pace with their receipts.—[Dryden.

EPIDEMICS.—Just now coughs, colds, lung and bronchial complaints seem to be epidemic. In these cases of sudden colds the best thing to do is to get a bottle of N. H. Downs' Elixir, which invariably gives speedy relief and ultimately effects a complete cure in all cases where the breathing organs are affected. Use it in time and prevent serious lung difficulties. Sold by all Druggists.

A conscientious person would rather doubt his own judgment than condemn his species. He would say, "I have observed without attention, or judged upon erroneous maxims; I trusted to profession, when I ought to have attended to conduct." Such a man will grow wise, not malignant, by his acquaintance with the world. But he that accuses all mankind of corruption ought to remember that he is sure to convict only one. In truth, I should much rather admit those whom at any time I have disrelished the most to be patterns of perfection, than seek a consolation to my own unworthiness in a general communion of depravity with all about me.—[Burke.

The Cabinet makers are sorely tried. Several nice pieces of furniture have been constructed for Garfield's use after he takes possession of the White House, and they have all been found useless. Gen. Garfield probably intends to construct his own cabinet.

Some of the National banks are threatening to withdraw their circulation in case the new three per cent. funding bill should become a law.—They have been petted by the national congress so long that it goes hard with them to be brought down on a level with other people. The bill however will become a law, and the new loan will be successfully placed just the same.

Gen. Hancock has been invited to attend the inauguration ceremonies on the 4th of March, and has accepted the invitation in his well-known courteous manner. But we fail to see that John Kelly has been favored with an invitation. Why should the boss be snubbed in this fashion? He did more than any dozen Republican leaders to elect Gen. Garfield, and he certainly should be honored with an invite to the inauguration.

Twenty years ago Stephen A. Douglas stood on the Eastern portico of the Capitol at Washington and held President Lincoln's hat while the latter delivered his inaugural. General Hancock will be present at the inauguration of his late rival, Gen. Garfield, on the 4th of March next. This act of courtesy affords another illustration of Gen. Hancock's character.—The men who voted last November for the hero of Gettysburg have no reason to be ashamed of their action to-day.

The Republican county convention acted wisely in adopting C. R. Miller's resolution instructing the delegates to throw their influence against all candidates for regents who are prejudiced toward either Rose or Douglass. Beal has been actively at work for many days past in pulling every wire within his grasp in order to get control of the State convention and has to a great extent succeeded. Almost every county has sent among its delegates some avowed Beal men, and it will require decided and uniform action on the part of the Anti-Beal men to counteract his influence and break his forces.

At the coming spring election there will be submitted to the people an amendment to the constitution giving to the Judges of the Supreme Court of this State power to appoint their own clerk. This power at present rests with the county clerk of Ingham county. This amendment should be adopted by the people, and will be if they understand it, viz: That its adoption does not create a new office nor does it add one dollar to expenses. This amendment was voted down six years ago by about 4,000 votes. The appointment of a Supreme Court clerk ought certainly to rest in the hands of that Court. If the people understand the nature of this amendment they will adopt it without opposition.

OUR Representative has been heard from in a forcible manner. The Evening News says this about him: "Mr. Waring, of Lenawee, has given notice in the House of a bill drawn in accordance with a recommendation made in the governor's message, viz.: to correct certain existing abuses in the conveying of prisoners from the place of conviction to the place of confinement. This bill will provide that the keepers of state prisons, houses of correction, etc., shall be notified of the conviction and shall send officers under their command after the prisoners, who shall thus be conveyed to the place where they are to be confined, without the costly fees and other extras that accrue under present regulations, to petty officers, such as constables, justices, deputy sheriffs, etc. The claim is made and substantiated, that many "rings" of officials exist in this state, wherein the arrest, conviction and sentence of persons accused of petty misdemeanors are regularly put up jobs, in which chronic old bummers and suspected crooks are the prey for these rings, and nice fees accrue from their arrests and subsequent conveyance to distant prisons."

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

Good Advice.

Buffalo Express, (Rep.): General Garfield had best make his Cabinet to suit himself. If the people had wanted it made to suit somebody else they would have elected that somebody President.

A Compliment to Sunset.

Philadelphia Press, (Rep.): Sunset Cox is the popular hero of the hour. If Mr. Cox could only succeed in having a non-partisan apportionment bill passed at this session he would be entitled to claim most of the honors of his party in this Congress.

No Rest for the Wicked.

Philadelphia Record, (Ind.): As soon as political agitation cools off sentimental agitation begins to boil and bubble. The Prohibitionists are taking advantage of the present, millennial tendency of parties to air their theories and stir up sumptuary strifes. There is no rest for the wicked.

Patience and Persuasion.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.): Sorrows are accumulating on Uncle Eads' head. He finds that the wily Spanish diplomats have so drawn up the contract for his duplex aerial canal and railroad that without word or warning the pesky government can swoop down and gobble the whole affair. But Uncle Eads has patience and persuasion, and there's no telling what he may not get out of the Mexicans before he's done with them.

Not To Be Laid Up Against Him.

Indianapolis Journal, (Rep.): Vice-President Wheeler is reported as saying that he will retire from the obscurity of the Vice-Presidency to private life with considerable satisfaction, and that he should strive to be as exemplary and good a citizen as possible after the 4th of March, 1881. Vice-President Wheeler is an honest man, and we believe he means what he says. The fact that he has filled the office of Vice-President ought not to be laid up against him if he shows a disposition to reform.

When Garfield Will Start.

Cleveland Herald, (Rep.): Despite the statements that have been made here and there as to his intended movements, we have authority for stating that General Garfield has not as yet come to any conclusion as to when he will go to Washington, what route he will follow, or who will accompany him upon the trip. If certain matters under consideration can be arranged without his going to the capital he will remain in the comparative quiet of his country home as long as possible, or near to the 1st of March, but if it becomes necessary will go a few days earlier than that. Several routes have been suggested, and he has come to no conclusion on that point, but will probably take the most direct road via Pittsburg and the Pennsylvania line.

Rotten Borough States.

New York Herald, (Ind.): Before the enterprising Territories like New Mexico and Dakota are admitted into the membership of the Union it would be well to consider the case of Nevada, which, some years ago, because of a real or supposed political necessity, was elevated to the dignity of Statehood. Her population, although she has been seventeen years a State, is only sixty-two thousand, and instead of fulfilling the brilliant career predicted for her her progress is so slow that, as compared with the other portions of the nation, she is becoming less and less entitled to the position she holds in the Union. The great mistake made in her case was that we admitted a mining camp and not a State. Now the camp has broken up, and we have a State with scarcely a single attribute of a State except its official machinery in Congress. Surely the experiment should not be repeated.

A Good Opening for Young Men.

New York Sun, (Ind.): Young men who are ambitious to acquire distinction in the public service of their State and their country could hardly ask for a more promising opportunity than now offers itself in reorganizing and popularizing the Democratic party.

The freedom of the press; absolute equality before the law; no privileged classes; no fixed tenure in the great multitude of executive offices; economy in all public expenditures; but little government of any kind, and that the purest and best; these are the doctrines which in themselves are calculated to inspire eloquence and enthusiasm.

Most of the professional and business young men who have recently come upon the stage of active business life have unreflectingly joined the Republican party because that was preeminently the patriotic party during the war. But they forgot that since the war the Republican party has grown fat and corrupt on the spoils of office; that it now staggers under the demoralizing influence of long and continuous possession of power; and that it has shifted the grounds on which it rests from high principle to low expediency.

The best opening for a young man to render real service to his country and at the same time to gratify a lofty personal ambition now lies in the Regenerated Free and Equal Democratic Party!

Mr. Bartlett, in accordance with the will of the Duchess of St. Albans, will assume the name of Burdett-Coutts before his own surname. He and his wife left for the seat of Admiral Gordon, in Kent.

Hudson Gazette: J. H. Dwyer, of this village, had an invoice of groceries ruined by the great Toledo freshet. J. H. Dayton, of Rollin, fears that a consignment of dried peaches and poultry, which he made a day or so before the flood, has gone the same way. It is probable the peaches are pretty badly soaked—the poultry may have escaped, if it was of the web-foot sort.

BENEFITS ARISING FROM STOCK SALES.

EDITOR HERALD:

In your issue of February 17, I noticed an article on monthly stock sales by A. H. I beg to say I fully endorse such an enterprise, and it is my candid opinion there is not a farmer who will look at it with unbiased mind, but will see the great benefits derived from such an undertaking. For instance, a farmer has a surplus of coarse fodder for which he can obtain little or no sale; he is in want of stock to feed it to; to obtain such he is compelled to be from his business for days and travel scores of miles and then return without a single head. In the spring the fodder which ought to have been fed out is either thrown upon the manure pile or otherwise wantonly disposed of. No wonder our paper mills can get good bright straw for a song. On the other hand, another party is over-stocked and short of fodder. He tells his neighbors that he must get rid of some of his live stock. Ten to one that is the last thought about it. He is compelled to hold them; they are half starved through the winter, and then they come out spring poor and stunted in growth, and consequently he cannot realize within 25 and often 50 per cent. of what he could have sold for a few months previous, if there had been such an enterprise as a periodical live stock sale. Then again, farmers will realize better prices, for shippers of live stock, not only of this section but from other points will attend, thereby causing a competition which is certainly the spirit of trade in all branches of business. Then again, when farmers and others meet at such a place there is likely to be many sales and transactions independent of the general stock sales. It will not only benefit the farming community but the town in which such stock sale is held, as it will induce many to visit such town who would not think of coming under other circumstances, and but few such would think of leaving without visiting the several merchants and leaving a portion of their small change behind. Now if yourself and fellow townsmen would interview your farming friends, I flatter myself you would not find one dissenting voice in favor of the enterprise of a periodical or monthly stock sale. H. Adrian Press: At Clark's Crossing in this city, Wednesday morning, the trackmen found a rail of which about four feet had been broken off and literally pulverized, it having been ground up into no less than forty-two pieces. The trackmen say it was the worst smashed rail they ever saw. Strangely enough, no accident was the result of the break, not a car having left the track.

Deerfield Record: From present prospects and talk, there will be three or four brick blocks erected in this village the coming summer. Deerfield has just got the building fever, and we hope she will have a severe attack of it.

Hudson Post: E. Ames says he sawed the first log that was ever sawed by a saw mill on Bean creek, in the Kidder mill, two miles north of town, about forty-seven years ago. It was a white ash log, and the first board was pawned for liquor.

S. W. TEMPLE has now in operation at his planing mill an excellent dry-kiln, which is warmed by exhaust steam. Steam is the best kind of heat for drying purposes, and by his present arrangement, it is a very economical plan, as the only expense consists in putting in the steam pipes.

THE Northwestern Mutual Life Ins. Co. has issued a neat circular showing the business transacted by that company during 1880. It is a most creditable exhibit. A person who insures in this sterling company knows that when he pays his money he is positively insured. Wm. DeMott is the agent for this company at Tecumseh.

WILLIS MERRITT and Wes. Bordine, while in attendance at the session of the Grand Lodge of the K. of H. in Kalamazoo, were initiated into a new order, the Oriental Order of Humility. The members of this order in Southern Michigan are quite few, but it is probable that lodges will be instituted in several places in this section. The name is quite suggestive and bespeaks for the order many cardinal virtues.

YESTERDAY morning the passenger train going south halted at Chicago street. People wondered what the matter was. Upon inquiry we found that it was the beginning of a new departure. All passenger trains hereafter will halt at Chicago street crossing to let passengers on and off. The railroad company found that they would soon be compelled to keep a flagman at this point and they concluded to halt the trains. A very wise decision. It will both save the company expense and be a great accommodation to the people of Tecumseh.

THE condition of the highway between Dewey's and Tom Boyd's farms west of the village is not only a disgrace to the township, but if allowed to continue, it will be a serious injury to the business interests of the village. We are informed by a resident of Springville that several Cambridge families went to Adrian last Saturday to do their trading, who have been in the habit of coming to Tecumseh, because they did not care to risk their horses necks by driving them through that pond of water. Some action should be taken at the coming town meeting by which this nuisance may be speedily abated.

WE understand that T. J. Navin and Willis Merritt are about to form a partnership and open a law office here. The young men named are bright, energetic, and good lawyers, and will undoubtedly achieve success.—Adrian Times.

We are informed by Mr. Merritt that his law office here in Bidwell's block will be continued by the firm and remain under his personal supervision in the future as in the past. That their office in the city of Adrian will be in the front rooms over Park's dry goods store, next east of Waldby & Clay's bank, and now occupied as a law office by Circuit Court Commissioner Chas. L. Hall. The new firm will be Merritt & Navin. Their office rooms in Adrian are now undergoing extensive repairing, and will be occupied by them the 28th of this month.

Thanks.

We express through the HERALD our thanks to our many friends inside and outside of our church, for the very liberal donation made to us last Thursday, February 17, 1881. This was a rousing old-fashioned donation, and not a pay-ation. Thanks to all. Call again.

R. S. PARDINGTON & FAMILY.

Tecumseh, February 21, 1881.

A SURPRISE PARTY,

At Uncle John Rector's, Monday Afternoon, February 21, 1881.

For some weeks past there have been whisperings among the children and friends of Uncle John Rector and wife, that their fortieth anniversary occurred on the 21st inst., and as the old people themselves had not mentioned the fact, or apparently thought of it, they conceived the idea of getting up a surprise for the occasion. In order to carry out the plan proposed, H. Raymond and wife invited them to take dinner at their house that day to meet some friends from Ridgeway, requesting them particularly to come early. That plan succeeded without giving the least suspicion; and at half past nine they were on hand. The time passed very pleasantly in telling stories, calling up reminiscences of the past, of early times, etc., until invited out to dinner. Just as dinner was finished, while still sitting at the table, the door-bell rang and the summons came that Mr. Spencer and wife from Raisin had come to visit them, and they were sent for. Uncle John and his wife's sister (Mrs. Bailey) started directly for home, Mrs. R. preferring to ride with the messenger, as she had an errand at the store, and he was going that way home. As soon as they were out of sight, H. R. and wife slipped into the carriage with the Ridgeway people and were at Uncle J.'s soon enough to see his consternation and surprise at finding his house filled to overflowing with people, and a large table loaded with the richest provisions. Among the guests were friends from Delta, Ohio, where they spent the first years of their married life, and many old friends from Raisin and Palmyra. As he had only left the house three hours before, he could not see how the people all got there with all those things without his seeing or knowing anything about it, or what it was all for, until told that it was gotten up by his children to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of his marriage, February 21, 1841. Mrs. Rector soon came in, as much astonished as he. Such a scene of hand-shaking, greeting, and laughing, it is impossible to describe, for nearly one hundred old neighbors and friends were all laughing and talking at once. It was quite an hour before the rooms became quiet enough to enable Rev. Mr. Grandy to present to Mr. and Mrs. Rector a handsome silver tea set, a present from their children, who are all now married and settled in the vicinity of their home, in a very happy speech nearly as follows:

"Just forty years ago to-day our dear friends here embarked together on the voyage of life, and I know not but their former relations to each other have been as pleasant and harmonious as it falls to the lot of mortals to enjoy; but it has been hinted of late that there was somewhat of an alienation of feeling springing up between them, which we see manifested to-day, in their not returning to their home together, and, in fact, still sitting apart at this joyous gathering. The principal cause of this estrangement, I am told, is that Mrs. Rector persistently refuses to "bang" her hair, and also there are some minor matters, such as refusing to share with her husband the poultry and dairy product, constantly insisting that as he had a present last Christmas of two Guinea hens it was presumption in him even to ask or expect of her any share in what she considers her rightful property, even if he does feed the chickens and milk the cows. But it is hoped that this valuable present which we now see, and which was intended by the donors to be mutually enjoyed by them, will have a tendency to harmonize all discords, (here Mrs. Rector took a seat by her husband, amid great applause) to cement more firmly than ever their love for each other, and be a constant reminder of the love and affection their children ever cherish for them. And I am sure that however our friend here may have prided himself on his foresight and smartness heretofore, he will certainly give his children credit for once at least for outdoing him in smartness, by assembling so large a company in his own house, without his having the least suspicion of what was going on."

Here Uncle John replies: "I give it up." Then after referring to the circumstances that first brought this couple together, which were very amusing, (a number of those present being personally acquainted with the facts) and the reason of his selecting this one, of the three unmarried sisters for his companion, and of the little squalls and spanking breezes of their earlier voyage, he closed by wishing them fair winds and peaceful seas while nearing the "other shore," and a safe and joyful entrance into the Haven of Eternal Rest. He closed with a short prayer of thanks. After which the refreshments were passed and all were bountifully fed. Then after congratulations and a season of chatting, the company dispersed, all declaring this the fortieth anniversary of Uncle John and wife's married life to be one of the events long to be remembered.

J. A. MUNGER has a new ad. in this week's issue.

SMITH AND GETTY.

Solomon Smith, an old English farmer in Ridgeway, has had considerable trouble of late resulting from his eccentricities. Mr. Smith is a wealthy old bachelor, and up to a few years since managed a large farm in copartnership with his brother.—Johnny Bull's stubborness was the controlling genius of their minds and brought many dire afflictions upon them.

One of their mottoes was not to sell until they received their own price.—If a buyer would offer them their own price for their produce they would sell, if not they wouldn't. Some years ago, it is reported, they held their wheat for five years before they would sell it. They put it in stacks and would not even thresh it, but through their obstinacy allowed some of it to grow in the stack and some of it to be burnt up, rather than to sell it for a lower market than they wanted. After the same manner they would fatten up their stock for the market, but if they did not obtain their price they would refuse to sell, and turn their stock out in the fields, not feeding them anything. Thus allowing them to run down and many to perish through utter starvation.

Solomon's brother died a few years since, and he retained the farm, and it seems his old habits. This year he was disappointed in the market for his stock, whereupon he immediately turned them out to find sustenance for themselves and to waste their accumulated flesh.

Last week William J. Getty, from the Northern part of the State, noticed the famished carcasses of a number of Smith's stock lying about the fields, and that the remaining live ones would soon perish through want of shelter and food. Getty, on the 10th inst., told Smith that he was going to enter a complaint against him for cruelty to animals. A day or so after Getty went to Adrian and notified the authorities of Smith's abuse, and they told him to make out a complaint before an Adrian Justice, but he said he would make it out before a Justice in Ridgeway, but for some reason did not. However on the 12th inst., he again visited Smith and told him that he had papers from Adrian authorities for his arrest for cruelty to animals, but for a consideration of $25 he would drop the proceedings. Smith refused this offer but agreed to give Getty $20, which he did, to drop the proceedings.

After Getty's departure it appeared to Smith that he might have been duped by misplaced confidence, so he sent his nephew, Thomas Smith, who witnessed the transaction, to Adrian to investigate. The nephew found that his uncle's suspicions were correct, and immediately had a warrant issued for Getty's arrest for obtaining money under false pretenses.

The warrant was placed in officer Merritt's hands, of this place, who overhauled Getty in Lansing, and lodged him in the county jail last Friday afternoon. He waived his examination and was held to appear for trial in the Circuit yesterday. He then entered complaint against Smith who will have an examination to-morrow.

It is authentically reported that eight Clinton girls can make more noise and produce more confusion on a train of cars than a whole menagerie.—Tecumseh Herald.

Of course it would be impossible to get eight Tecumseh girls all on one train of cars at one time, owing to their mammoth feet, but if that number could be placed within a radius of twenty feet, they would double discount forty Clinton girls on a big racket.—Clinton News.

Quite true neighbor, if it was not for their good understanding and sense, such might be the case; but through the kindness of the fates it's not.

OBITUARY.

Salmon L. Haight departed this life on Thursday, February 10, 1881. He was born February 22, 1805, in Lewis county, N. Y. He was married in 1826, came to Michigan in 1833 and settled in the township of Saline. For a long number of years he was a prominent man in that section of Washtenaw county. He filled the office of Supervisor for thirteen years. Twice he was a member of the Michigan Legislature, in 1849 and 1853. He was nominated for the State Senate in 1850, and only failed of an election because his party was not in the ascendency that year at the polls. His record during those years was not only that of loyalty to his party, but one of active interest in the welfare of the commonwealth. He was identified with every movement for the building up of the young State. Father Haight was a lover of humanity, and to the day of his death, took a lively interest in the welfare of his fellow men. He was a strong anti-slavery man, and none rejoiced more than he when the oppressed were set at liberty. He became a christian in early life, united with the Methodist Episcopal church and remained a consistent member till the day of his death. He had filled the offices of class leader, steward and trustee of the church. Three weeks before his death (the last time he attended church) he gave a very cheerful religious testimony and exhorted the members of the church to be faithful and advised all present to be on the Lord's side. He was universally beloved, not only by the church of which he was an honored member, but by the whole community. His funeral services on Sabbath, February 13, 1881, at 2 P.M., were held in the M. E. church and were largely attended. The audience room and galleries were filled to their utmost capacity. Pastor R. S. Pardington delivered a very appropriate address from Galatians, 1st chap. 24th verse.

The pulpit was draped, together with the family pew. Kind hands had arranged some very beautiful floral tributes. A cross made of autumn leaves stood on the table in the chancel. On a stand was an evergreen cross with white flowers. The choir sang appropriate selections. The whole service was deeply impressive and will long be remembered.

The family desire to extend their thanks to all the friends who ministered to them in their affliction, and also sought to make the services as attractive as possible. The body was deposited in the vault at Clinton to remain for a few weeks before final interment.

"Servant of God, well done—
Thy glorious warfare past
The battle fought, the victory won
And thou art crowned at last."

J. N. Bick, of Toledo, Ohio, says:—My father, before wearing the "Only Lung Pad," could not sleep nights on account of his violent coughing, since wearing it he has slept soundly every night.—See Adv.

Causes of Consumption.

Dr. Rollin R. Gregg, of Buffalo, New York, is confident that he has solved the mystery of consumption. Regular physicians will be apt to say that he has mistaken a condition for a cause; nevertheless we are inclined to think that good may come from the emphasis he lays upon that condition, since it seems calculated to work a beneficial change in the customary treatment of the disease.

Dr. Gregg argues that as the loss of albumen from the blood through the mucous membrane of the kidneys in Bright's disease, rapidly and fatally depletes the system, much more must the more rapid loss of albumen through the mucous membranes of the lungs be serious in all its stages and speedily fatal in its results, if proper measures are not taken to stop such waste before fatal conditions have arisen. The expectorations of consumptives, and all their other catarrhal or mucuous discharges from whatever organ, are mostly albumen and a direct loss of so much of this constituent from the blood. It is this wastage which causes the great emaciation characteristic of consumption, and not, he thinks, any failure of the system to assimilate food. And this loss of albumen does mischief not only in robbing the muscles of their proper nutrition, but also, in throwing the constituents of the blood into disproportion. The loss of one ounce of albumen destroys nearly a pound of blood for all purpose of healthy nutrition, and leaves in the blood a relative excess of 5½ ounces of water, 7 ounces of blood corpuscles, 9 grains of fatty matter, 15 grains fibrin, and 41 grains of salts. These elements in excess act as foreign matters in the blood, and disturb the entire economy of the system. Night sweats and dropsy are the result of the excess of water. The blood corpuscles left in excess are decolorized by the watery blood, and are deposited in the capillaries or smallest blood vessels, where they shrivel and become tuberculous corpuscles, so called; the fatty matters in excess cause the fatty livers and other fatty degenerations attending the disease; the excess of fibrin causes the adhesion of the pleura to the inner surface of the ribs, the heart, or to each other, often among the most serious of the complications of consumption; and, finally, the excess of salts causes calculi, enlargement of the joints, ossifications, and similar morbid developments.

In such cases of consumption as are characterized in their earlier stages by an absence of profuse expectoration, Dr. Gregg would attribute the beginning of the disease to a loss of albumen through some other organ or organs, the shriveled blood corpuscles lodging in the lungs, starting tubercles there and setting up a dry cough, with the resultant irritation of the mucous membrane and outpouring of mucuos. From this point of view, there is but one source of hope for the consumptive in any stage of the disease, and that is through the healing of the mucous membranes and the stopping of the waste of albumen. By this means in the earlier stages of the disease—with all who have not inherited the most feeble constitutions—there is much hope from judicious treatment.

Whatever may be the primary cause of consumption, it is pretty evident that the mucous discharge which attends the disease and finds relief in expectoration is to be repressed rather than encouraged; and to do this must radically change the usual treatment of the disease, at its early stages.

Abusing Newspapers.

Some people think that they are very smart when they abuse a newspaper or an editor. They forget that many papers have largely profited by becoming the objects of these attacks, and that some editors have thriven on being assaulted. Aside from this consideration, it should be remembered that an editor is often obliged to occupy a very delicate position. His sense of right will sometimes cause him to attack or defend a man, a business, a class or a cause at a risk of making enemies of others, only to find those in whose interests he had labored display ingratitude. Of course no level-headed editor expects to find much gratitude or charity. He must generally be content with the approval of his own conscience, and pursue the course he believes to be right, regardless of either frowns or smiles, supported by his conscious rectitude. It will all come right in the end. It is hard to be misunderstood, and to find those to whose support you have earned a right, desert you to meet alone the attacks of those whom you have incensed in pursuing the course you were convinced was right, but you will thereby learn a lesson of self-reliance, and form a habit of judging entirely for yourself, that will be invaluable. You will be able to tell the truth, however distasteful, and refuse to utter a falsehood, no matter how much pleasanter it may promise to make things go.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

Hens That Steal Their Nests.

All wild birds deposit their eggs in some concealed place. According to their habits they select a place for their nest in a hollow tree, in a thicket of bushes, a clump of grass or amid the dense foliage of trees and bushes. Birds that build their nests on the ground approach them cautiously, and leave them so that they will not attract attention. Fowls that still retain some of their old wild habits, as the guinea-hen and peafowls, choose places for building nests where they are not likely to be disturbed. The pheasant, which is but partly domesticated, will not lay or set on eggs when kept in confinement. The guinea hen and pea-fowl will rarely, if ever, set on eggs in an artificial nest placed in a building. Before they commence to lay they may be seen searching for some secluded spot in which to deposit their eggs.

Hens, when allowed to roam at large as they do in warm countries, where they pick up most of their food in the woods, select places for nests in the same way wild birds do. If the object is to procure eggs for the table or for the market, it is well to have them deposited in nests that are conspicuous and easy to approach, as the sooner they are gathered the better their condition will be. If, on the other hand, chickens are desired, then the hen should be allowed to lay eggs in a nest the location of which is known only to herself. She should also be allowed to sit on them without being disturbed, and to bring forth her brood of chickens in good time, as she will ordinarily do. Common observation shows that hens are more successful in rearing large flocks of fine chicks that are permitted to "steal their nests" and to remain in quiet possession of them.

A "stolen nest" is rarely in a good place for obtaining the eggs, but is almost invariably in a good place for hatching them. It is ordinarily near the ground in the side of a mow or stack of hay, where there is little danger of being disturbed or of being visited by other hens for the purpose of depositing eggs. Since poultry-raising has been elevated to the rank of a science and many appliances have been introduced for hatching eggs and rearing chickens, the increase of fowls has been slow and very uncertain. Many poultry fanciers have recommended removing the eggs from nests as soon as they were laid, storing them in a cool place, and returning them to the nest a few days after the hen showed an inclination to set. Some have advised allowing several hens to set on nests arranged in rows, and an examination of he eggs at stated times.

It often happens, howeve,r that some superannuated biddy that has never enjoyed the advantages of the information contained in modern poultry books and periodicals, "steals her nest" and hatches and raises more chickens than all the hens that were privileged to occupy nests constructed on philosophical principles, and whose eggs were tested every few days by the aid of delicate apparatus. The knowledge an experienced hen has of her own particular business is profound. It is fortunate for persons who delight in eating fine fowls that she is not conversant with the poultry literature of her day and generation. If she was, the noble race of hens might become extinct in a few years. Then there would be no cocks to crow in the morn, no Easter eggs, no omelets, no chicken pot-pie except the sort served up in boarding-houses, and generally made of scraps of beefsteak and the leavings of a roast of veal.

Eggs left in nests where they are laid generally retain their vitality better than if kept elsewhere. The periodic visits of the hen apparently exerts a stimulating influence in preserving the embryo in a vigorous state. There is no advantage in examining the eggs under a setting hen, except to remove such as are broken, and it has often been observed that there are no broken eggs in a "stolen nest." Such a nest is not visited by any strange hens. The regular occupant is never frightened from it, while it is generally so constructed that it is easy to approach and leave the eggs without breaking them. "Stealing nests" is a variety of theft that deserves to be encouraged. To this end there should be a goodly number of holes in the foundation of barns, and various boxes accidentally dropped within easy reach of the poultry house.

How to Get Rich.

The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and as good old "Deacon Snyder," says, "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have 'struck it rich.' Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and all simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs fifty cents a bottle. Sold by C. Farm Life.

One Sunday evening the Rev. Washington Gladden had a talk with the boys of Springfield, Mass. By way of preparation he sent out a circular to 100 of the most conspicuous business men, inquiring about their homes during the first years of their lives. He received 88 answers, and of these 74 replied that they had had the training of farm life. There could not be a more hopeful indication of the prosperity of the country than an assurance that 74 out of 88 boys in a community were training for the farm life. It is a hard life but it is an independent life, and is favorable to religious growth and a cultivation of the Christian graces. Corporations fail, manufacturing becomes dull, store-keepers cease to do business, and the hum of the factory is stilled; stocks go down and banking houses close; but the earth yields its fruit to the frugal and industrious laborer. There is a narrow tendency manifested by those engaged in professional life to underrate the importance of life on a farm; it is considered a half alive and dead sort of existence; but what can be leader than the impecunious hard worked clerkships in the city, with exacting duties and little or no time for leisure or recreation? The hope of the country, next to religion, lies in its small farms, and consequently in bringing up the rising generation to work the farm. Bring up your children with just ideas of the independence, the resources, the utility of life on the farm. Farm life means hard work, but there is always time for rest and recreation, such as is afforded by no other occupation.

How to Cut Seed Potatoes.

C. D. F. condemns the cutting of a single eye, after making one trial, and that, by his own showing, under very unfavorable circumstances. The drouth which continued throughout May, was a very exceptional one, and under such a condition there could be no true test. Seeds of all kinds, whether sown in field or garden, just before it began failed to germinate. The ground, especially heavy soils, was so hard it could not be plowed until the drouth ended with copious rains, and the seeds sown or planted after such plowing yielded good returns. While I think one eye to a hill too scanty an allowance, still I have no doubt that if C. D. F. will repeat the trial he will be better if not fully satisfied. I have thoroughly tested planting potatoes in whole, halves, quarters and eighths, and in one two and three eyes, and my conclusion is that cut to a single eye on a piece and two pieces in a hill is the best economy for the most profit. I prefer planting in drills 3 or 3½ feet apart, dropping the pieces together every 10 or 12 inches. It is true that in this way of planting there are not as many potatoes, but what there are grow to a good size for the table and will yield more bushels to the acre than more seeding will give. F. H. D. says that he cut some pieces "as small as grains of corn." When potatoes have been so very scarce that it was necessary to practice the most rigid economy, I have planted the parings saved from the potatoes prepared for the table with satisfactory results. As to the manner of cutting, I prefer what is called the Orange Judd style. This style consists in cutting in single eyes lengthwise, preserving on each piece all that can be spared to it, from the point of incision to the base or butt of the potato.

It might be asked why is it not better to cut two eyes on each piece, since two eyes are planted, than one eye on each piece and plant two pieces. I answer, because I can cut them better, and much more satisfactorilly, and another reason is that in planting them, you take out of the basket eyes from different parts of the same potato, or, what is better yet an eye each from two potatoes. J. L. Perkins tells us that potatoes deteriorate, a fact of which I suppose every farmer is aware, and I have no doubt it is due in a great measure to planting whole potatoes, which is a kind of inbreeding. Every one does not understand that sex exists as certainly in the vegetable as in the animal kingdom; hence the necessity of having the two in the potato field in at least a neighborly relation, not of the same but different potatoes. Some farmers cut off the top or seed end, but this should not be done; every eye should be planted. It is said, by those who claim to know, that the eyes near the base are the male, and those near the upper part the female, the number on each being in the right proportion. If this be so, it is clear that every eye should be planted. With corn, none but perfectly filled ears should be used for seed, and from these the tip and butt kernels should not be rejected, as is the practice with some farmers, but every kernel planted. Of course you will get potatoes if you reject the tip end, and so you will get corn if you reject the tip kernels, but you will not get as large an average of well-filled ears, the tip kernels being as necessary to this end, as the middle ones are to the body of the ear.—Agricultural Paper

The Butter Bird.

Humboldt, in his "Travels in South America," records a visit to Caripe, where is the cavern of the Guacharo bird; and our knowledge of this wonder is derived from his most interesting narrative. Among the natives in the country around, this cavern is celebrated for its great size, for the mysterious birds which haunt its inmost recesses, for the river which flows from it, and for the superstitious belief that in its gloomy depths is the abode of the spirits of their departed ancestors. The name which it bears signifies "the mine of fat," because from the young of the birds which inhabit it an immense quantity of fat is annually obtained. These birds are about the size of our common fowl, with wings which expand to three feet and a half. All day long they dwell in the cavern, and, like our owls, only come forth at night. They subsist entirely on fruits, and have very powerful beaks, which are necessary to crack the tough nuts and reeds which form part of their food.

The approach to the cavern where they are found is along the bed of a river, in a valley celebrated for its beauty and the salubrity of its climate. The immediate entrance is surrounded by the most gorgeous tropical vegetation. The hill, into the depths of which it penetrates for upwards of half a mile, is clothed with trees of immense height. The mouth is a splendid arch upwards of seventy feet high; the river which flows from it has a fringe of vegetation along its banks, which gradually diminishes as the gloom increases.

The cave is so straight that the traveler can enter for some distance without being obliged to light his torch. As he proceeds over the somewhat rough ground which forms the bed of the river, he begins to hear from afar the hoarse cries of the Guacharo birds; and when he has arrived at the dark parts of the cavern the noise is perfectly terrific; thousands of the birds, uttering their piercing cries simultaneously. These screams re-echo from the surrounding walls, and when it is rememembered that they take place in pitchy darkness, it will be easy to understand the superstitious terrors which the Indians associate with the spot. At half a mile from the entrance the river forms a cascade, and beyond this the cavern slightly changes in direction. Nothing will persuade the Indians to advance further than this spot.

Midsummer is the harvest time for the fat. The Indians enter the cave armed with long poles. The nests are attached to holes in the roof about sixty feet above their heads. They break these with the poles, and the young birds fall down and are instantly killed. Underneath their bodies is a layer of fat, which is cut off, and is the object sought. At the mouth of the cavern huts are erected with palm-leaves, and there, in pots of clay, the natives melt the fat which has been collected.

This is known as the butter of the Guacharo; it is so pure that it may be kept for upwards of a year without becoming rancid. At the convent of Caripe no other oil is ever used in the kitchen of the monks.

There is no vice which mankind carries to such wild extremes as that of avarice.—[Swift.

DON'T PUT ALL YOUR EGGS IN ONE BASKET.

BY F. V. HORTON.

Once upon a time, not many years ago, a good frugal dame that was in the habit of doing the most of the family marketing, one bright but frosty morning was busily engaged in counting her eggs for market, while her leige lord was preparing old Dobbin to take her and her eggs to the nearest city.

Now this good old lady had an honest and natural pride in trying to make as good a show as possible, and as her eggs were her peculiar pride, she thought they would make a nicer showing by putting them all in one basket. Having finished her task she stood gazing with pride and admiration on her well filled basket, and mentally calculating her returns when her leige lord made his appearance, announcing all in readiness.

Casting his eye upon the rather top heavy basket, he exclaimed: "Why, Julia, thee ought not to put all thy eggs in one basket, they might tip over and thee would lose a good many."

"Now, John, thee knows that when I went to market the last time I put my eggs in three baskets and I lost some from the two small baskets, while there were none broken in this basket."

Of course there was nothing more to be said, and the eggs were deposited in the rear end of the cutter, and old Dobbin was soon jogging along toward the city. Now these honest farmer people had a large and highly prized watch dog that was in the habit of often going to market with his mistress, and was usually allowed a place in the conveyance. But upon this particular occasion watch was shut in the house and refused the aforesaid honor. Chafing in his confinement, he finally espied a window that had been opened for ventilation, and forgotten, he quickly improved his opportunity of escape, and with rapid speed was on his way to join his mistress. Now Dobbin was jogging along at a not over rapid rate, the dame at the time mentally calculating how nice she would look in the new fixings she was to purchase from the proceeds of her eggs, when all at once with a joyous bound Watch jumped into the hind end of the sleigh, alighting plumb in the middle of the basket. Dobbin feeling the jar and hearing a musical noise, started with a bound, bringing dog, basket, eggs and all out at the back end in the middle of the hard and icy road. Well, the scene can be better imagined than described. But the good dame soon came to a realizing sense that it would have been better to have put her eggs in more than one basket.

Now of all men in this world the Yankee farmer is the most prone to run to extremes in his occupation. The price of his products vary according to the demand and the amount of each product raised. One year the price of wheat is very high, the demand being in excess of the supply. Then a great majority of the farmers that have any show for raising wheat turn all their attention to wheat expecting thereby to make their fortune at once. And when the crop comes to be harvested it is found that the supply is far in excess of the demand. Prices are down, the crop hasn't paid well and the farmer is discouraged. Looks around to see what will pay. Finds perhaps that pork and beef are well up. Immediately turns his attention to hogs and cattle, almost entirely discarding wheat, and running directly into another extreme, finding that by the time that his beef and pork are ready for the market, that the price of these products are down, the supply being too great for the demand, while perhaps the supply of wheat, which has been materially neglected, is deficient and the price ruling high. He immediately gets rid of the most of his cattle and hogs and turns his attention to wheat again; thus jumping from one thing to another, and all the time being a little too late; in fact thus putting all his eggs in one basket. Now is this the case with other occupations or professions? Does the doctor look entirely to one class of diseases for his patients, expecting to make his living entirely by the treatment of one disease alone. Not by any means. He studies hard to master his profession in the treatment of all classes of disease; if he did not he might very soon find himself without any patients, in fact no eggs in any basket. How is it with the lawyer—does he depend entirely upon one class of law cases for the practice of his profession? Not by any means. He distributes his eggs in a number of baskets and takes in all classes of clients (and usually takes them in to their sorrow.) But a great many farmers only see one thing at a time, and that thing happens always to be the thing that brings the largest price at the time. Now in this day and age of the world, when the doors of almost all of the old countries are opening to us and asking us to supply them with food from the over production of our soil, while they are failing more and more each year to produce a sufficiency for the wants of their increasing population, it becomes the interest of our farmers to stop entirely trying to put all their eggs in one basket. The nations of the Old World will in a short time be under the necessity of taking a large portion of our surplus productions of all kinds. Wheat, beef, pork or bacon are being called for more and more each year. Also large quantities of potatoes and fruits have recently been shipped to foreign countries with a good profit to the shipper.

Now let the American farmer learn a lesson from past experience and instead of entirely running to one thing raise some of all kinds; not because one kind of produce happens to be low and some other high, discard the one and run entirely to the other, for if you do, ten chances to one if in the end you don't find that you have missed the figure badly, and put altogether too many eggs in one basket.

A Word for the Physicians.

Equally to the credit of the medical profession for learning, skill, and faithfulness, and of the common sense of the general public, there are comparatively few cases brought against physicians for malpractice. It has become common enough to sue towns upon speculation, but the doctors have not often been made the victims of ignorance or of cupidity in suits at law. The popular mind places great confidence, and rightly, in the ability and the honor of the profession. In the direct extremity we appeal to them to save the life we value equally with our own. All experience proves that as a class, the physicians are humane, and alert to do good with or without the prospects of pecuniary remuneration. It is not always in their power to rescue the sick or wounded, but the presumption always is that they do their best. This character, and it is the true one, of the physician as a member of his profession, is sometimes assailed. It is sometimes charged that he neither knew what he ought to do in a particular case, nor cared for the result of his inattention or carelessness. So heinous a charge should only be considered when proffered by an intelligent person unmistakably pursuing, in the cause of private or public justice, the path of investigation. He who wantonly, or maliciously, or through spite, or for corrupt ends, assails the integrity of the physician, does a wrong to society at once criminal and almost incalculably deleterious, and is to be reckoned in the same category as he who should seek to prejudice the minds of men against the government earnestly and effectively acting for their highes welfare.—Baltimore American.

Silk from the Sea.

The sea yields many precious things—coral, amber and pearls—but it is not generally known that in some parts of the Mediterranean a species of mussel is found of which the shells contain one of the most beautiful textile materials known. These shells are about seven inches long and three inches broad, and each of them contains a hank or byssus of the fiber, weighing half a drachm, and at first it presents nothing particular to the eye, being solid with mud and the remains of marine plants. But when washed and combed the fibers are seen to be extremely lustrous, glistening in the sunshine in shades varying from a golden yellow to a olive brown. Spun and woven in the ordinary manner, stockings, gloves, neckties and similar articles can be manufactured from them, and they are likewise suited for making the finest lace. At present the production of these fibers hardly exceeds 200 kilogrammes (3 cwt. 3 qrs.) a year. Specimens of these curious mussels and their finished products were exhibited at the great Paris Exhibition, but they appear to have been overlooked.

Beauty of Person.—Beauty of person may at first engage admiration, in as far as it indicates beauty of soul; but can never insure the continuance of that admiration which its blaze has attracted. But beauty of soul can supply every deficiency, and can act independently of every other aid. But when beauty of mind and beauty of person are united, when the accents of kindness and persuasion proceed from those lips which rival the vermillion bloom; when the rays of benevolence lighten the aspect which shines also with the beams of beauty; when the tear of compassion glistens in those eyes which sparkle at the same time with the diamond's lustre; when acts of condescension and humanity employ those hands which emulate "the softness of the dove's down, and and the hue of the winter's snow;" when a soul so beauteous is invested in a form so passing fair, every eye must admire, every mind must esteem, every heart must love. Were the cares of females steadily applied to the acquisition of these excellencies combined, how resistless would be their sway! How pure and exalted the emotions which they would inspire!

There is nothing like exactness. An officer having to proceed on duty from one station to another, in making out his claim for traveling expenses put down the item, "Porter, 6d;" an item struck out by the War Office. Not being inclined to be defrauded of his sixpence, the officer informed the authorities that the porter had conveyed his baggage from one station to another, and that had he not employed him he must have taken a cab, which would have cost eighteenpence. In reply came an official notification that his claim would be allowed, but instructing him that he ought to have used the term "porterage" instead of "porter." He was determined, however, to have the last word, and wrote back that he was unable to find any precedent for using the word "porterage," but for the future would do so; and at the same time requested to know if he was to use the term "cabbage" when he meant "cab."

A clergyman asked his Sunday school: "With what remarkable weapon did Samson at one time slay a number of Philistines? For a while there was no answer; and the clergyman, to assist the children a little, commenced tapping his jaw with the tip of his finger, at the same time saying, "What's this? What's this?" Quick as thought, a little fellow innocently replied; "The jawbone of an ass, sir."

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

THE sugar tariff is to be considered at an early day by the Ways and Means Committee, and the sugar men, who have been in Washington in force all winter to secure a revision of the sugar schedule, will have an opportunity to address the Committee.

MR. COX, who has the Apportionment Bill in charge, is very anxious it should pass this session, as its enactment will save the convening together in extra session of twenty-two State Legislatures. Mr. Cox believes that the House will finally settle down on 307 members as a basis of apportionment. A table has been prepared, which Mr. Cox will present, with exact calculations, which shows that 307 makes the gain East about cancel the loss West, and the Southern loss little or nothing, while the whole number of unrepresented people in the United States will be only 273,918, while at 311 it is 433,286, and at 319 it is 593,668. Also at 319 the loss to the West is a third of the gain, a Congressman and a gain to the South of two thirds of a Congressman, while the East gains a third of a ratio and the South loses two-thirds, so that 311 and 319 and 301 may be discarded and all may yet unite on some number between 301 and 307. The worst number of all is 294, where 779,168 people would be unrepresented. The best is between 301 and 307. However, as New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee and North Carolina (all large States on voting in the present House) gain a member each at the stages between 301 and 307, it is believed that the last number will be the choice.

AN amusing feature in the Cannon-Campbell contest, over the territorial seat in Congress from Utah, has just come to light. It will be remembered that Governor Murray gave the certificate of election to Mr. Campbell, although Mr. Cannon had received ten votes to Campbell's one. When Cannon heard of this he took steps to serve notice of contest on Campbell, having thirty days under the law to perform this ceremony. Campbell left Salt Lake ostensibly for Washington, but never reached there. This put Cannon off the track. He was daily looking for Campbell so as to serve notice of contest, but Campbell came not. Cannon telegraphed to New York, Chicago, Omaha and Salt Lake, but could not get the run of Campbell's rapid movements. He accidentally heard of him at Circleville, Kansas, and telegraphed there, but the bird had flown. Becoming thoroughly frightened for fear the thirty days would expire, Cannon sent four notices of contests to Salt Lake, each to some particular friend, with instructions to hunt Campbell, regardless of expense. One man took the train east, and accidentally met Campbell at Green River Station, on the very last day of the thirty. Campbell was about to sit down to breakfast, in fancied security, but the man with four wives and a seat in Congress was too much for him. The gentleman was so injured by being disturbed that he could not eat no breakfast. Had he been able to avoid the service of notice of contest, Cannon could hardly have maintained his contest.

A PRIVATE letter from Elgin, Ill., gives some interesting statistics in regard to the construction, cost, and operation of the grand experimental sorghum enterprise of Commissioner Le Duc. It seems that he secured the ruins of an old distillery, and on the stone foundation erected a national, boarded structure, which became known throughout that section as the "Great Northwest United States Sorghum Depot." The report among the farmers is that this building, with a few second-hand engines, a feed pump or two, a crushing roller, and a vacuum pan, with other articles of Government machinery, cost $25,000. The farmers throughout that section were prevailed upon to plant sorghum and furnish the cane to this Government institution. The agreement with the farmers was that they were to receive the value of their cane on delivery, and the balance in ninety days. This limit of time passed long since, but nothing, so far as the farmers have ascertained, has been paid to any one in pursuance of this agreement. The syrup was shipped to Chicago by Major McDowell, the Superintendent of the sugar mill, and the farmers who furnished the cane from which this syrup was made are very anxious to ascertain the amount for which it was sold, and the amount which is to be turned into the Treasury, and the proceeds of the first year of this "Great Northwest United States Sorghum Depot." The station agent at Elgin also prefers a claim of $30 for board of the Superintendent and foreman, and a portion of this he also says is chargeable against Commissioner Le Duc himself for subsistence during times when he has inspected the important agricultural post. A certain question has also arisen in regard to the non-payment of drafts in the purchase money of the valuable collection of machinery alluded to above, with which the United States began this great sugar enterprise in the Northwest.

FERNANDO WOOD.—Mr. Wood's death was not unexpected by those in Washington who knew anything about his condition of health during the present session. A member of the Committee on Ways and Means says that when he left the committee room the last time it was apparent that he was in the grasp of death and would never come to more. His last congressional work was to conduct through the House the pending Retrocession Bill. It was a work nearing of him in his condition of health a fortitude quite characteristic of the man. His whole frame was racked with pain, sometimes excruciating in its intensity, but what or in the committee room or on the floor of the House he preserved the same demeanor and passive demeanor, and save in the rare instances when he was roused to anger by the impudence of his opponents, and the invidious comments of his friends upon his condition, no man would have suspected that he was in any other mood than that of the most robust health. Mr. Wood was a strong and fearless leader, and thought to the last that he could lead his followers to victory, as he had so often before, in the battle of tariff reform. Mr. Wood was a strong advocate of the rights of the people, and was ever ready to lend his assistance to any other man in the House who was fighting for the people against the combinations of monopoly and oppression

FISH CULTURE.

An Original Petition to the Legislature.

The following petition, original in its character, much out of the usual vein and therefore well worth perusal, and dealing with a matter of great importance, was presented in the Senate by Senator Gibson.

PETITION OF

An humble citizen upon an humble subject

To the Honorable the Legislature of the State of Michigan:

The undersigned, feeling duly thankful that his lot has been cast in a land where the inestimable boon of the right of petition is guaranteed to the humblest citizen, without regard to nationality, color, or previous condition of servitude, except Chinese, would with due meekness and humility respectfully represent that during the past eight years, there has existed in our state an organization known and designated as the "Fish Commission," which, though considered rather a "small fry" at the start, has grown to be a pretty large sized "sucker," having already extricated nearly a hundred thousand dollars from the public treasury, and is at this moment spreading its nets, throwing its lines, and balancing its spear-poles for twenty thousand more. And though it is claimed that this commission has "planted" within the waters of our State a very large number of very small fishes, your petitioner has made dilligent search—and though his naturally good eye-sight has been aided by the best spectacles he could buy at thirty-five cents a pair—he has hitherto failed to discover any profits or emoluments resulting from this large investment of the public money, except such as have enured directly to the benefits of the members of the aforesaid commission.

Therefore, in view of the aforementioned state of facts, though your petitioner would by no means insinuate that the honorable gentlemen who have from time to time voted these appropriations of money, can, in any just sense be considered "bullheads," he feels that there is just cause to apprehend that should this proceeding be continued the taxpayers of our State will ultimately begin to look upon the men who are "fishing" with their "long lines" around the shallow waters of our State Capitol for these periodical appropriations as a most dangerous species of "sharks."

But your petitioner would further represent that one of the most alarming features of this "scaly" subject is found in the published statement of one of the members of the "commission," that "out at Leoni, near Jackson, the eels we planted have grown and multiplied so rapidly that they have clogged the wheels of the water machinery," and though to the benighted vision of your petitioner this seems like a pretty large "fish story," and though he has not heard of "the wheels of any water machinery" in his part of the State having been "clogged" by the spawn of this "fish commission," he still deems it a subject worthy of the serious consideration of your honorable body—for it would be difficult to estimate the consequences when the "spawn" of our "fish commission" shall have "grown and multiplied so rapidly" as to have "clogged the wheels of the water machinery," and destroyed the usefulness of the mill streams of our State.

In view of the above described state of facts your petitioner would most respectfully but earnestly petition, request, solicit, pray and implore that your honorable body, before making further appropriations of money from the public treasury to further a purpose, the consequence of which may prove more disastrous to our State than rinderpest, hog cholera, Kansas grasshopper, Rocky Mountain locust and Colorado potato beetle combined, will cause a careful investigation to be made of the waters of our State, and that the subject be referred to a special committee, who shall sally forth armed and equipped with strong magnifying glasses, whose duty it shall be to follow the windings of our streams and the marshy margins of our inland lakes wherever the footprints of our fish commissioners may be found, and to carefully report the result of their investigations to the next Legislature, at which time it is barely possible that some of the "spawn" of the "Michigan Fish Commission" may have grown large enough to be visible to the naked eye. And your humble petitioner, with faith strongly resembling "a grain of mustard seed," will patiently wait and humbly pray.

LOST AND FOUND.

I lost the brook as it wound its way,
Like a thread of silver lost;
Thro' greenwood and valley, thro' meadows gay,
'Twas hidden away from view.
But I found it again a noble river,
Sparkling and proud and free,
Wider and fairer, growing ever,
Till it reached the boundless sea.

I lost the tiny seed that I sowed
With many a tender fear
And vainly waited, through sunshine and cold,
For the young green trees to appear.
But safely, after many long days
The blossom and fruit will ripen,
And the reapers on high the sheaves will raise,
For a joyful harvest home.

I lost the life that gave to my own
For one short summer day
And fired it left me to wander alone.
And the years drag slowly away.
But I find it [illegible]
Though not as I sought and hoped,
For the music of [illegible] have passed and gone,
I shall see it first and clear.

I lost the voice of the dearest one,
That once came floating by,
I have listened and [illegible] many a sound
For the tones that [illegible] stirring
But I know in the [illegible] of heaven it shall Ever be my own dear [illegible]
I shall hear it [illegible] with its harmony [illegible]
My soul with glad delight.

I lost the love that made my life
A joy [illegible] to bear
Only vainly I sought [illegible]
Of the stormy, raging sea.
But deeper and purer I know it exists,
Beyond my wildest dreams
I shall find it again within the gates
Of the garden of paradise.

I shall lose this life, it will disappear
With its wonderful mystery;
Some day it will move no longer here,
But will vanish silently.
But I know I shall find it again once more,
In a beauty no song hath told.
It will meet me at the golden door,
And round me forever fold.

HOUSE TO LET.

"Heigho!" yawned Mr. Ellicott, the real estate agent, as he looked out of the window at two old women, a market cart, and the postman. "Times are dull—fearfully dull. Never have known 'em stagnant so since I was in the business. A list of houses to rent and for sale that would suit anybody, at prices that are absolutely scandalous, as far as cheapness is concerned, and no demand for 'em—literally none!"

And Mr. Ellicott lighted his cigar, arranged the "To Lets" a little more attractively in the window, and shook his head mournfully at the big ledger on the high desk.

But just at that instant in which he drew a sigh, indicative of the extremest despondency, a stout, middle-aged gentleman, with a felt hat, an umbrella under his arm, and square toed boots, walked into the neat carpeted office. The agent slipped nimbly off his chair, laid down his cigar, and assumed the business smile.

"What can I do for you?" he said, rubbing his hands, and scenting a brown stone sale, or a red brick exchange, at the very least.

"My name is Jones," said the stout stranger.

"Happy to see you, Mr. Jones," simpered the real estate agent, rubbing away harder than ever.

"And I want to rent a respectable house in a pleasant neighborhood," added the gentleman. "I am sick of boarding, and I intend to take a house and go to house-keeping."

"Certainly, by all means," said the agent, beginning briskly to flutter over the leaves of his book. "We have, I am happy to say, a number of most eligible residences here, which can hardly fail to meet your requisitions."

"Give me a list," said the old gentleman.

"I mean business," said Mr. Jones.

"I am glad to hear it," said the agent.

And scarcely five minutes more had elapsed before the middle-aged gentleman, with the alpaca umbrella, and the square-toed boots, was where a fat lettered "To Let" hung conspicuously beside the door.

Miss Pamelia Peppermint was just taking her hair out of crimpin the front third-story apartment as the bell sounded its hollow tocsin through the house.

"Joanna," said Miss Pamelia, over the stairs, "look out of the area window and see who it is."

"It is a gentleman, ma'am," Joanna answered, in a shrill whisper, "in a superfine broadcloth coat and a new umbrella."

"Come to answer the advertisement," said Miss Pamelia, quickly. "Show him into the parlor, Joanna and tell him I'll be down directly."

She settled her crimps once again, pinned a petite ribbon bow in her back hair, gave her forehead a firewell dab with a powder puff, and read over for the last time, a paragraph in the morning's paper, which ran as follows:

"Wanted—By a young lady of refinement, a position as housekeeper, by a gentleman of means. No trifflers need apply to Miss P., No. [illegible] Nixon street."

"Dear me," said Miss Peppermint, "how my heart flutters—for surely this is a crisis in my life. How often does a housekeeper eventually become something nearer and dearer to a gentleman of susceptibility and appreciation! I hope he is fond of poetry."

She crossed the threshold with a tripping step. To her surprise, the apartment was empty.

"Where is my Joanna [illegible]" she murmured in dismay.

"Here ma'am," faltered the maid. "I think he's an escaped lunatic—for he's walking all around the back kitchen, and peering into the stationary wash tubs, and muttering to himself like everything."

"Ah!" said Miss Peppermint, with a satisfied smile. "Very natural—quite so. He means to find out what kind of a practical housekeeper I am. A-hem, here he comes. Run, Joanna, there is stove-blacking on the bridge of your nose and a hole in your stocking. A-hem! Please to walk in, sir," to the middle-aged gentleman, who appeared on the threshold, with his spectacles tipped over the bridge of his nose, and his umbrella carried sword-in-fashion, under his arm. "I have the pleasure of addressing—"

"My name is Jones, said the gentleman brusquely. "You are the lady who—"

"Who advertised?" "Yes," said Miss Peppermint, with a smiling inclination of her head.

"Then I wonder at you!" ejaculated Mr. Jones.

"Sir!" said Miss Peppermint.

"As old as the hills," said Mr. Jones, "all out of repair. Fifty years old at the very least."

"Sir!" ejaculated the lady, more astounded than ever.

"Truth is truth," said the gentleman. "Not even decently painted."

"Rheumaticky, and full of fever and ague" energetically added Mr. Jones. "But forty dollars a month!"

"Only twenty," said Miss Peppermint, faintly.

"I wouldn't consider the question at any price!" roared Mr. Jones. "A tumble-down old ruin!"

"Sir, you insult me!" cried the spinster, bristling up.

"Then, madam, you shouldn't obtrude your damaged wares before the public!"

"I was never so abused before in my life!" faltered Miss Peppermint wringing her hands.

"It's high time somebody spoke the truth," said Mr. Jones.

"Leave the house, sir!" said Miss Peppermint.

"And welcome," said Mr. Jones, putting his hat belligerently on the side of his head and shouldering his umbrella [illegible]

"But mind, let me advise you, the next time you buy a house to let—"

"But I haven't any house to let!" ingenuously interposed Miss Pamelia.

"Eh?" said Mr. Jones.

"And never had," sobbed the poor bewildered.

"Isn't this house to let?"

"Yes, but it isn't mine, and I've nothing to do with it."

"You said you advertised."

"So I did," said Miss Pamelia, with difficulty keeping back her hysteric tears. "But I wanted a position as housekeeper, and—"

The middle-aged bachelor stood aghast, the full horror of his situation gradually breaking upon him.

"Madam," he said, "I beg your pardon—"

"Sir," said Miss Peppermint, "there has been an unfortunate misapprehension all around."

"I was alluding to the house, ma'am, when I used those unfortunate adjectives," explained Mr. Jones. "I hope you don't think, ma'am, that I could apply them to a lady?"

"I am a solitary female," said Miss Peppermint, retiring behind her handkerchief, "and I find myself compelled to earn my bread in a genteel way. You couldn't recommend me to any single gentleman in want of a capable housekeeper, could you?"

"N—no ma'am, I couldn't, that is just at present," stammered Mr. Jones. "But if I hear of one I will certainly let you know. Good morning."

And he bolted out of the door in a state of cold perspiration.

"What a fool I've been!" said he to himself, as he strode along the windy April streets, wiping his forehead with a red silk handkerchief. "I'll go back to Mrs. Budget's and engage my rooms there for the next ten years."

And so he did.

Nobody answered Miss Pamelia's advertisement; no one rented the desirable mansion No. [illegible] Nixon street.

Mr. Ellicott, the real estate agent, declares that business is duller than ever, and Mrs. Budget, the boarding-house keeper, says to her daughter:

"Whatever has come to Mr. Jones, I don't know, but he's as docile as a lamb, and hasn't found fault with his roast joint in a month."

"Wonders will never cease," says Miss Budget devoutly.

The Printer and his Types.

Benjamin F Taylor, the printer-poet, says: "Perhaps there is no department or enterprise whose details are less understood by intelligent people, than the art preservative" the achievement of the types.

Every day, their life long people are accustomed to read the newspaper and find fault with its statements, its arrangements, its books, to plume themselves upon the discovery of some negligent editorial type that gets into a frame and stands upon his head; or of some [illegible] or two out of the process by which the newspaper is made, or the mysterious mills and the thousands of forces necessary to its compilation. They know little and generally care less.

They imagine, in the course of a wonderful indeed, when they speak of the fair white carpet, even to thought to walk on of the days that flittered on the back of the loom yesterday.

But there is something more wonderful still. When we look at the hundred and fifty-two little boxes, somewhat shaded with the touch of inky fingers, just compose the printer's case, nothing less, except the ink of the types, as quickly as they take their place in the growing line, we think we have found the marvel of art.

Watching how many familiar sentiments there are in these little boxes, how many gems of poetry and eloquence the printer can make here and there, if he had only a little time to work by; how many faces in a small handful, how much truth in a box.

Now he picks up the scattered elements, until he holds in his hand a stanza of "Gray's Elegy," or a melody upon Grimes' "All Buttoned Up Before." Now he sets "Puppy Missing," and new "Paradise Lost;" he arrays a bride in "small caps," and a sonnet in nonpareil; he announces the languishing "live" in one sentence—transposes the word and depicts the days that are new and "cold" in the next.

A poor jest ticks its way slowly into the printer's hand, like a clock just running down, and its strain of eloquence marches into line letter by letter. We fancy we can tell the difference by hearing by the ear, but perhaps not.

The type that held a wedding yesterday are used to a burial to-morrow—perhaps the same letters.

They are in the elements to make a world of. In so little are a world with everything in grand beautiful machinery, as rich in color and as imperishable as nature's flowers, just gathered with—gone this—[illegible] for all time.

Robert Burns' nieces, Agnes and Isabella, reside near Ayr, Scotland. "They live," says a tourist, "in a little low stone cottage with thatched roof. Everything indicates a lack of this world's goods, yet is neat and artistic, with flowers and pictures all about the room. They entertained us with talks about their uncle, and showed us some letters which have never been published, and with true Scotch hospitality offered us some cake of their own make—made of Australian flour which they had had in the house two years, and three kinds of wine—one of their own make from grapes grown on their own little yard."

Racing on the Rail.

"The local train on the Pennsylvania railroad, which starts from Jersey City at 7.30 in the evening, leaped out of the station like a charger that had been spurred. An old gentleman in the smoking-car said "Bless me!" with what little breath remained in his body, and recovering his equilibrium and his cigar, held fightly on to the back of the seat in front of him. The telegraph poles flew by like spinters; the contiguous shop fronts seemed a solid streak of light, and a cold sort of sweating called down from the locomotive upon the trembling wind. In all instant the train was flying through the limits of Jersey City, passing thick-clustered boarding houses which are half tenement houses, half pig-pens and all scum, and out of the right hand windows passengers beheld a cluster of fiery sparks whirling about the precarious roofs of these, falling upon areas of tar and dry shingles, etc., and flying in at open windows and [illegible] astonished citizens at their mantelpieces like a fierce hail. Passengers held their breath and thought the end was had and the engineer had dropped off. But after a minute as the train trembled and leaped along the open flats, a passenger whose long beard was blown back over each shoulder, observed with something of glee in his quiet tones, "Now there'll be fun," and waved his hand in a stately way to the northward.

"Another train was coming along in the same direction upon the track of the Delaware & Lackawanna. It also was bounding under a mad impulsion, and the smoke-stack upon its locomotive was emitting a shower of sparks. Passengers then saw that there was a race.

"The track of the Delaware & Lackawanna Road makes a sweep southward just beyond Jersey City, and for the rest of the distance to Newark runs parallel with and only a few feet separated from the Pennsylvania track. When the passengers caught sight of the rival train it was thundering down the curve, seemingly bent on striking their own at right angles. But in a minute it turned, and the two locomotives were dashing toward Newark neck and neck.

"For a moment neither drew a jot ahead of the other. It was an unpleasant and yet fascinating sensation. The coaches flew straight as a die, swerving not a hair's breadth either to the right or the left. Striking the roadway only at intervals, diacellating the iron rails with fierce, sharp blows, and seeming bent on striking them in twain. Passengers looked at one another out of their respective windows in an alarmed way, as if wondering which would be annihilated first. The Delaware & Lackawanna fireman threw open the door of his furnace and gorged it with coal. In response a million sparks flew from the funnel and danced backward, mingling defiantly with another million out of the funnel of the sounding Pennsylvanian. Both locomotives blazed and roared, and the wheels of the cars flying after them ground terrible music out of the iron track and struck fiery blows at every bound. So near together were the two trains that the passengers could almost have shaken hands across. But they were rival passengers now and glowered at one another under the fiery veil which the locomotives threw backward.

"When the Delaware & Lackawanna fireman had fed his beast, a louder roar came down from the Pennsylvania iron horse, and it was known that the other fireman had done likewise. The change for a moment was hardly perceptible. It seemed as though, after the manner of racing beats, first one locomotive and then the other was making mortal spurts, drawing for the instant a lot ahead, and then falling a jot behind. Like the logician, to the passengers in the Pennsylvania train, their flying rival seemed at intervals to fitt into the air under its terrible impulses, and to fly unsupported sheer and clear above the track. The whole locomotive shook and quivered as if a power had been let loose in it which was on the point of bursting it asunder, and the funnel rocked and shared with the mortal agony which drew upward through it from the tortured interior. But through the whirl of sparks grew thicker and made a marvelous canopy over both trains passengers saw that the massive Pennsylvanian was steadily drawing ahead. A window of the last Delaware & Lackawanna car dropped out of sight, and another and another, until the whole car was gone. This performance was gradually continued until the rear car of the Pennsylvanian was on a line with the Delaware & Lackawanna's locomotive.

"Then the driver of the latter waved his hand after the manner of a defeated man, and let the steam whistle from his vexed boiler through all the scales, while the fireman again threw open the door of the furnace, and the Delaware & Lackawanna train dropped instantly out of sight. The heavy Pennsylvanian followed suit. The trail of sparks from her funnel suddenly ceased, her passengers let go the seats in front of them, and she entered Newark, in another minute, after the staid manner that is usual to her kind.

"During the race the Pennsylvania locomotive ran at the rate of more than a mile a minute. It had eight cars to draw, while the Delaware & Lackawanna engine had four. A brakeman on the Pennsylvania train said those Delaware & Lackawanna fellows were awfully concreted, and had to have it taken out of 'em. He added that what had just happened was the prettiest sight in the world."

A correspondent gives the following recipe for a paste for use in making scrapbooks: "Dissolve a piece of alum the size of a walnut, in a pint of boiling water; to this add a couple of tablespoonfuls of flour made smooth in a little cold water, and a few drops of oil of cloves, letting the whole come to a boil. This paste will keep months. Put up in glass jars used for canning, or well cleaned blacking-bottles. Use a half-inch bristle brush, which costs but a few pennies. This paste is handy, too, for tomato parades.

Words of Wisdom.

Have a good conscience and thou shalt have joy.

The glory of a good man is the testimony of a good conscience.

He who can at all times sacrifice pleasure to duty approaches sublimity.

A good conscience is able to bear very much, and is very cheerful in adversity.

A man's own good breeding is the best security against other people's ill manners.

Thank God! our troubles come like song, cheery sideways; there is always shelter.

A bold front against misfortune will often enable a man to hide over a flight place and put ruin to flight.

Would we but profit by the experience of others we should have the royal road to the paths of wisdom.

Philosophy triumphs easily enough over past and future evils, but present evils triumph over philosophy.

We must not speak all that we know, that were folly; but what a man says should be what he thinks, otherwise it is knavery.

Faith dies when charity ceases to feed its flame, and strength decays just in proportion as cheerful hope fails to quicken the energies of the mind.

Life is disciplinary, and those who are ground in the mill of adversity make better spiritual material than those who are disciplined only by plenty and success.

If a man be gracious and courteous to strangers, it shows that he is a citizen of the world, and that his heart is no island cut off from other hearts, but a continent that joins them.

True joy is a serene and sober emotion; and they are miserably out that take laughing for rejoicing; the seat of it is within, and there is no cheerfulness like the resolution of a brave mind.

It is a most important lesson, and too little thought of, that we learn how to enjoy ordinary life, and to be able to relish our being, without the transport of some passion, or the gratification of some appetite.

As the dress of one who has passed several hours in a garden retains somewhat of the perfume of the flowers, so a person who spends much time in the company of the good will exhale from his person the odor of virtue.

The river Jordan is not the only pleasant water that empties itself into a dead sea. Some of the "sweetest currents" of our lives are fated to end there. Let us look to it that we are not borne thither on their limpid bosom!

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Poisonous Gases in Houses.

Typhus fever, diptheria, and other fatal diseases, are often caused by sewer gas which forces its way through the water-closet and open fixed basins into the house. Another dangerous gas is that emanating from stoves.

Unless there is a free circulation and an adequate supply of pure air in a bedroom occupied by one or more persons, the volume of air enclosed becomes very rapidly exhausted of its life-preserving properties, and proportionately charged with gases of an opposite character.

The mere breathing of the air takes from it the oxygen, and returns a volume of carbonic acid gas, which speedily destroys an undue proportion to the former, and renders the atmosphere absolutely dangerous to life.

But there are other sources of danger that too frequently fail to be recognized by generally careful housekeepers. These are the pipes leading from water sinks and fixed wash-stands, to the house drain, and which often serve as the channels by which the most deadly of poisons, sewer gas, enters dwellings.

It does not matter very much whether the poison enters the hallway from a water-closet, the kitchen from a sink, or the bedroom from a fixed wash-stand basin, it will attack the sleeper in his bedroom.

Thousands of fatal cases of disease that are believed to be the result of contagion are really due to sewer gas poison brought directly into bedrooms by the ways we have suggested.

Another dangerous gas that must be guarded against in bedrooms is that emanating from stoves. During cold weather these stoves are much used as heaters in sleeping apartments, and through ignorance of the properties of carbonic acid and vegetable matter, the gas given off by them fills the air with poison.

It is much better to sleep in a cold bedroom than in one heated by a defective stove. Open fireplaces are the safest, and serve as the best means of ventilation.

The Rev. Dr. Prime, editor of the New York Observer, has been spending some months on the Continent of Europe, and making special inquiry into the drinking habits of the people. In ten months, during which he visited the chief cities of France, Germany, and Italy, where the universal tipple is light wine or beer, he saw just one person drunk. In one city of 55,000 inhabitants there was but a single arrest for drunkenness during forty days. The reverend doctor reaches the conclusion, which is not a discovery by any means, that drunkenness is the exception in the wine drinking countries of southern Europe.

There is a brilliant future in store for the boy who, when he sees a ton of coal coming to his house, rushes to his mother, asks for the peppermint, rolls on the floor and groans, and says he has the cramp.

Did the prophet Isaiah ever eat at a railroad station? It certainly looks so, for how could he have described it so literally if he had not: "And he shall snatch on the right hand and be hungry; and he shall eat on the left hand, and shall not be satisfied."

"Now villain, come with me before the judgment seat of Heaven!" cries the hero of a play by M. Dugue, of Paris, as he hurls the heavy villain into the car of a balloon, cuts the rope and begins a duel with him with bowie-knives as they shoot upwards to the skies.

"If it was not for the years couched upon his head," wrote the obituary writer; and then he got up and howled when the type-setter rendered it, "If it was not for his ears, he could have stood upon his head."

One of the discoveries made by the latest Arctic explorers is that the length of the polar night is one hundred and forty-two days. "What a glorious place that would be," says Brown, "in which to tell a man with a bill to call around the day after to-morrow and get his money!"

A Sunday-school boy only six years old was asked by his teacher "why they took Stephen outside the city to stone him to death." The little fellow was silent for a moment as though absorbed with the problem, when brightening up suddenly he replied, "so that they could get a better crack at him."

A lover who had gone west to make a home for his "Birdie," wrote to her—"I've got the finest quarter-section of land (160 acres) I ever put my foot down on." Birdie wrote back—"Suppose you buy another quarter-section, John, so we can have a lawn around your foot." John "made a home," but Birdie never was the mistress of it.

A paper of Middleton, Conn., tells the following story: "A farmer in the neighborhood, having placed a pan of milk in a spring of water to cool over night, went there the next moring and found, it is solemnly asserted, instead of the pan of milk, a large bull-frog sitting in contemplative mood upon a roll of fresh butter. The sole explanation is that the frog had jumped from the water into the pan, and in trying to extricate himself had, by diligent and continuous strokes of his long legs, churned the milk into batter."

A sour mind is a great evil. It is so to him who has it. It embitters his life. It turns the light of life into darkness, its joys into sorrows. It is evil in its effects on the happiness of others. It breeds dissatisfaction and fault finding with every person and everything. It croaks of evil, not to remove or remedy it, but because it loves to croak. It pulls down, but never builds up. In the family, in the social circle, in the church, it is always complaining, detracting, destroying usefulness and happiness. It is difficult to conceive of a misery and worthlessness more pitiable than that of a man possessed of such a spirit.

She Licked Him.

"Now, Mrs. Roosmyer," said his Honor, "what do you want a warrant for?"

"On account he shall be locked up und oud the vay so I put smearcase on my own bred, py shimmeny! Vot you dinks?"

A Bashful Young Man.

This morning, says the Virginia City Chronicle, a strong, healthy-looking young man entered the county clerk's office and gazed respectfully around. Harry Thompson, the chief deputy, stepped up and blandly inquired of the stranger if he wished any business transacted.

The young man when spoken to started back as though dreading an assault, but he soon recovered himself and said in a whisper:

"Yes, sir—I called to see—I wanted to have a little talk—how much is it anyhow?"

He had a soft cloth hat in his hand, and kept turning and twisting it about as he spoke; his face had grown terribly red; and big drops of perspiration were standing on his brow.

"What is it you want?" asked the clerk.

The man looked at him pleadingly, but struggled in vain for utterance. His eyes bulged out, his face grew redder, and the veins in his neck and on his forehead swelled till they looked like great knotted cords. He twisted the hat convulsively, and then straightened it out again, and then he pulled the new lining out of it, and dropped it on the floor. When he picked it up all dusty from the floor he wiped his steaming face, leaving a dirty streak after each wipe. Finally, it seemed as though the poor young man had quite recovered himself, for he looked cheerfully around the room, and then turning to Mr. Thompson, remarked in a pleasant and confidential tone:

"Well, it is real warm for this section, isn't it?"

"Very warm, indeed," replied Mr. Thompson.

"It is a good deal better than we have it down in the valley, and somehow I've always had just the other notion about it—that the higher up you got the cooler—"

"Yes," said Mr. Thompson, "but about that business of yours?"

Another fiery blush that looked as if it would scorch the collar off his neck followed this remark, but the stranger held up bravely. He leaned on the desk in an easy careless sort of way, and began to toy with a mucilage brush.

"The fact of the matter is I wanted to—"

Here he paused again and meditatively jammed the mucilage brush into the ink-stand.

"What the devil are you doing with that brush?" asked the clerk somewhat impatiently.

"Oh, by George—excuse me!" stammered the man, as he withdrew the brush, spattering the ink all over the clerk's shirt bosom, and, as if it had been molasses dripping from his fingers, thrust the brush into his mouth, daubing himself with ink and mucilage, and then bolted from the office.

"That's about the worst case I have seen," remarked Mr. Thompson, as he wiped a big ink spot from the starboard side of his Roman nose.

"Crazy as a bedbug," said Alderman Orndof, who had been an interested spectator of the whole scene. "You ought to send a policeman after that man."

"No, he's not exactly crazy," replied Thompson, "I knew from the start that he wanted a marriage license, and I thought I'd have a little quiet fun, but he's broke the line now and gone off with the hook."

Taking Things Easy.

There is no small art in taking things easy, says Harper's Bazar, so long as we can suffer annoyances in this breathing world, saying as little as possible about them, and making no parade of our martyrdom. If making a fuss and rendering everyone else about us uncomfortable in any way abated the ills that flesh and spirit are heir to, there would be some slight excuse for the folly and selfishness; but since we cannot escape tribulations of one kind or another, fretting only aggravates them. Either let us be silent and endure, or take arms against our woes, and by contending end them. In general he who makes no ado is supposed to have no troubles of his own, or an organization so inferior that it is not jarred out of tune by the rough usage of fortune; to make the very worst of every trouble, big or little, from the fracture of a teacup to that of a skull, is considered by many a proof of great sensibility and depth of character, while he who pursues the other course, who endures reverses, slights, injuries, pin-pricks of annoyance, agues of anxiety, physical and mental neuralgias, without reporting them to every passer and howling his grievances into the ears of every listener, is often spoken of as of fibre too coarse to feel acutely and suffer keenly. "It is his temperament," we are told. "He takes nothing to heart." Some one, however, wittily advises us, "Never tell your misfortunes; nobody likes to have unfortunate friends;" but in spite of this warning many seem to think that disaster itself is a recommendation to favor; that they deserve a bonus for serving as a target for fortune's arrows; and they are not seldom acutely jealous lest some other should be deemed their superior in suffering. In the meantime everyone has a welcome for the person who has the good sense to take things easy. It is comfortable to be able to agonize over one's own trials, to a mind at leisure from itself. The person who can go without her dinner and her spring suit and not advertise the fact; who can lose her purse and keep her temper; who makes light of a heavy weight, and can wear a shoe that pinches without any one being the wiser; who does not magnify the splinter in her finger into a stick of timber, nor the mote in her neighbor's eye into a beam; who swallows her bitters without leaving the taste in other people's mouths; who can give up her own way without giving up the ghost; who can have a thorn in the flesh and not prick all over her friends with it—such a one surely carries a passport into the good graces of all mankind.

Young man, before beginning to read medicine or law, ask yourself if it would not be better to read agriculture and practice it. Are not the so-called learned professions crowded to their utmost capacity? Is there not a more inviting field open before you as a learned farmer, than as a learned lawyer, divine or doctor? To attain distinction in any of these professions you will, most likely, have to go through the starving process for several years, and to labor harder than any farmer labors. Think of these things. If you don't think of them now, you will think of them often before you make a living by your profession.

—A correspondent gives the following description of San Rossore, a stock farm near Pisa, which belongs to the King of Italy. He says that the stables contain some 800 mares and stallions, mostly thoroughbred, or pure Arab. Among other horses, there is the Arab stallion which King Victor Emmanuel rode at the battle of Palestro, and a black which was the favorite charger of the present King. There are 200 camels kept on the farm as substitutes for draught horses, and the correspondent says that they do the work very well, and are not at all affected by the climate, though it is colder than that to which they are accustomed. There is a royal residence upon the property which extends to the sea shore, and it was here that the late King often came to shoot and hunt, casting off all State etiquette, and leading the life of a hardy farmer.

If one note in the organ is out of key or harsh of tone, it mars the whole tune. All the other reeds may be in harmony; but the one defective reed destroys the sweetness of all the rest. In every tune this reed makes discord somewhere. Its noise jars out in every other note. And so one sin destroys the harmony of a whole life. A girl or boy may be obedient, filial, industrious, and honest; but ill temper is a jarring reed that touches every grace with chill and discord. Let every affection and every thought, and every word and every action, be right: then there is music in the life.

American Ball-Blue has quickly found its way into our laundries. It is absolutely pure, harmless, and imparts the most beautiful hue to the washing.

HOME MADE VINEGAR.—Steep a pint of good firm corn in two and a half gallons of water for two or three hours, and then put it on the fire and boil it until the corn shows signs of bursting. Take it off before the grains do burst and strain off the liquor, adding half a pound of sugar to each gallon. Place the cask, or the jug containing it, in the sun, and in three weeks or a month the liquor will be converted into good vinegar. The writer tried this receipt, using molasses instead of sugar in one case, but the sugar makes far the best vinegar. It is both good and cheap. Large quantities can be made by using proportionate quantities of corn, water and sugar.

Henry Van Nortwick, of Toledo, Ohio, says:—A friend prevailed upon me to try an "Only Lung Pad," and I obtained immediate relief from a racking cough. I know the Pad helped me.—See Adv.

Harper's Magazine contains a very pretty Indian song, which, translated into our language, reads as follows:

Fire fly! fire-fly! bright little thing,
Light me to bed while my song I sing;
Give me your light as you fly o'er my head,
That I may merrily go to my bed:
Give me your light o'er the grass as you creep,
That I may joyfully go to my sleep.

Come little fire fly, come, little beast,
Come, and I'll make you to-morrow a feast;
Come, little candle, that dies as I sing,
Bright little fairy bug, night's little king:
Come, and I'll dance as you guide me along:
Come, and I'll pay you, my bug, with a song.

March winds! The sudden changes and high winds, which prevail in March makes a bottle of Down's Elixir always necessary to have at hand. It is a sure cure for sudden colds and all lung diseases.

The marked superority of women over men is on few points more remarkable than in their superior powers of smelling and tasting. A woman will detect the faintest odor of tobacco when a man, even though a non-smoker, often fails to discover any symptom of it. As with smell so with taste. Women are marvelously acute and fastidious in the matter of sauces and all flavoring ingredients.

The Indianapolis style of arranging religious news can hardly be recommended to young journalists. Here is a Herald excerpt: "Rev. J. S. Reager, the hero of a steamboat idyl on the Ohio, with a buxom widow as party of the second part, has scooped one hundred souls into his church during the first year of his pastorate in this city. Reager is a rusher.

"Before we married," said he, "she used to say bye-bye so sweetly as I went down the steps!" "And what does she say now, asked a friend. "Oh, just the same—buy, buy."—"Oh! I see; she exercises a different spell over you."

TO ADVERTISERS.

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.

IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St., New York.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair, and red hair, to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed, while to brush, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff, and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 3, 1881.

Gen. Garfield will be duly and legally installed as occupant of the White House to-morrow. The newspaper cabinet makers can then take a rest.

The Senatorial dead-lock in Pennsylvania has been broken by the election of John I. Mitchell, and now everybody is trying to find out who Mitchell is. Ask Don Cameron. He can tell you.

The lower house of the Arkansas legislature has by a very large majority, proposed a constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale of liquor in that State. What does all this mean? While the South is manfully meeting the questions of educational and temperance reform, Michigan is halting between two opinions, and threatening to take a step backward.

The administration of R. B. Hayes will pass into history at high noon tomorrow, and no one will shed any tears over its departure. He went into office by fraud, and will retire despised by his own political friends.—The cloud upon his title cast a dark shadow over his entire administration and his lack of personal fitness for the position has rendered his four years' term a signal failure.

The Republican State Convention did a good job last week. Judge Marston does not rank with Cooley and Campbell, by any means. Still he has served one term acceptably and was entitled to a renomination. Jas. F. Joy and Gov. Blair, are excellent nominations for regents. These men cannot be pocketed by either the Douglas or Rose factions. They can be relied upon to work for the real interests of the University; they will be above the dictation of political bosses, or the machinations of church and society cliques at Ann Arbor. Now let the Democratic convention, next week, place an equally strong ticket before the people, and the welfare of the University will be assured.

The death of Senator Carpenter, of Wisconsin, will remove from the Senate one of its brightest lights. He was a man of great breadth of character and strong native ability, and at the same time a man of remarkable modesty and retiring disposition. A pen picture of the Senator in the Philadelphia Times ranks him with Sumner, Calhoun and Choate in forensic and legal endowments. Had he possessed the talent for party management and self aggrandizement equal to Conkling or Blaine, he would have stood higher than either of them in the councils of his party. It is very doubtful whether Wisconsin can fill his vacant chair with another such a man.

Among the candidates mentioned by the Republicans for Circuit Judge in this judicial district is Hon. Andrew Howell, of Adrian. The Adrian Press suggests that the Democrats support him also:

"We are of the opinion that it would not be out of place for the democrats to support Mr. Howell for that office. We believe that he would appreciate the compliment, and that it would be an evidence of the willingness of the democrats to ignore party in the selection of a judge."

We arise to second the motion. Mr. Howell is one of the best read lawyers in Southern Michigan. He is well fitted by natural temperament and by his previous legal training to fill a position on the bench with honor and credit.

An association has been formed in New York which is called the National Anti-Monopoly League. This movement has been undertaken by men who are neither alarmists nor visionary enthusiasts, but who believe that there is danger in the undue growth of corporate power, and if we are to limit it in the future it is high time that some action was taken.—This movement has been started none too soon. The shadow of the great corporations is already darkening the horizon, and the time is coming when the people must unite, without distinction of party, if they would protect their interest against the extortions of overgrown monopolies. The people are anxious to inform themselves on these questions. Any documents and tracts which may be issued by the League will be eagerly sought for and willingly read.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

That's What's the Matter.

Adrian Times, (Rep.)—Gen. Mahone has chosen a seat on the republican side of the senate chamber. That fixes his physical status, but the thing people really want to know is what his political status is going to be.

Settled at Last.

Detroit Post & Tribune, (Rep.)—About the only thing for congratulation in the settlement of the Pennsylvania senatorial deadlock is the fact that it is at last settled. The Keystone state should have sent a stronger man to the senate.

No Fuss Over It.

New Y. Herald, (Ind.)—One more planet is reported to have appeared to the professional star-gazers, but no particular fuss is made about it. The sky is getting filled up very rapidly, and there seems to be no place for the stars to emigrate to when they feel crowded.

Badly Overcrowded.

N. Y. Tribune, (Rep.)—There are indications that Washington is going to be badly crowded during the inauguration ceremonies. This is not strange. If all the gentlemen who have been "mentioned" for a place in the Cabinet are present there will be little room for anybody else.

The Bank Scare.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—How excited the banks are over the funding bill is shown by the fact that up to date twenty-four or twenty-five out of two thousand have given notice of a reduction of circulation. These handful are the influential pessimists bearing down upon Hayes to let the bill die.

An Undoubted Slander.

N. Y. Tribune, (Rep.)—A brute of a man who has evidently been jilted both at Mentor and elsewhere, says the women have begun to visit General Garfield in delegations and singly and that they tire him more than the men do, because he can't get rid of them so easily. It is an undoubted slander, and if the name of its author is forwarded to this office it shall be sent to the next Women's Suffrage Convention for comment and rebuke.

He Will Be Rewarded.

Philadelphia Times, (Ind.)—Something extremely handsome is to be done for Pennsylvania, the Washington gossips say, to testify the party joy over the one saved where ninety-nine might have gone astray. Mr. Cameron takes full rank again as boss, and will lay down law to Garfield on the Cabinet business in the same manner as his imperial brother Conkling. The shadow of the coming hand of fate points to Oliver. He is to be rewarded in some way, but as the augurs have filled all the places perhaps Mr. Oliver's billet will be—secretary of the exterior.

The Cabinet Entire.

New York Sun, (Ind.)—Our arrangements are all complete to lay before our readers the complete list of the Cabinet appointments, without an error or a guess.

We make a leading point of accuracy, and estimate very lightly mere wild speculations.

Consequently, we shall not undertake to give this complete list until Gen. Garfield shall have made it up, which will be on or about the fourth day of March, 1881.

Plans for Cabinets are as notoriously changeable as the weather itself at this season of the year.

Garfield's Correspondence Classified.

Albany Evening Journal, (Rep.)—The postage on the letters mailed by General Garfield at Mentor since his nomination has been $304, an equivalent postage for about 10,000 letters.

It's a fair guess that the 10,000 letters which drew out these 10,000 replies from General Garfield can be classified as follows:

Suggestions in regard to the make up of his Cabinet	2,354
Reminders that the writers were the first man that nominated him	438
Hints in regard to the conduct of the administration	1,000
Pieces of advice from Private Dalzell	789
Regrets that the writers were unable to accept his kind invitation to visit Mentor	0
Applications for office	5,404
Miscellaneous	71
Total	10,000

Admits of No Apology.

N. Y. Herald, (Ind.)—The obstructive tactics of the republican members when Mr. Cox attempted to put the Apportionment bill on its passage yesterday admits of no decent apology.—There may be occasions when parliamentary filibustering is justifiable, but this is not such an occasion. It is only when some great question is involved or some important right put in jeopardy that it is excusable to obstruct and block legislative action by depriving the majority of its regular and ordinary control of the business of the House. The apportionment of members under a new census is, properly viewed, a mere matter of routine depending on a simple application of the rules of arithmetic. The constitution requires that the assignment of Representatives shall be in proportion to the population.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Fanstine Guittero, one of the Mexicans implicated in the murder of Colonel Potter, was taken from the jail at Albuquerque and lynched. He is the fourth who has been hanged without trial for this crime.

The Catholic orphanage at Scranton, Pa., was burned Sunday evening. The bodies of seventeen children have been recovered. The victims were locked in a room by a sister.

A Cleveland dispatch asserts that Garfield's memorandum book contains only thirteen names from which to select a cabinet. A Washington telegram states that thus far only Blaine and Allison are certain of portfolios. It is said that the public have overlooked one element that is sure to be recognized in the cabinet—the union army. General James B. Beaver, of Pennsylvania, is named as the representative of the crippled veterans. John Jacob Astor is the only applicant for the mission to Paris or Berlin.

Included in the reports of the storm which now prevails over the northwest are several predictions of ruin to winter wheat.

The people of Union, Mo., made a fruitless attempt to lynch Fritz W. Haase and Catherine W. Hoffart, charged with murder, and the accused have been taken to St. Louis for safe-keeping.

The death is announced of Thomas D. Jones, a sculptor of Columbus, Ohio.

A train on the Louisville Short Line road struck a land-slide near Independence, Ky. A brakeman had three ribs broken, and six passengers from Louisville were injured.

A sensational weekly of New York announces that Whitelaw Reid will next month marry Miss Jennie Mills, a daughter of D. O. Mills, of the Bank of California.

The legislature of Nebraska, which closed its session on Sunday morning, fixed the price of liquor licenses at $500 to $1,000 per year, and provided that saloon-keepers must give bond in $5,000 and be responsible for civil damages. A bill was also passed making it a misdemeanor to treat a man to alcoholic drinks.

The superintendent of schools at Little Rock, Ark., reports that many pupils carry loaded pistols and dangerous knives.

Two of the murderers of Editor Conkling, in Socorra, N. M., have been arrested in Ysteta, Texas. They will probably not reach Socorra alive.

The public debt reduction for February will probably be about $19,000,000.

Abe Greenwood, the Keokuk hunchback, who murdered Leffler in cold blood, has gone to the penitentiary at Fort Madison for eight years.

Holders of the bonds of the defunct city of Memphis are willing to compromise for half their dues. A bill has passed.

Charles Merrill, of China, Me., killed his mother in a barn, concealed her body in the hay until frozen, then cut it into pieces, part of which he burned, burying the remainder in the snow.

A Gambler who had the nerve to open a faro bank in New York on Saturday night was within three hours surprised by the police, who broke the door and put the proprietor and twenty-five inmates in the station-house.

An assemblage of five thousand persons in New York witnessed the start of nineteen contestants, Monday morning, for the O'Leary belt, now held by Hart, the negro.

A man named Merkey, who had his hand injured in the encaustile tile works at Indianapolis some time ago, has brought suit against the company for $10,000.

What is known as the Earl gang of burglars, of Syracuse, comprising six persons, have gone to the penitentiary for terms ranging from five to sixty-five years.

The last spike has been driven on the Little Rock and Texas road, connecting Little Rock with Pine Bluff.

Preparations were made at Fremont, O., for the execution of John Welsh, who murdered Antony Gottsacker. Just ten minutes before the time set for making the hangman's noose, an attorney reached the jail with a reprieve for one week. The prisoner has a guard of militia.

The execution of John Vonderheide took place at Shelbyville, Ky. A blacksmith who undertook to cut the shackles from the murderer's feet found that the irons were sawed, and could be kicked off. He threw his slippers to the reporters, and defied them to state that he died in his boots.

E. C. Hayden, who was hanged at Windsor, Vt., for murdering his wife, requested permission to examine the gallows, and instructed the hangman how to pinion his arms. In the calmest manner possible he declared himself innocent.

William H. H. Russell, a lawyer of St. Louis, while writing at his desk, was approached stealthily by Philip Brady, who dealt him a blow on the head with a hammer. A second blow was warded off, and the assailant was arrested. Brady was a former client of the injured man.

In the trial of Colonel Cash, the duelist, at Columbia, S. C., a jury of whites has been secured, the defense objecting to each negro drawn. The testimony showed that before the firing Cash declared that he would surely kill Shannon.

Lottery and policy dealers in New York have actually been forced to suspend business. Robert Dunn was fined $1,000 and sentenced to the penitentiary for six months for selling lottery tickets.

The national banks last week deposited with the treasury, to retire notes, $11,116,199.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher has canceled all lecturing engagements, and contemplates a series of revival meetings at Plymouth church.

John Hunter, who was recently elected receiver of taxes at Philadelphia, has given testimony before an investigating committee to show that the gas-consuming public of that city is being defrauded to the amount of $1,000 per day by the gas trust.

The monetary stringency in New York is the most intense experienced since the remarkable collapse of Jay Cooke & Co., the rate rising to 1 per cent. per day and 6 per cent. per annum. Secretary Sherman produced an electric effect upon the stock market by announcing that he was prepared to redeem the bonds lately called, paying interest to the date of presentation. The treasury will also purchase bonds with the millions of greenbacks deposited by banks to withdraw their circulation. Secretary Sherman states that the changes in progress affect the money market only in New York, where the deposits must be made.

An Albany dispatch announces that State Senator William H. Robertson will be named for collector of the port of New York.

The spreading of rails threw a train from the track near Longview, Tex., causing serious injuries to several persons.

Matthew H. Carpenter, Senator from Wisconsin, died in Washington, on Thursday morning, of Bright's disease. He was born at Moretown, Vt., in 1824, and adopted by Governor Dillingham. For two years he was a cadet at West Point, whence he went into the law office of Rufus Choate, in Boston. He married the daughter of his foster-father and removed to Wisconsin, settling at Beloit in 1848, removing to Milwaukee ten years later. At the outbreak of the war he left the Democratic party and became an active Republican. In 1869 he was elected to the United States Senate, and became president pro tem. of that body. In 1879 he was chosen to succeed Senator Howe. For the past year he has been much broken in health, and his death was simply a surrender to exhaustion. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, and was attended by officials representing all the departments of the government and the leading foreign legations. The Episcopal service was read by Rev. Dr. Paret. Senators Conkling and Logan headed the pall-bearers, and the funeral procession comprised two hundred carriages. The remains were deposited in Oak Hill vault, to rest until the Senate can arrange for the official funeral in Wisconsin. He had an insurance on his life of $65,000.

The usual stuff about Gould's conquests is at hand, the statement being that he is to group the Reading with the Lackawanna and Jersey Central coal roads, and enjoy a monopoly of mining.

A. S. Mitchell, a veteran journalist of St. Louis, died at Hot Springs, Ark., of pneumonia.

Henry D. Cooke, one of the old firm of Jay Cooke & Co., died at Washington of Bright's disease of the kidneys. He was born in Ohio, was prominently connected with the shipping interests of the Pacific coast, and is credited with having devised the Pacific Mail Steamship company. He was governor of the District of Columbia while it was under territorial government.

Rev. Benjamin Speke, who drowned himself in England, was a brother of the African explorer.

President French, of the New York police board, marshaled all the captains of the force at the Central office and informed them that the evidence necessary to convict gamblers must be obtained, under pain of summary dismissal.

Immediately after being emptied of a large audience, Nordheimer hall, at Montreal, took fire beneath the stage, and was totally destroyed, causing a loss of $50,000.

The Fletcher Place church, at Indianapolis, took fire during service, from a defective furnace, causing a damage of $10,000.

The court-house and county records at Greenwood, Ark., have been reduced to ashes.

There is considerable excitement in New York over the story of Miss Marion Calisch, who disappeared from her home in Hoboken on January 19. She claims to have been detained as a prisoner in a residence until Wednesday evening, when she was handed out of a coach on a Fifth avenue corner and told to go home.

Friday was a day which will be memorable in the history of Wall street. The stock market opened weak, and early in the day prices declined from 1 to 7½ per cent. About noon, Assistant Treasurer Hillhouse received instructions from Secretary Sherman to purchase at par and accrued interest, $10,000,000 of uncalled 5 and 7 per cent bonds of 1881. This caused a temporary buoyancy, and prices recovered 1 to 4½ per cent, but during the afternoon there were reactions and rallies until the last hour, when the trading was enormous, and the downward movement so rapid as to amount almost to a panic. The decline for the day ranged from 1 to 14¾ per cent. Money was stringent, the rate for call loans being 6 per cent, ⅜ to 1½ per cent per diem added; even at this figure solid mercantile houses were unable to obtain the amounts they required. Exchange fell so low that foreign transactions were virtually suspended. The purchase of bonds, by order of Secretary Sherman, threw $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 on the street and loosened the money market, and the arrival of several millions more from outside cities almost completely restored confidence. At the close of business on Saturday there had been a sharp recovery in stocks, and money was comparatively easy.

James G. Blaine will not resign his seat in the senate until that body has been organized.

The officers of Castle Garden say that immigration will be largely increased by the cutting of steerage rates, but that it will be of the cheap and nasty order.

Jacob Oferee, who died at Napierville, Ill., was reputed to be the possessor of considerable money. A search elsewhere proving fruitless, the coffin was opened and bills to the amount of $310 taken from the lining of his vest.

Four lottery dealers in New York have been fined and sent to the Penitentiary.

In the Whittaker court-martial, before a large party of wives and daughters of officers, Lieut. George B. Burnett laid down upon an iron bedstead and tied himself precisely as he found the colored cadet, afterward releasing himself easily.

Mary Monahan, an inmate of the Chicago small-pox Hospital, aged 15 years, has given birth to a fine healthy boy. This is the first event of the kind in the history of the institution.

The sale of liquors at the military posts and stations has been prohibited.

A mail train on the New Jersey Midland road was wrecked by a broken rail, two cars being thrown down an embankment of twelve feet and set on fire by the overturning of the stoves. Several persons were injured, but none fatally.

The Great Western glass works, at St. Louis, were damaged $10,000 by fire.

The liquor question is receiving considerable attention in the Southern legislatures. General Sam Carey, of Ohio, will stump South Carolina in behalf of a prohibitory law. Many local elections in the latter State have been carried by the temperance people.

John C. Moore, a real estate broker of Indianapolis, killed himself in his office with a revolver. His brother destroyed himself at Lafayette, four years ago, by means of a guillotine so constructed that a burning candle severed a string and let fall the axe.

Mouse, a $10,000 trotter owned by Harry Ihnes, of Brooklyn, was stolen from his stables by a man who was allowed by the stableman to mount him.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Go and hear the Quintette Club.

YESTERDAY was the beginning of lent.

MRS. WRIGHT SADLER had a fall last week and broke her ankle very badly.

STRONG & MCNAIR have a new card this week. They begin their spring trade in good season.

UNIVERSALIST sociable at Mr. Albert Hyde's, next Friday afternoon, and evening. All are cordially invited.

JOHN R. CLARK is still confined to his house by reason of the injury he received several weeks ago. He is having a serious time of it.

THE Democratic county convention will be held at Adrian next Saturday to choose delegates to the coming State convention at Lansing.

TECUMSEH now has two railroad stations; the regular depot near Evans creek, and Chicago street. The latter proves to be a great convenience.

MAYOR STACY, of Adrian, has been very sick for several days past. His friends think that all danger is now over and they look for his speedy recovery.

THE Michigan Tile makers are to hold a convention at Jackson on Tuesday, March 15th. H. Brewer & Co., of this village are among the signers to the call.

TECUMSEH is gaining the reputation of patronizing nothing but minstrel shows. We hope this may be proven false by a large crowd at the Quintette Club concert.

B. J. COLLER, of Adrian, has rented space in the post office building and will keep a full supply of sewing machines and machine supplies. See his announcements elsewhere.

A FULL sized Mellon was this morning gathered from its parent vine on the farm of H. Haines, 2 miles west; weight ten pounds; this Mellon belongs to the female persuasion.

THE Democratic State convention will meet at Lansing on Tuesday next March 8, to nominate candidates for Justice of the Supreme Court and two Regents of the University.

HORATIO KEYSER, who has been dangerously sick with pneumonia, is, we are happy to say, now on the mend. His disease has been broken and his recovery is now confidently looked for.

AT the Universalist church next Sunday Rev. H. Shepard, pastor, will discourse in the morning on the "Childhood of Jesus," and in the evening on "Science to be subjected to religion."

THANKS to our old friend, H. L. Hayward, for a late copy of the Longmont (Col.) Ledger. From a perusal of the editorial columns we should say that he occasionally had a "hand in the pie" himself.

MERRITT & STETCH have got their new planing machine into position and it runs like a top. They have already done several jobs with it. Their lumber trade is beginning to open up, and the indications are favorable for a large spring trade.

THE Grand Litta Concert will take place at Adrian on the evening of March 14th. The Adrian people were not responsible for the former postponement, as it was occasioned by Litta's sickness. Trains on the Jackson Branch will be held until after the concert.

BEN REYNOLDS left town last Saturday with seventy five head of stock to attend the big stock sale at London, Ohio. He sold the entire lot at good prices and got back home last evening. Why not have monthly stock sales at Tecumseh and keep this business at home?

CAPT. M. P. LONG, the Ex-Register of Deeds, has opened an office over Mixer & Aldrich's store, in Adrian.—He will buy and sell Real Estate on commission; examine titles at the Register's office, and do such other business as may fall in his line. His old friends are requested to call on him.

WE understand that the old firm of John Whitenack has been merged into the new firm of Whitenack, Bordine & Co. The business will be continued at the old stand, and will be conducted by the same men as before. They will deal in general hardware, tinware, stoves and all other things in the hardware line. The new arrangement will enable the firm to increase their business. Success to them.

THIS is what the Boston Saturday Evening Gazette has to say of the celebrated Quintette club of that city:

"We consider, musically speaking, the Quintette club the highest representatives of the present advanced state of art we can send to the west. To the individual members of the organization it may be a still higher gratification to know that their friends esteem them as highly in their private character as gentlemen, as in their more public one as artists."

Mendelssohn Club Concert.

The Mendelssohn Quintette Club of Boston will give one of their celebrated concerts in the Opera House next Wednesday evening, March 9th, 1881.

This reknowned Club whose record of more than thirty years of successive triumphs is known to lovers of music throughout the land, is the most perfect combination of its character on this continent and is in the front rank of similar organizations in the world.

The following extract is taken from an extended criticism in the Detroit Post and Tribune of Feb. 12, 1881:

"It is not to much to say that one of the most delightful concerts ever given in this city was the one listened to last night by a large audience at Harmonie Hall. It is almost needless to write much in detail of the performance; the simple announcement that the Mendelssohn Quintette Club and Miss Marie Nellini, gave it, explains its charms. The temptation is to be extravagantly enthusiastic with the recollection of the individual performance fresh in mind. The program opened with a movement, from Mendelssohn's Quintette in Bb. op. 87, and closed with the Turkish March from Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens." There is much one would like to say about such an organization as this. Something more is expected of its members, than special or general proficiency. They must possess a thorough knowledge of their art and an aptness and intelligence in the exhibition of it that the ordinary musician never reaches. The Quintette Club has invariably proved itself equal to the task of satisfying high expectations, but we are of the opinion that the organization is doing better work this year than ever before."

Let the people of Tecumseh and vicinity appreciate this rare opportunity of listening to some of the best selections of classical music executed by musicians who are masters of their art. The following program will be given on Wednesday evening:

1. Quintette in Bb., op. 87, Mendelssohn Allegro-vivace.
2. Scene and Air, "Bel Raggio," from Semiramis, ... Rossini.
   Miss Marie Nellini.
3. Concerto for Flute, on La Sonnambula, ... Tershack.
   William Schade.
4. Quartette, entitled, "The Miller's Pretty Daughter,"..... Raff.
   a. { The Declaration.
   b. { The Mill.
5. Fantasie, on Hungarian Airs, for Violin,..... Ernst.
   Isidor Schnitzler.
6. Romance for Clarinette,..... Ryan.
   Thomas Ryan.
7. Scherzo from Quartette No. 2, Op. 90, ... Rubinstein.
8. Solo for Violoncello on "Le desir," ..... Servais.
   Frederick Giese.
9. Song, "Oh, loving heart, trust on," ..... Gottschalk.
   Miss Marie Nellini.
10. March from the Ruins of Athens, ... Beethoven.
    (Arranged for Quintette.)

Birth Day Party.

On February 25th, there assembled at the residence of F. A. Dewey, in Cambridge a company of his sons and daughters numbering 22 of his children all of the name of Dewey. It was as genial and social a company as ever graced a farmer's home. The head of the family took great pride in the fact that not one of them has ever learned the use of tobacco, whiskey, or profane language. There were several useful and costly presents given by the sons and daughtert to the father and mother, which will be admired and treasured until time is no more. One of the sons, a merchant of Alpena, came by stage 113 miles to reach the railroad and be at the old home on his father's 70th birthday. It is 54 years last September when a boy of 19 summers walked into Lenawee county, an entire stranger to every one in the territory, there to make a home. The beautiful contrast after a lapse of more than a half century have wrought afford an admired and cherished review. What was then the unbroken forest, is now luxuriant and fertile fields with princely mansions on every section.

The day was passed with a bountiful dinner, many pleasant songs, not omitting auld lang sine, and a beautiful historic poem was read composed for the occasion by one of the sons recounting glimpses in the life of the father from earliest childhood down to the present day.

LONGFELLOW'S DAY.

Last Friday was observed in all the departments of our public schools, as Longfellow's day. For several weeks past the pupils have been studying the life and writings of Longfellow. This work has not interfered in any way with the school work. The special object has been to interest pupils in good literature, and the interest and enthusiasm manifested last Friday were very encouraging. The exercises of Friday are regarded as an incident only, in this study of literature. It was really a review day in which a part of the work of the past two months was exhibited.

In the Central Building the high school departments were assembled in the east room on the second floor. On the north blackboard the word "Excelsior" was neatly written in old English with colored crayon. On the south board was a large and beautiful flower and a vine, executed with white crayon. On the west board was Longfellow's name and birth in colors and some flowers in white.

The following was the high school program:

Recitation—The Builders—Herbert McNair.
Essay—Evangeline—Mary Wood.
Recitation—Excelsior—Elmer Hendershot.
Quotations from Longfellow.
Music—The Day is Done—Wallace Peters.

The departments of the first floor were assembled in the east room. On the north blackboard was a fine white crayon drawing of the American eagle, bearing a streamer containing the words:

Thou too, sail on, O ship of State;
Sail on, O Union, strong and great.

On the south board was a banner with that strange device, Excelsior. Some fine lettering was seen upon the west board. In this room the following was the program of exercises:

Rec.—The Day is Done—Allie Gray.
Exercise.

In each room numerous quotations from Longfellow's writings were written upon the board. The writing, printing, and drawings were the work of the pupils.

In the East Branch the grammar departments were united in one room, the primaries in another. The boards were decorated with drawings, writing and printing. The pupils seemed to be very much interested in the exercises, which passed off pleasantly. Every one who heard the pupils in this building sing was convinced that this branch of our school is a success. The programs and further descriptions of these exercises will have to be omitted on account of space. Similar exercises were also held in the North and West Branch buildings. Quite a number of our citizens manifested their interest by attending the exercises.

MR. C. T. CHAPIN, of the Cadillac News, dropped into our sanctum last Saturday. He spent Sunday and Monday shaking hands with his old Tecumseh friends, and he had a pretty busy time of it. He is doing well at Cadillac, has a nice office, and a good patronage, as he secures the lion share of the county official printing.

THE MASQUERADE.

The orchestra worked hard to make the masquerade given under their auspices at the opera house last Friday evening a success, and they were paid for their exertions. At the time announced for the grand march the gallery was closely filled with spectators. But as on similar occasions, the maskers were tardy in their arrival, and in order to keep the impatient spectators from pounding the floor of the gallery to pieces, Prof. Weddles played a fine piano solo. At length the orchestra struck up the grand march and forth from the dressing room came the revelers. They presented a gay appearance, many beautiful and brilliant costumes forming a relief to the ridiculous and odd. The nun, sacrificing her sacred vows to the present hilarity, swung the devil on the corner till his heels cracked in mid air, while the squaw thrilled the ears of Uncle Josh with her cries, and made the tarpaulin succumb to the giddiness of the waltz. The offspring of Ceres scattered husks at the feet of Uncle Sam and festive fairies employed their charms upon stately personages. All nationalities and most of the peculiarities of mankind were represented, even to Baxter's big shoe. The prizes for the best sustained lady and gentlemen characters were given to the school boy and girl, impersonated by George Smith and Fred Burlingame. At eleven the masks were removed and many spectators then came upon the floor.

There were persons present from Adrian, Monroe, Manchester, Dundee and Clinton. The committees contributed greatly to the pleasure of the evening by their services. The dancers left for their homes about 4 o'clock, having enjoyed a pleasant party. The orchestra was also well pleased with the receipts.

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

If you want a complete abstract of title. Call on A. L. Bliss.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 160 acres and one of 80 acres in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 125 acre farm 1¾ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

A. L. BLISS,
Examiner of Titles, Loan and Land Agent, Adrian Mich.

Auction Sale.

Frank N. Smith will sell at Auction on the farm owned by Chester Clark, situated one mile East of Doty's school house in Raisin, on Thursday, March 10, 1881, at 12 o'clock M., the following property: 1 span of work Mares, 3 Cows, (one ¾ blood durham,) 3 calves, 5 hogs, 4 tons timothy hay, combined reaper and mower, lumber wagon, double buggy, single buggy, 75 good sheep, gale plow, Curtis plow, double shovel, triple shovel, five-tooth cultivator, scotch harrow, hay rack, grain cradle, scythe, double harness, single harness, corn-planter, forks, rakes, &c. Terms as usual. Abe Hanford, auctioneer.

WE understand that Mr. T. E. Gridley, manager of Appleton's American Cyclopedia for Central Michigan will make his headquarters at Tecumseh for a few weeks. We see by the Eastern press that he is highly spoken of as a gentleman of business capacity and literary culture. He is selling the 1876 edition, which is a thorough revision and re-compilation of the original work, together with the annuals since that time. We have a complete series of the first edition and know it to be a work of very great value. We have no doubt that Mr. Gridley can dispose of a large number of these Cyclopedias in Tecumseh and vicinity.

WE called at N. M. Sutton's farm the other day and were surprised to see the working of his new portable saw mill. There is a large lot of logs in the yard and he is turning out about 2500 feet of sawed lumber per day. The mill machinery and engine both work very nicely.

The auction sale of W. S. and W. J. Osborn which was to take place this afternoon, has been postponed on account of the weather, until Monday next, March 7.

Adrian Times: Mr. W. F. Baxter, of Tecumseh, was one of the delegates from this county to the late state convention. He claims to have been "boycotted" there. But lest some people may think that our young friend seriously suffered from the process, we hasten to explain that he was compelled to sleep on a cot, to which a boy showed him. Boy, cot; see? Frank himself is responsible for the atrocious pun, and is duly penitent therefor.

Our Army of Idlers.

"How can I tell about a thing I dunno nothing about?" exclaimed a badgered witness in one of our courts. "How can I do anything I know nothing about?" exclaim—in deeds, if not in actual words—the vast army of idlers to be found in all large cities. It is useless to talk about finding work for them; they don't know how to do anything. They belong to that class who have never learned to do anything well. Many have never had an opportunity; some had no inclination and others had not perseverance to carry them through. Whatever may have been the cause, the result is the same; they have no qualification to command success. Twist it about as you may, you will find this one fact constantly staring you in the face. There they are, always [illegible], a vast army of incompetents [illegible] excuse themselves by reviling [illegible], and complaining of bad [illegible] chance, they finally come to [illegible] sense of their helplessness and feel some little ambition to succeed at something, they are usually too late. Habit has become too strong for them, or circumstances are no longer favorable to their success. They have not sown good seed in their youth; what reason have they to expect to reap a rich harvest in their old age? This is the fatal mistake. We have but one youth; if that be wasted, how can we hope for wealth or influence in later life? It is to be feared that little can be done to better the condition of the horde of helpless idlers who are now infesting the cities; but much can be done to prevent our youth from becoming recruits to this vast army. They at least are not beyond help. Let us do what we can to save them and make them useful and industrious members of society. Let us educate them and teach them self respect. Once give them an insight into their own capabilities and show them the golden reward awaiting their patient endeavors; then they will never become afflicted with that great curse of humanity, idleness. Ignorance and idleness go hand in hand together. Overcome the one and you rout the other.

Black Jews.

The Jewish World gives some interesting details as to the social and religious customs of the black Jews in India:

The majority are natives of the Malabar coast, where, especially in the city of Kotschim, they reside in considerable numbers. It is said that they are the descendants of the Jews who were sent to India by King Solomon to capture elephants for his use and to work in the gold mines; and that their skins, in the course of three thousand years, have entirely changed color, so as to make it impossible to distinguish them from the rest of the natives. They know little Hebrew, that language having almost died out among them. Their mother tongue is the so-called Hindi, which is used in their scriptures and prayer-books. They also possess a bible, which is not printed, but written. Of the holidays they only keep the Sabbath and the Passover, the Day of Atonement being entirely unknown to them. In the preparation of their food they differ from other Jews, as, during their three thousand years' separation from the rest of their co-religionists, nearly all their original customs and manners have died out. They live separately, to this day, from the white Jews, as the latter do not regard them as actual descendants of the Jewish race. As answer to this the colored Jews boast of their letters of freedom given by an ancient king of India, and another one of King Tshandrackupta, who lived in the time of Alexander the Great. They do not call themselves "Jews," but "Sons of Israel," and they maintain that they are in possession of a number of autograph prayer-books written by the patriarchs. They live in great poverty and are very ignorant, earning their living by working in the field and by day labor.

How to Increase Property.

It is seldom advisable for women who have a sufficient income to attempt its increase by exchanges or investing it in business. But there are many whose incomes are inadequate, and who are under the necessity of increasing their incomes or leaning on their friends. Supposing a woman in these circumstances is of an independent spirit, and resolves not to depend on the assistance of friends, my first suggestion to her would be to resolve that, come what may, her present property shall not be diminished. And if to what she has she can, by self-denial and earnest effort, add something from time to time, the tide will at length turn in her favor. She may hear it whispered, "Molly Stark has taken up teaching, has become a governess, is copying law papers—quite a tumble." Well, Mollie Stark is not beholden to such, nor ever will be.

Saving and laying up is the habit that succeeds. It seems to be in the blood of some families of both sexes alike to be independent. Cest what it may of present self-denial, they will set the ball rolling that will grow into a round competence. How much better and happier is such a life in the long run than a life of supineness and semi-dependence.

A resolute woman is pretty sure to find one way or another to do that which will be remunerative, and her prospects for working out her pecuniary salvation are better than those of the average man in the same circumstances. Of course, her success all depends on losing no time and saving and laying up her earnings.

Health Notes.

Dr. George H. Napheys, an eminent physician, says: "A particular kind of exercise is to be recommended for those whose chests are narrow, whose shoulders stoop, and who have a hereditary predisposition to consumption. If it is systematically practiced along with other means of health, we would guarantee any child—no matter how many relatives have died of the disease—against its invasion. It is voluntary inspiration. Nothing is more simple. Let her stand erect throw her shoulders back, and the hands behind; then let her inhale pure air to the full capacity of her lungs, and retain it a few seconds by an increased effort; then it may be slowly exhaled. After one or two natural inspirations let her repeat the act and so on for 10 or 15 minutes, twice daily. Not only is this simple procedure a safeguard against consumption, but, in the opinion of some learned physicians, it can cure it when it has already commenced. A correspondent of an English medical journal furnishes the following recipe as a new cure for consumption: Put a dozen lemons in cold water and boil until soft (not too soft), roll and squeeze until the juice is all extracted, sweeten the juice enough to be palpable then drink. Use as many as a dozen a day. Should they cause pain or looseness of the bowels lessen the quantity and use five or six a day until better. By the time you have used five or six dozen you will begin to gain strength and have an appetite. Of course as you get better you need not use so many. Follow the directions and we know you will never regret it if there is any help for you. Only keep it up faithfully. We know of two cases where both of the patients were given up by the physicians, and were in the last stages of consumption, yet both were cured by using lemons, according to the directions we have stated. One lady in particular was bedridden and very low; had procured everything that money could procure, but all in vain, when, to please a friend, she was finally persuaded to use lemons. She began to use them in February, and in April she weighed 140 pounds. She is a well woman to-day, and likely to live as long as any of us.

The blood cannot properly perform its functions when loaded with impurities, because it is thick and sluggish; and every person needs at times something to cleans and quicken the vital current. Dr. J. C. Ayer's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla meets this want perfectly, and his discovery of this compound ranks as important in preserving the blood in a healthy condition as does that of Wm. Harvey in demonstrating its circulatory action. Nothing else so vitalizes, purifies and enriches the blood as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is a perfect blood and nerve food. It never disturbs the stomach, but greatly assists and promotes the digestion and assimilation of all nutriments, and increases their power to sustain and nourish the body. In renovating the blood it clears and quickens the intellect, and thus gives to both mind and body the power of long sustained, arduous and successful effort.—Corning, N. Y., Journal.

Lord Deas had some strawberries sent to town recently from his estate of Pittendreich. His lordship had fixed his eye upon two particularly large ones in a basket. The next time he saw the basket they were gone. He enquired of his butler what had become of them and the butler thinking he was accused of abstracting the strawberries, replied somewhat sharply to his lordship. A quarrel took place, and the butler got his leave. The butler brought an action against his lordship in the Small Debt Court for wages and board wages. His lordship sent a message to the Sheriff-Substitute to postpone the case till he could get off the bench and appear in person to defend it. The Sheriff agreed, and his lordship duly appeared and pled his own case so successfully that the Sheriff assoilzied him from the action, and did not even give the butler the benefit of the wages he had earned up to the date of the dismissal. It turned out that the favorite strawberries had been appropriated by Lady Deas and her daughter.

—"Don't tell me nothing of the kind," said she, vigorously, to her husband, who was reading the account of a recent cremation service to her; "it is only a vile device for getting an unfortunate wife away secretly to a lonely spot and killing her, and burning up the remains, so that her husband can frisk off and marry some one else, and no one ever know nothing about the murder. I know all about it; besides, 'tisn't possible to get a furnace as hot as they say it was." "But, my love," said her husband, "here it is in the papers, that the furnace was heated to a heat of 1,400 degrees." "Fourteen hundred idiots," said she contemptuously; "and any child with a nose—I mean, with an eye on its face—could have told you, by just looking at the thermometer, that it can't be any hotter than 212 degrees!"
